U.S. Army Kwajalein Atoll, Republic of the Marshall Islands

Cosumano takes over SMDC helm

From SMDC Public Affairs

Lt. Gen. Joseph M. Cosumano Jr. accepted his third star and assumed command of the U.S. Army Space and Missile Defense Command and the U.S. Army Space Command Monday (CONUS time) in ceremonies at the command's headquarters in Arlington, Va.

The U.S. Army Space and Missile Defense Command focuses on providing space-based information such as intelligence, communications, weather and terrain mapping for the Army's ground forces. SMDC also is the Army command supporting the ground-based National Missile Defense program.

Lt. Gen. Joseph M. Cosumano Jr.

Major elements of Cosumano's command are located in Arlington, Va., Huntsville, Ala., Colorado Springs, Colo., White Sands, N.M., and U.S. Army Kwajalein Atoll in the Marshall Islands. Other elements provide satellite communications and early tactical missile launch warnings around the world.

Cosumano comes from an assignment on the Army Staff as the Director, Task Force Objective Force.

He has served in several Washington, D.C. assignments. He has been the program manager for the National Missile Defense Joint Program Office, the Assistant Deputy Chief of Staff for Operations, Force Developments. He has been the Chief of Staff Synchronization Cell for the Quadrennial Defense Review in the Office of the Assistant Vice Chief of Staff of the Army, and he served as the executive officer for the Deputy Chief of

PCS process moves people differently

By Barbara Johnson
Feature Writer

It happens to us all. Everyone PCSes from Kwajalein or Roi-Namur sooner or later. Some leave after just a year or two, others after 30 or more years. Some are pretty happy about it, others more than reluctant.

In an attempt to glean some common threads from the experience for those who still have it to look forward to, we asked a few people who have recently PCSed, or are now in the process, to share their insights.

John Harris, who left in March after a three-year stay at Kwaj, e-mailed his friends on island some of his reactions after returning to the "real world."

"For those of you who plan to PCS one day, one of the first things you will need to do is find a vehicle. Sorry, folks, a pink Huffy just won't cut it here in the world. ... Now, if you spent any amount of time on Kwaj, you kind of lose touch with the reality of car prices and what is available. The choices can be a bit overwhelming, plus you only have a few weeks to shop and test drive and make up your mind."

Harris explained that although he can now probably afford a fancy car, he just can't seem to spend the money.

"One thing Kwaj has done is made me more conscious of what I really need and don't need and given me the willpower to keep my credit card in my pocket. In fact, I find the commercialism around here quite disgusting.

"We complain [at Kwaj] about having only so much of this and so many of that, but truthfully, did [we] really care? No, you just bought something else or shopped online ... But here it's overwhelming, and sometimes fewer choices are better.

"I thought I had most of my ducks in a row when I PCSed. Job lined up, place to live, I was pretty set. Nope. Too many things to do. I would advise taking a month or two off before jumping into anything if you can. Makes it easier to figure out which continent you are on and whether you want to be there in the first place.

"One thing that has been tough is going from what is almost a college environment at Kwaj to one where

Holocaust lessons should never be forgotten

The Days of Remembrance are when we recall the victims of the Nazi Holocaust. The Nazis were equal-opportunity haters. Mostly they hated the Jews, but homosexuals, Gypsies, Russians, the mentally or physically infirm and anyone who dared not to agree with them or fit into their concept of racial purity rounded out their boundless capacity for hate.

While the Holocaust was occurring, most people in the world didn't believe the rumors of what was happening in Poland, in Russia and wherever the Nazis ruled — places with names like Auschwitz, Dachau, Buchenwald, Treblinka and many others.

It was all just wartime propaganda. It was not believed until soldiers of the Allied armies liberated the camps and saw with their own eyes what horrors had taken place. Even then, as well as now, there were those who said it was all an elaborate hoax. People didn't want to know such a horrible thing had taken place. How could it have happened?

