Army Performance Improvement Criteria

APIC emphasizes, 'We're all in this together'

By Preston Lockridge and Pat Cataldo

A sign-in ceremony was held during the Kwajalein Advisory Committee meeting on Saturday to officially bring on board USAKA/KMR organizations, both government and contractor, supporting the implementation of the Army Performance Improvement Criteria program.

Military and senior contractor leaders signed the document, which states:

"We, the people of the Kwajalein community, recognizing the mission, vision, values, and goals of the U.S. Army Kwajalein Atoll/Kwajalein Missile Range, do subscribe to the Army Performance Improvement Criteria goal to improve the overall effectiveness and efficiency of our organizations in delivering continuous quality and value to customers, resulting in mission success." And "We're all in this together..."

USAKA/KMR commander, Col. Gary McMillen, addressing the group, pointed out that Lt. Gen. John Costello, commander of the U.S. Space and Missile Defense Command, has made APIC a major goal of the command for 2000.

Costello said, "The use of the Army Performance Improvement Criteria will significantly enhance our existing work force skills, better focus our efforts on customer support, and improve our ability to address the space and missile defense needs of the Army and Department of Defense. Successful implementation of APIC is a command imperative!"

"These criteria aren't fads or attempts to get Armywide recognition. APIC is not a new requirement to be tacked on to our workload. It's about quality and improvement. It's a fundamental change in the way we look at how we do business."

Lt. Col. Steve Morris
USAKA/KMR
Assistant Chief of Staff for Operations

McMillen said that USAKA/KMR is unique because it is the only U.S. Army installation in which the military and contractors are partnering in the APIC process to bring about positive change.

The unusual mix of government and contractor personnel means that contractor personnel will have to "carry the ball" in making APIC a viable and very valuable tool that enables the work force and the community to reach the level of excellence it is capable of achieving, McMillen said.

APIC is the Army version of the Malcolm Baldrige National Quality Award Criteria for Performance Excellence. Senior military and contractor leaders and mid-level managers have completed phases I and II of training. Phase I, completed in November 1999, resulted in an assessment of USAKA/KMR as it is, identifying opportunities for improvement as well as major strengths.

Ground broken for Enniburr community center

USAKA/KMR government and contract personnel joined Marshallese officials and Enniburr residents Monday to mark the beginning of a community effort to build an activities center on Third Island.

"This is a unified effort by Leroij (high chieftess) Neimata [Kabua Nakamura], the Kwajalein Atoll Local Government, and the residents on island," said Kwajalein Sen. Sato Maie.

The new community hall, scheduled to be completed in 90 days, will be located between the school and the dispensary. It will be 66 feet long and 30 feet wide. A second floor over a portion of it will be used as quarters for overnight visitors. There will also be a service room in which to prepare meals and refreshments; electricity will be provided by solar power.

According to Enniburr Councilman Johnsay Kobney, the center will serve the island as a place for public hearings and community activities.

"I'm looking forward to the completion of this project," Kobney said. "It will be a great benefit to residents."

The estimated cost of the project is $190,230. Contributions totaling $43,800 have been made by Kwajalein Atoll Local Government and the community. Some of the contributions consist of equipment, such as a backhoe, loader, compactor, and generator. Each family donated five cement blocks, two pieces of rebar, and one bag of cement. USAKA/KMR donated 30 pieces of rebar.

During the ceremony, Col. Gary K. McMillen, USAKA/KMR commander, praised the undertaking. He reminisced over his first visit to Enniburr almost two years ago, when he attended the dedication of a U.S. Army-renovated pier.

"I am pleased to attend the start of an RMI-generated project," McMillen said. "It gives me great faith in the efforts of your country to meet the needs of outer island communities."

"I am only sorry that I will not be around for the dedication of this wonderful building," he added. "When I see the improvements around me, such as the school and dispensary, there's a lot of hope for what can be done. You plant the seed and watch it grow over the next few years."

