Schoolpop puts us in touch with our inner Gary Coleman

I should probably thank the folks who put together the Schoolpop Web site that allows us to earn money for the Recreation Fund, while shopping online, but I can't.

And I won't take a cheap shot at my wife who enjoys Internet shopping as much as anyone, because that just wouldn't be right.

Besides, in all honesty, the online service hasn't changed her habits much — all her favorites are on the site. It just re-directed her efforts and made her the future single greatest contributor to the Recreation Fund. Next time you're driving a boat and you notice that rates haven't gone up in a while, thank her.

The problem is, the service has turned me into a raging shopaholic, and I don't like to shop.

I recently got an e-mail from the vice president of Barnes and Noble thanking me for his second quarter earnings statement. When two new B-Boats show up at the marina — that's me.

It all started with a casual conversation after I returned from vacation last month. My boss informed me that the online shopping service, in the works for some time now, had come to fruition while I was gone. I'd read the back issue of the Hourglass, so I knew something about it. My boss just suggested I check it out and see what I think.

It was an expensive thought.

You see, I hadn't shopped at all on vacation, really, spending the majority of my time flying between family member's homes and going to baseball games. So, with my wife and daughter still off-island, I found myself staring at a computer screen with all my favorite stuff in front of me and an unused credit card in hand.

I trembled as I accessed the list of potential vendors -- books, videos, sporting goods, to name a few.

In the hardware site, I found a Chicago Cubs toilet brush and seat combo for $9.95, plus postage and handling. It came with a video of greatest Cubs moments, but it wasn't much of a free gift — just a couple minutes worth. Apparently, when the Cubs had greatest moments, film was still in development.

Then I latched onto the Barnes and Noble video section and discovered that every episode of my favorite cartoon from the '80s, "Robotech," was in a single DVD collection. I had to have it.

I remember growing up and running from the bus stop to ensure that I made it home for the opening sequence of F-14-looking jet aircraft battling alien fighters. I'll let you know if it has stood the test of time, since I now apparently own the whole dang series at the expense of my daughter's future college education.

In short, the Schoolpop folks have made me into the Internet equivalent of a catatonic man sitting on the couch at 2 a.m., in the dark, eating stale Doritos and channel surfing between infomercials with chip-stained hands dialing up the 1-800 numbers on the cordless phone.

"Hello? Have you got 'The Best of Gary Coleman Collection?'"

Speaking of Coleman, as you probably know, the acting, comic genius, who once portrayed a former USAKA commander in an unforgettable TV movie, will take to the political stage by challenging Arnold Schwarzenegger, Larry Flynt and more than 200 others for the gubernatorial election in California.

In an additional, small note, Danny's mom, from the AFN commercial fame, has also submitted her name for election to California's highest post. She's running on the "Get that budget back in order, and watch your neighbor!" platform. I think she has a good chance if she can just get the face-time Arnold is getting.

I thank God every day I live in a country where this kind of comedy occurs in serious day-to-day politics.

How is this NOT a reality television program? For $3,500 filing fee, 65 signatures and the cost of a decent cam-corder, I could have filed for the race and covered my campaign from start to finish. Or better yet, enlist Coleman, whose latest career moves have involved celebrity dating on the E! channel. Tell me he wouldn't sign up for this venture.

I would shoot Coleman visiting an elementary school shaking hands with fifth graders who tower over him.

Can you imagine the debates between the Terminator and the Kid with the Broken Halo?

"I want to be your governor," Schwarzenegger said.

"What you talkin' 'bout, Arnold?" said Coleman.

I demand that AFN send us this coverage live. Who wouldn't take off work to watch it? We'll all meet at the Adult Recreation Center.

Or I can wait a few months and buy the DVD on Schoolpop.

OK, you've probably noticed a slight change in the look of the Hourglass.

This actually resulted from a drunken bet with former associate editor Peter Rejcek, and he now owes me $20. He's currently in Malaysia, which has a remarkable number of Internet cafes, judging by the number of e-mails I and others have received. I hope now he'll check out the Hourglass online and send me my money.

