Thumbs Up!

... to Burger King and Anthony's Pizza for their terrific discounts this month. It is unexpected and much appreciated.

... to those responsible for repairing the short driveway to the gym. Although it was not a "must have," it sure was nice to roll across when it was completed.

... to Kim Yarnes and her staff for doing an excellent job helping the post office to get all the mail out to the community. Thanks, Kim!

Thumbs Down!

... to the new island arrival who, after exclaiming that Emon Beach had the most beautiful water he'd ever seen, proceeded to flick his cigarette butt into the water.

MIT hosts RMI interns fifth year in a row

Students learn about hardware, networks, troubleshooting

By Sheila Gideon
Managing Editor

Out of 16 potential candidates, two impressed enough to be chosen for the Massachusetts Institute of Technology/Lincoln Laboratory information technology internship. Bobby Andrew and Richard Reyes participated in the fifth year of the program offered at U.S. Army Kwajalein Atoll this summer. The 10-week internship offered by MIT/LL focuses on networking and computer system administration. It is supported by the MIT Community Outreach. Both Andrew and Reyes are students at the College of the Marshall Islands in Majuro. The objective of the program is to provide instruction, mentoring and motivation to encourage student interns to pursue further education and subsequent employment in the Marshall Islands in a computer or science-related field. Reyes will be attending Full Sail University in Florida studying software engineering and game design. Andrew will continue his Cisco courses and work his part-time job as a computer technician at the Majuro Post Office.

The internship is taught by instructor Ranny Ranis, who has a reputation of being hard on the students, but for their own good. Ranis' approach is a hands-on one; the students work in a computer lab and are given the opportunity to learn about and experiment with computers and networking equipment. They take apart and rebuild computers, configure networks and are exposed to various troubleshooting scenarios. One of Ranis' favorite teaching tools is to have the interns build a network in the morning and then break something while they're at lunch; when they return, they have to troubleshoot the problem and then fix it. Ranis challenges the interns and tries to get them interested in different types of technology. In the end, the tough love paid off. The student interns said while they learned the foundation of information technology at school, they learned even more by receiving hands on training with state of the art networking equipment during the 10-week program.

Besides working in the computer lab, the interns were able to take several field trips to see information technology in the real world. Both Andrew and Reyes' favorite part of the 10-week internship was their trip to Roi-Namur and their introduction to radars and how they function. They visited ALTAIR and TRADEX, seeing first-hand what they've been learning at school and during their internship. They also took a trip to the ATSC weather station and were given a tour of the weather radar. USAKA air traffic controllers toured them through air traffic control system fundamentals. They were also given introductions to telemetry and databases by several MIT/LL staff members.

At the end of their 10-week internship, both students presented a summary of what they learned to an audience including USAKA and RTS command, MIT/LL staff members and ATSC representatives. At the end of the presentations, Kurt Schwann, MIT/LL site manager, presented Andrew and Reyes with certificates of completion, which makes them eligible for a $1,000 scholarship toward continuing education.

Makeover on Meck Island

Ribbon cutting ceremony held for new dining facility, MWR tent

Article and photos by Sheila Gideon
Managing Editor

A major renovation to Meck Island has taken place over the last five months to prepare for increased usage. Temporary housing and support tents look similar to the dome housing occupying the northern end of Kwajalein. The project has been ongoing since March and final touches are being completed.

One of the major projects that took place was the reactivation of the dining facility, which has not been in use since 2006. Since that time, Meck workers have relied on boxed lunches brought from Kwajalein. Now, they will be provided hot meals three times a day. The project, headed up by Food Services Manager Dave Nobis and his support staff, Meck Operations Manager Kelly Furgeson, Project Lead Brad Pinnell, Range Project Manager Dan Eggers and U.S. Army Kwajalein Atoll Food Services Chief Warrant Officer 3 William Duff, consisted of gutting out the entire building and installing new appliances, electrical and plumbing. The new and improved dining facility is comparable to the operation at Café Pacific on Kwajalein. After five months of hard work, a ribbon cutting ceremony was held Aug. 9, and the first hot meal in six years was served to Meck workers.

A ribbon cutting ceremony was also held for the opening of the various temporary tents erected. This included temporary housing, complete with restrooms and showers. The Morale, Welfare and Recreation tent built for support staff was erected in less than one month. Kwajalein Range Services Community Activities Manager Kim Yarnes and Recreation Manager Mandie Morris spent months researching and accommodating requests regarding the MWR facility. The tent was revealed complete with a kitchen area, two 60-inch TVs, two pool tables and a ping pong table. Seating areas will also be added. The Meck gym was also supplemented with a variety of equipment including weight and cardio machines.

In total, 23 individual projects were carried out on Meck. It was a joint effort between Chugach, KRS, Missile Defense Agency and USAKA staff.

"There was not a group or department that [did] not put some kind of support [in] for this program," said Furgeson.