Leroij Neimata, recalling her first meeting with McMillen at the pier dedication, thanked him for all of his support to the community.

"We are here to witness a ground-breaking opportunity for all of the island to work together to ensure that this project gets off the ground," she said.

Irojlaplap (high chief) Imata Kabua, Ebeye Mayor Wilmer Bolkeim, and Ina Lomae, RMI representative to USAKA/KMR from Enniburr, were among other dignitaries attending the ceremony. Pam McMillen and Leroij Momoko Lome cut the ribbon. McMillen, Bolkeim, and Rod Nakamura, whose brother, Augustine, designed the building, emphasized the unity of the effort by raising their shovels and breaking ground together.

Special songs were performed by the United Church of Christ and Assembly of God choirs. After the ceremony, guests were treated to a seafood buffet prepared by residents.

Café Roi celebrates spring with brunch

By Carol Sword

When Chef Terri Berkey suggested a "spring fling" brunch to celebrate the coming of Easter on Roi-Namur, she didn't know who was coming to the table Sunday.

Leroij Neimata Kabua Nakamura and Kwajalein Sen. Sato Maie, planning to visit Enniburr for a ground-breaking ceremony for a new community hall, attended the brunch.

The menu featured eggs benedict and carved steamship round, among a host of other delectables. Preparation started at 3 a.m. that day, with Joe Abston, Outrigger Snack Bar cook, assisting with the meal. Sous-chef Gerald Wright prepared Bananas Foster and offered champagne mimosa.

Hospital offers numerous vaccines for residents

From Kwajalein Hospital

Vaccinations protect against deadly diseases such as measles, mumps, and whooping cough. Vaccinations are among the most cost-effective and widely used public health inventions for the prevention of disease. It has been said that, with the possible exception of providing sources of clean water, no other human development has had such a major effect on population growth and mortality reduction as vaccinations.

When you receive a vaccine, it helps your body create antibodies, which are your body's defensive cells that fight germs. Sometimes your body can create antibodies on its own. But the diseases you get vaccines for are very dangerous. Most people get very sick and some die before enough antibodies are produced.

Vaccines work very well. Millions of people have been protected against serious illnesses such as polio, measles, and diphtheria because of vaccines. There are always a few people who do not respond to vaccines. How-

Immunizations are safe. Reactions to vaccines may occur, but they are usually mild. If you suspect you or your child are having a reaction to a vaccination, contact Kwajalein Hospital.

The following immunizations are required for children in school: hepatitis B; diphtheria, tetanus, and pertussis (DTaP); influenzae (HiB); polio; measles, mumps, and rubella (MMR); varicella; and hepatitis A. Children should start receiving immunizations shortly after birth until they are ready for school. The immunization schedule is available at your child's school or Kwajalein Hospital.

Kwajalein Hospital offers a wide variety of immunizations for children and adults. Information regarding recommended immunizations for travel can be found on The Vaccine Page at www.vaccines.com.

Feast of nominations sought for volunteer banquet

By Peter Rejcek

No good deed goes unnoticed — particularly on May 10.

That's when USAKA/KMR will honor local volunteers with a recognition banquet at the Yokwe Yuk Club. Community Activities is seeking nominations through noon Tuesday. A selection committee headed by Lt. Col. Dave Stoddard, USAKA/KMR deputy commander, will wade through the nominations and select the individuals who will be honored.

"I think this is an important program," Stoddard said.

The guidelines for nomination are simple: Nominees must have volunteered a minimum of 150 hours in 1999; they can be either individuals volunteering on their own or members of an organization; and all work and time must be nonprofit. Some 4,600 nomination forms detailing the process were sent out last week in the Tuesday and Friday editions of the Hourglass.

Steve Snider, superintendent of Community Activities Entertainment Services, said this year's program format is a departure from recent years, when only volunteers from organizations were recognized.