Seriously, we're trying to give the paper a more modern and cleaner look.

We've kept the features you rely on — weather, sun-moon-tides and movie and TV listings — and parked those in a standard, easy-to-find location, the first two are still on the back page and the movies are now listed on the inside of the back cover. The ads are still in the back, running 9-11, and TV has fallen back a page to 7-8, thus keeping news together on pages 3-6, and on the back.

All this at no extra charge. We hope you like it, and thanks for reading.

Measles outbreak forces travel requirements

By Jim Bennett
Editor

A measles outbreak on Majuro has implications for travelers from the capital city.

Anyone between 6 months and 15 years old traveling from Majuro to Honolulu or Guam, must show proof of immunization against the disease before boarding aircraft off-island, according to an RMI Ministry of Health announcement. Those who have not been immunized, or can not show proof of immunization, will be turned back from the plane.

Proof of vaccination includes the yellow immunization cards issued by doctors and nurses, said Stephan Notarianni, USAKA Host Nation liaison officer.

This does not include Kwajalein and Ebeye residents who stopover at the island during their flight to Honolulu, he added, unless they deplane and spend time at Majuro before continuing their trip on a different flight.

The Ministry of Health confirmed the measles outbreak on Aug. 5, with more than 50 cases as of last week, according to reports in the Marshall Islands Journal.

No cases have been reported on Ebeye or Kwajalein, according to local health officials.

Since the outbreak, USAKA and RMI health officials have begun a vaccination effort, most notably last week, when health care professionals traveled to Ebadon and Elanak to immunize children on those islands.

Health officials, both local and at the World Health Organization, say measles is contagious, but add the likelihood of catching it while sitting on a plane with someone who has the illness is slim.

The last time the Marshall Islands had a measles outbreak was in 1988.

Fuel pier construction creates water hazards

By Jan Waddell
Staff Writer

During reconstruction of the fuel pier, protruding rebar, hazardous steel and falling objects pose a danger to boaters, swimmers and snorklers.

"Boaters should not shoot the pier," said Darrell Haugh, Project Manager for Oceaneering International Incorporated. "The area is off limits"

Haugh added, the entire area is closed to swimmers, boaters and snorklers anyway.

"We have had boats shoot under the pier and Harbor Control has been called," added Haugh. "There have also been snorklers seen under the pier."

The pier pilings are being reworked and a new dock will be rebuilt at the end of the pier along with reconstruction of the buoy system, according to Haugh.

The sole purpose of the pier is to transport fuel to boats and construction should be finished in May of 2004, said Haugh.

During the work, large pieces of concrete surrounding the pilings are being removed and the pilings are being encompassed with new material. When the old concrete is removed it falls into the water, he said. The falling debris is then removed to the appropriate land fill.

During high tides the exposed protruding rebar, which is part of the pilings, is covered by water and even though safety measures have been taken for workers who know about it,

Mickey Nenam of San Juan Construction looks up from his work on cement pilings supporting the fuel pier. The work is part of a renovation project, but snorklers and boat traffic near the pier has caused concern that bystanders could be injured by debris from the work.

a danger still exists there, Haugh said.

Although the falling debris does pose a hazard to boaters, swimmers and snorklers, said Haugh, recreational boaters, boating around and under the pier, also pose a hazard to the hard-hat divers in the water working on the pier. The hard-hat divers are in the water everyday seven days a week, working on the pier.

In the future, a yellow boom will be placed around the adjacent beach area. Haugh said, swimmers should stay within the boom area.

Neal finds Kwaj hospitality to his liking

By Jim Bennett

Editor

1st Sgt. Dennis Neal has felt first-hand the family atmosphere he wants to promote on Kwajalein.

Arriving with two daughters, Alexis, 8, and Alyssa, 2, Neal has jumped into his job as the top enlisted soldier at USAKA despite the absence of his wife, Capt. Annette Neal, who will join him later.

"The entire island wrapped their arms around us," he said. "You couldn't find this kind of atmosphere anywhere else.