Once the horrors were revealed, the world recoiled in shock. With one voice, the world vowed nothing like this should ever happen again. How could the Germans do this?

But the Holocaust is over, a thing of the past, ancient history, right? How many school-age children these days could tell anyone what the Holocaust was? How many of them know about it in any great detail? My guess would be not many.

A thing of the past? Never again?

The slaughter in Cambodia under Pol Pot; the carnage and death in Bosnia and Sarajevo; Catholics against Protestants in Northern Ireland; the gassing of Kurds in Iraq by Saddam Hussein; the ethnic cleansing of Albanians by the Serbs; the massacre between Hutus and Tutsis in Rwanda; the imprisonment, torture and executions during the Cultural Revolution in China; and in the Holy Land, where the Prince of Peace lived, the strife between Israel and the Palestinians; the ethnic, religious and territorial hatred between Pakistan and India, which threatens at times to become a nuclear holocaust. As the song says, "The Beat Goes On."

And in our own beautiful country, the specter of a nation deeply divided along racial, ethnic and cultural lines. If for one moment you don't believe this, look at the last presidential election. We are definitely a nation divided.

How does prejudice and intolerance that in too many cases turns into hate happen? It starts with children.

Children have to have prejudice instilled in them and be taught to hate. All through the centuries adults have been only too willing to teach them.

In some cases it is a direct and harsh lesson by parents or other adults or governments to children that certain people are enemies or beneath them and are to be feared, loathed or hated.

In most cases, though, it is not that direct. It comes in the form of jokes, stories, racial and ethnic slurs and the stereotypes that those people are

Force Protection exercise next week

By Peter Rejcek
Associate Editor

The community is going to rehearse its ABCs next week.

That's A for Alpha, B for Bravo and C for Charlie — the three middle levels of the Threatcon System, a hierarchy of security measures that are enacted to combat terrorism.

A three-day Force Protection exercise is scheduled for May 9-11, according to Maj. Paul Bezzek, USAKA provost marshal.

"We will test some of the key hot traffic areas," Bezzek said, adding that next week's scenario will take the installation all the way to Threatcon Charlie.

"We're going to stand up the EOC," he added. The Emergency Operations Center is made up of civilian and Army personnel, who will enact the Threatcon system.

Threatcon Charlie requires significant tightening of security at all island entry points, as well as facilities. It is enacted when an increased or likely threat exists and must be maintained for extended periods of time. Threatcon Delta is the highest level in the system.

A two-day exercise was carried out at the end of January, with the installation going to Threatcon Bravo.

Bezzek said the community's involvement is largely one of awareness — checking to make sure nothing out of the ordinary is found around the office or building.

"It's more about heightened security," he said.

Hatred of others instilled at young age ...

stupid and these other people are lazy, and of course, those people are shifty and crooked, and so on.

Kids are listening when you think they're not, and they have long memories.

Adults who tell the stories and make the comments are probably not even aware of what they are doing. They heard the same jokes, stories and slurs when they were kids. They're not aware they are creating another generation of prejudice. Once intolerance is instilled, hate is sometimes not far removed.

All of us have laughed at those jokes and stories, unless of course, they were about our group of people. I am German/Irish/Catholic. I never thought German/Irish/Catholic jokes were funny. Imagine that.

Children believe every word of what their religions, parents and other adults tell them, and they grow into adults that believe every word of it.

Maybe the Germans believed every word of it.

Prejudice knows no boundaries.

Children of every race, creed and color have had these ideas and notions put into their minds.

When children start out like that where can it lead?

What it comes down to is that all of us have our prejudices and our preconceived notions about other people. How can we not? It is all around us. We are bombarded with it. None of us are free of it.

So what to do about it?

The only thing any of us can do is to fight against the intolerance and prejudice in our hearts; to try to understand the other guy, to put ourselves in his place; to teach our children that to be prejudiced or hate just because of religion, race, creed or color is wrong and foolish; to reserve judgment about anybody unless we really know them; not to group people into one category or another, and that's where they stay no matter what.