"Anybody and everybody who has volunteered to help the community within Kwajalein Atoll [qualifies]. People who have volunteered to help out over on Ebeye, as well as making Kwajalein itself a better place," he explained. "If you're doing something that helps the community and you're not being paid for it, there's no compensation, that's what we're looking for. We need more nominations — and I know there are hundreds that will qualify."

Stoddard noted the old system precluded nominations for many individuals who were either not part of private organizations or members of groups that may have been overlooked in years past.

"I think this is a way of recognizing people and not restricting it to private organizations," he explained. "I felt like the way it was being handled, we weren't getting the whole community involved."

Last year's banquet recognized 46 volunteers. Snider noted many more people may be spotlighted, as there is no limit to the types of volunteerism available here — from people who help Community Activities prepare for special events like Halloween and Christmas to volunteers who staff the Micronesia Shop and Bargain Bazaar. Volunteers must still meet the 150-hour minimum in 1999.

"There are so many different areas, so many things that can be done," Snider said.

The committee is expected to make its decisions at the end of the month, according to Snider. Nominees will then be notified and congratulated by mail, with a letter inviting them to the May banquet.

"It is going to be a very nice dinner, and everybody who is selected will be recognized at the dinner," Snider added.

Baseball season hits full stride on tube and online

By Jim Bennett

There's nothing like sitting at the ballpark on a cool, sunny day, with a hotdog and cold drink, watching your favorite team beat their arch-rival, or any other team for that matter.

But when you can't make it to a major league baseball game because you live on an island in the Central Pacific, you have to make adjustments to follow your favorite ball club.

Enter technology.

Between CPN television coverage and the Internet, it's hard to miss baseball season, even 5,000 miles from the states.

"We're showing about a game a day now," said Jason Bischoff, CPN assistant program director. "And we'll be showing more after the end of basketball and hockey season. It'll all be baseball."

In fact, with hockey playoffs currently underway and basketball playoffs next month, expect those sports to get priority by AFRTS in Los Angeles, Bischoff said. But baseball will get its turn.

CPN picks up baseball games like any other television program, free from the network that carries the game. ESPN donates a number of games, including Wednesday Night Baseball, which generally airs here Thursday mornings at 5 a.m. NBC, Fox Sports Net, and others contribute games, as well, giving viewers a variety of teams.

Since the games are donated from networks, however, Kwajalein receives major market teams and highly touted match-ups — such as New York, Chicago, and Boston — more often than smaller-market games, such as Minnesota, Milwaukee, or Montreal. But smaller-market teams play the larger markets, and just about every team will see airtime at some point in the season.

Granted, many games might have to be recorded at home on the VCR, to be viewed at a reasonable hour, but if one can avoid hearing the score through the workday, the game will seem live.

Around the horn...

The Web offers numerous sites where you can keep up with your favorite team.

USA Today Baseball Weekly — great features on a weekly basis.

www.usatoday.com/bbwfront.htm

The Sporting News — up-to-date news, scores, features, and commentaries. Also includes team reports and fantasy baseball write-ups. Check out the fan interaction stuff too.

www.sportingnews.com

Major League Baseball — the official web site of the league, it offers scores, stats, schedules, and features, along with player interviews and historical data.

www.majorleaguebaseball.com

www.cnn.com

ESPN — top-notch daily sports coverage, including scores, features, and columns.

www.espn.com

Besides games, CPN also carries sports news programs including ESPN Sports Center, Baseball Tonight, CNN SI, and George Michael's Sports Machine.

But sometimes, television isn't enough. After all, generations of American youths grew up bypassing the comics page of their local newspaper to tear into the sports page, where they would find the previous day's box scores and features about their heroes. (How many kids learned how to figure percentages using batting averages?) Stateside newspapers do come to Kwajalein, but often they're delayed, and that's where the Internet has changed things.

John Harris, for example, follows his Atlanta Braves almost daily.

"I can keep up day-to-day on the Internet," Harris said. "Occasionally, I'll get a paper, just to look through the pages."