New kitchen equipment was brought to Meck to make the dining facility operational for the first time in six years.

The Meck dining facility is comparable to the operation on Kwajalein, expected to serve three hot meals per day.

Phase 4, August 2012: Air conditioning is set up in each tent. Flooring and materials are placed inside.

Phase 5, August 2012: Last minute details are looked into. Tents are close to being ready for use.

SPOTLIGHT

FURNITURE WAREHOUSE

Article and photos by Catherine Layton
Associate Editor

Even though U.S. Army Kwajalein Atoll is a temporary living situation, we all like to make our spaces feel like home. Whether our abode is a dome, hard housing or bachelor's quarters, we personalize our spaces by hanging pictures and art or displaying our bric-a-brac. Nothing, though, is like furniture to make the space comfortable and organized. Kathleen Bonham, Furniture Warehouse lead, and her crew August Koniske, Balario Anjain and Carlmai Titus, help island residents feel right at home with the wide selection of different pieces and their prompt service.

Whenever a request comes in to the warehouse, Bonham is able to check the status of the piece requested, and can usually give a timeline for delivery during the phone call. For some of the more popular items there are waiting lists, and Bonham will keep track when pieces become available and contact residents to set up delivery.

New residents will arrive at their quarters to find essential furniture and a hospitality kit that will get them through until their household goods arrive on the barge. New hire sponsors will contact the warehouse to set up delivery of the kit. Within seven days of arrival, someone will perform an inspection to determine the inventory, and residents receive a printout. Additionally, any subsequent transaction, pickup or delivery, will generate a yellow receipt. "It's always good for you to keep that yellow copy, even if it's for years and years," said Bonham. Other copies will be kept at housing and at the warehouse.

Eager sponsors may try to get new hires on waiting lists for the newer furniture prior to their arrival on island. "Residents can't be put on the list until they are here and in the system," said Bonham.

Occasionally, there are other factors that dictate the schedule. "Bachelor quarters deliveries and pickups that are on the second and third floors require a Gradall (forklift), which we try to get every Friday," said Bonham. There is the possibility of equipment issues as well, for instance when the step van may need maintenance.

A couple other things to keep in mind are the Furniture Warehouse inventories are for residential units only. Any office furniture is handled almost like office supplies, and will need to be ordered through individual departments. Also, don't trade your government furniture with another resident. Whenever any Furniture Warehouse transaction occurs, your inventory is tracked for your tenure here. When it is time to PCS, you will be responsible for your inventory.

Bonham doesn't hold back any furniture. If it's available, and it has been requested, it will be delivered, with only a few possible issues. Some very large pieces just don't fit in some spaces, such as in BQs. Also, there is a limit to the amount of furniture you can have in any one residence. Bonham keeps track, and will let you know if the amount of furniture poses any safety issues. The best way to find out what is available is to check out other peoples' homes. Get inspired, and give Bonham a call to make your space your home away from home.

Carlmai Titus, left, Balario Anjain and August Koniske are the muscle for the warehouse. They deliver, assemble and pick up furniture for the residents of Kwajalein.

Balario Anjain, left, and August Koniske remove a dresser from the truck for set up and assembly at a residence.

Sgt. Maj. Prioleau visits the Child Development Center

Sgt. Maj. Roderick Prioleau sits with kids from Karen Tyson's 3- and 4-year-old class at the Child Development Center Aug. 10. He was able to participate in some of the activities of the day, including Bingo, but was primarily able to chat with the children about their center, families and living on Kwajalein. He asked what the kids would like to be when they grow up and "an Army guy" was the most popular response.

Ri'katak student program celebrates 25 years

Hourglass Reports

The Ri'katak student program at Kwajalein Jr./Sr. High School is an opportunity for our Marshallese neighbors to further their secondary education by attending high school at KHS. The program began in 1987. Several Ri'katak students that graduated from KHS recently have gone on to accomplish many great things, from working as a mechanical engineer or attending and graduating from U.S. military academies. While KHS provides the Ri'katak students with an education, they still need help from the community to make it through school each day.

The Ri'katak Lunch Program has been ongoing for several years. It is in place because the students do not have the opportunity to return home for lunch as the island resident students do. The lunch program requests voluntary donations each year from the community so each student may have a nutritious lunch each day. Individuals, companies and different organizations may voluntarily contribute to the program.

The box lunches include deli sandwiches, baked chicken and rice, fruit, vegetables, water and cookies. All of the lunches are prepared by Café Pacific and are delivered to the schools. The cost of each lunch is $3.25 daily per student and based on a 180-day school year, the total cost per student for the entire academic year is $586. There are 53 Ri'katak students enrolled at KHS for this upcoming year. Voluntary donations can be made in any amount up to and including a full year's worth of lunches. Anyone wishing to support this cause or has questions may call Janette Bishop at 52225.