Because either we defeat hate, prejudice and intolerance, or they will defeat us.

The world has proven that the Nazis were not an isolated horror. It's happened time and again.

There will never be a perfect world with no hate and intolerance. We must always be on guard against it. And each of us must start with ourselves.

I think that is the lesson of the Holocaust and one we all need to remember and learn.

Brewster breezes through Rustman XXII

By Bruce Sinkula
Sports Writer

A crowd of several hundred people watched a talented field of 88 athletes compete in the 22nd Rustman triathlon Monday. Favorable weather conditions enabled the top of the field to post some of the fastest times in Rustman history.

Brian Brewster, a first-time entrant, led the field of 33 individual competitors — all of whom finished the race — from start to finish. Brewster completed the course in 2:10:54. It was the second fastest individual time in Rustman history.

Sharon Greenbaum, who finished second individually, set a new women's individual record with a total time of 2:13:43, eclipsing the old record by over three and a half minutes.

Debra Levine, another first-time entrant, finished third, posting a time of 2:21:02. Her time is the third fastest by a female in Rustman history.

ished ahead of the 19-team field with a time of 2:05:54, the second fastest in Rustman history. Defending team champions, Repeat.com, consisting of John Ross, Jeff DeLong and Katie DeLong, placed second with a time of 2:09:38.

Favorable conditions

The fast times, in spite of the 15- to 20-knot winds, came as a surprise to most Rustman participants and officials.

A thick blanket of high cirrus clouds shielded the competitors from the dehydrating, energy-sapping effects of the Kwajalein sun.

"The overcast skies were huge," Brewster said.

"The clouds helped," added Charles Greenbaum.

Elliott Moseley, men's master's champion, said, "The wind was perfect for the power bikers — straight down the runway."

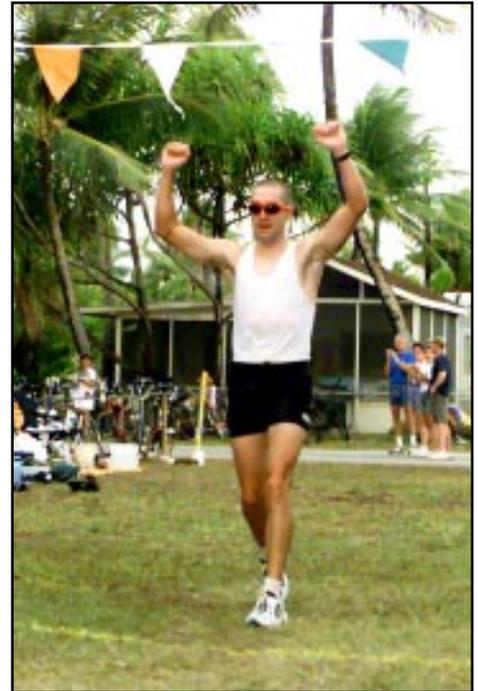

The favorable wind direction allowed the cyclists to take full advantage of the wind on the south, downwind side of the runway, yet get a degree of shelter from the wind offered by the trees and buildings on the opposite side of the runway.

As a result, three bikers — Jeff DeLong, Charles Greenbaum and Mike Seibert — eclipsed the 70-minute barrier, an unofficial Rustman benchmark for an exceptional cycling performance. Three individual Rustman competitors (Brewster, Sharon Greenbaum, and Moseley) all finished the bicycling portion in less than 71 minutes. That time includes the one to two minutes it takes the athletes to change into their biking clothes.

End of an era?

When asked how it felt to have the women's record, an exhausted Sharon Greenbaum exclaimed, "I'm thrilled."

Can't do it alone

Brewster gave plenty of credit to his support network for his fine rookie Rustman performance.

"My wife (Brandi) was helpful," Brewster said, adding that she picked up the slack around the house while he was busy training.

C.J. Sorenson, who finished fourth overall, was Brewster's training partner in the months leading up to the Rustman.