Along with the Braves, Harris also follows the team's Triple A team in Richmond, or the New York Mets' Triple A team, the Norfolk Tides, who play near Harris' hometown of Newport News, Va.

"I normally look at the commercial sites — ESPN, The Sporting News, stuff like that," Harris explained. "Then I'll check out the Braves' page too, sometimes."

In fact, every baseball team has a Web page and Major League Baseball also has its own page.

Bischoff agreed with Harris, adding he follows his Cleveland Indians with phone calls home, along with a regular check of the hometown paper, Cleveland Plain-Dealer, online.

Some sites allow for live coverage of games, either audio, as if over the radio, or through pitch-by-pitch bulletins.

One site, totalbaseball.com, for example, displays a batter in his respective uniform in batting stance, along with a box outlining the strike zone. After each pitch, the site indicates if it is a ball, strike, foul, or hit. Each pitch is marked where it crossed the plate on the graphic, whether it was in the strike zone or not. Another graphic at the top of the page tells the viewer the inning, the count, statistics, men on base, and number of outs.

During our test drive recently, we watched the Yankees' Clay Bellinger pop out to the Angels' Ben Molina on a 3-1 count in the top of the 6th inning with no one on base. All that information and more was conveyed in a single at-bat.

Other sites have similar real-time game bulletins.

Many news sites include fan interactive activities including discussion groups (What fan doesn't enjoy complaining about his team's line-up?), and fantasy baseball leagues, where one drafts his or her own made-up team and competes against other made-up teams, using real individual player statistics.

"It's not the same as being there," Harris said.

But as with any game, one must always make adjustments.

Bowlers, take heed: Justin Farmer is practicing: On March 26, the 17-year-old Kwajalein High School junior chalked up a 298 game. For the record, he was using his Zone ball, a gift from friend and coach, Bob Carter.

Farmer has been bowling since he was 9 years old, and wants to turn pro some day.

Tourney raises $575 for junior golf

By Rudy Gil

The biggest winner in the April 10 golf tournament was the Kwajalein junior golf program.

Twenty-six two-person teams played nine holes of net better ball and nine holes of net scramble format to help raise money for the junior golf fund.

A total of $575 was raised. This money will purchase golf clubs to be used in the free monthly junior golf clinics conducted at the Kwajalein golf course. Most of the equipment available now is old, and many clubs are cut-down adult clubs. The new junior golf clubs will make learning the proper swing easier, especially for smaller kids.

Money from the junior golf fund also subsidizes part of the entry fee for junior golfers into the two major Kwaj golf tournaments — the Coral and Kwajalein opens.

The April 10 tournament also featured some exciting golf. At the end of the competition, three teams had tied for first place with a net score of 53 (19 under par). There were also prizes for the longest drive (men and ladies) and closest to pin on the two par-three holes.

The winners of the tournament were:

- Closest to pin, Hole 4, Shawn Tayloe
- Closest to pin, Hole 6, Bob Nast
- Longest drive (men), Flynn Gideon
- Longest drive (ladies), Pam Goranson
- Tied for first place: Tim Ashby/Sophia Gordon Flynn and Jeremy Gideon LeRoy Sievers/Sue Keyser
- Tied for fourth place: Jerry Satake/Jeff Murguia Jason Fuller/Lewis Smith Larry Miljkovic/Matt Naut Jim and Gina Barlow

Miss the Kwaj Reunion 2000 deadline? No worries

By Pat Cataldo

If you are registered with the committee for the Kwaj Reunion 2000, but missed the April 14 payment deadline and find that your room has been turned back to the hotel, don't panic.

You can still come to the reunion by making all your own reservations and paying your activity fee of $79 per person directly to the hotel by May 30. To do this, you must be registered with the reunion committee; otherwise, you will not get a badge that entitles you to admission to reunion activities.

If you are registered, call the hotel manager, Cameron Hewines, at 800-919-8333 or 808-329-3111 to make your activity fee payments.