Brewster emphasized, "C.J. has been so helpful. I could not have done this well without him."

Leaving Kwaj, Roi easier said than done ...

you don't really see a whole lot of people on a regular basis. At Kwaj ... there was always someone to hang out with if you wanted to do something. None of that here. Sure, you can always pick up the phone, but it isn't the same, as people here are busy and just too spread out ...

"Everyone at Kwaj was in the same boat so to speak, and you could talk about work or just about anything else on Kwaj and other people would know pretty much what you were talking about. And even if you had nothing to say, listening in was good enough."

Often the comment is made that getting ready to leave is harder and more time-consuming than people expected. The process begins for most people with submitting a letter of resignation. Beth Abrams, Raytheon benefits administrator, recommends getting a packout date next. Packout dates are now booked through June, she said.

"The packout is a big process," Abrams said.

Other details to take care of right away are travel arrangements and scheduling a house inspection with Housing. The PCS process also includes obtaining signatures on the installation clearance sheet from a number of on-island locations — the post office, tape escape, library, hospital and dental clinic are only a few.

Starting early really helps minimize surprises, everyone agrees.

Trace, Shaunna and Olivia Fleming left last month, and Trace Fleming gave his perspective from this end just days before they were due to leave for Portland.

The toughest part of leaving was working on buying a house from out here, Fleming said. Using an agent they knew well and previous knowledge of the Portland area, they completed the entire transaction, including setting up the utilities, from Kwajalein. The house is expected to be ready when they arrive.

Now that that's accomplished, the hardest part will be getting ready for the house inspection at Kwaj and not being sure if it's OK until the last minute, he said.

It helps to set up a pre-inspection, Abrams said, explaining that it helps prevent surprises the day you leave.

One thing the Flemings did, especially because they were moving with a baby, was start early and send a lot home ahead.

Fleming recommends sorting out items to be packed from those to be left behind and clearly separating and marking them. He said on packing day, a number of packers arrive and "...They go fast. We were trying to keep up with them."

Mike Donohue PCSed this week after seven and a half years at Kwaj. "It was time to go," he said. "I feel like I've pretty much done it all."

Things he'll miss: The concept of taking off for six weeks, more expendable income, diving and the pipe band.

"There are great guys in the band. I'm going to miss them all," he said.

"There's no shortage of pipe bands in Boston, but this band was special.

"I won't be special any more. (It's all about me)," he joked.

Things he won't miss: BQ living (it's like a college dorm) and having to eat at times determined by the meal schedule at the PDR.

In the states, Donohue's looking forward to going to concerts and Red Sox games and seeing his family and friends.

He says his shipment home probably went over his weight limit, but, he adds, "I came out here with nothing, and I'm taking home a lot of good souvenirs."

He recommends sending ahead boxes of books, CDs or tapes via "media mail," a slow but inexpensive way to ship those items separately.

Donohue passed on some additional advice for people at Kwaj: "Stay as long as you can and do a lot of traveling. It's the trips you remember."

Packing out was a big hurdle, he said. "Make sure you do a little every day."

Donohue said he always thought it was harder staying here and saying goodbye to friends when they PCSed, but now that it's his turn, "I'll see how I feel Thursday.

"You've got to leave the party while it's still rocking."

It didn't take long for the band Everything to get the Kwajalein audience up and dancing.

After lead singer Craig Honeycutt opened Wednesday night's performance at Gilligan's with a couple of solo acoustical songs, the band started cranking with original music, mixing saxophone and keyboard sounds in the tunes.

Shortly into their second set, Ev-everything brought the audience to their feet with their signature song, "Hooch."

The band followed Wednesday night's show with a Thursday jam at Emon Beach.

"I've always enjoyed going to places with a strong sense of community," Honeycutt told Wednesday's crowd.

The USO show was sponsored by Department of Defense, Armed Forces Entertainment, Glaxo-SmithKline, AT&T, Yahoo! and BAE Systems.