"The same motivation and togetherness that I've found so far off-duty, I would like to see that same enthusiasm when we come to work," he added. "Maybe that's too much, or maybe there's some of that, but if we could do that, this island would be too perfect."

Between his work and family, Neal still has a few boxes to unpack in his office and pictures, plaques and diplomas to hang on the walls. But the family photos have made it out on prominent display, along with the New England Patriots collectable from the 2002 Super Bowl, a throw-back to his Boston-heritage.

Neal joined the Army in 1983, after graduating high school there.

Over the past 20 years, he's been a drill instructor at Fort Jackson,

"We all have the same goals and missions in mind. We want to bring this community together. We need to get everyone on the same sheet of music."

— 1st. Sgt. Dennis Neal

S.C., and equal opportunity advisor in Germany and an inspector general in both Germany and at Fort Lee, Va. A name-plaque full of commander's coins from various units, and even the Washington D.C. police department, testify to his work.

The combined experiences, he said, prepared him for this latest assignment at Kwajalein.

effective and if not, there's enough resources here, as far as people," Neal said. "And just knowing that, makes my job easier."

What he learns here will carry over into the future, too, as the military becomes more linked with civilians, particularly in logistics and support fields.

"The Army has always worked with civilians, but it's even more so today," Neal said. "There's a lot to learn, and a lot of people here to learn from. The next step for me, is all management functions and that will include civilians and soldiers."

Neal comes to Kwajalein from Fort Lee, where he served as first sergeant for the garrison and the Combat Arms Support Command. There, he worked with 580 soldiers, dealing with a host of soldier issues.

"There are more civilian concerns here, because that's the nature of the beast, but my leadership style won't change," he said. "I'm still going to go out there and be proactive."

Part of that involves recognizing the differences, but working through the similarities. Soldiers serve under the Uniform Code of Military Justice and civilians have their own set of rules, he said.

"We all have the same goals and missions in mind," Neal said. "We want to bring this community together. We need to get everyone on the same sheet of music.

"The approach is the same," he added. "It's just a matter of getting the point across in the most tactful and effective manner possible. And that's true of soldiers, too. You want to treat each with dignity and respect."

Specifically, Neal will concentrate on Army and DoD civilian personnel matters, but also plans to focus on improving the community atmosphere.

"This place is definitely different," Neal said. "We're far from the flag pole, and some things will take awhile longer because we're isolated, but the job itself gets done."

He'll work issues relating to the new housing regulations set for release soon, along with the Youth Advisory Council, established by

Quarters of the Quarter judging date set

By Jan Waddell
Staff Writer

Taking pride in residential yards cannot only be personally rewarding, but in some case it can mean a monetary reward.

It's also the neighborly thing to do, officials said.

On September 16, a three-member group of judges will travel around the residential areas of Kwajalein and Roi-Namur to determine which yards are worthy of the honor of being named Quarters or the Quarter.

Loanne Bulles, RMI Intern in the USAKA Host Nation Office, will choose over the next few weeks judges who will review yards in the South, North, Ocean, Emon, Central and Roi-Namur areas.

Bulles said the judges will visit all the residential areas on Kwajalein and Roi-Namur, awarding a total of six $50 gift certificates, or one for each area. The gift certificates are good at Macy's, Macy's West and Gimbles on Roi-Namur.

The program is "to promote a beautification program within the Kwajalein and Roi-Namur housing areas," said Bulles. "(The contest) applies to residents of Kwajalein and Roi-Namur who are responsible for the maintenance of a yard."

Winning residents will be notified by the end of the day on September 16, said Bulles. She added the gift certificates will be awarded the following Monday. The gift certificates can be picked up, by the winners, at the Macy's Customer Service desk.

Winning residents will also receive the Quarters of the Quarter signs to display in the yards.

Tessie Geronimo has lived on Kwajalein for three years and has won the Quarters of the Quarter once based on her numerous plants.

Tessie Geronimo works on her award-winning lawn Friday morning. Officials will award Quarters of the Quarter on September 16, and ask that while not all yards can look like Geronimos, folks keep them shipshape including picking up fronds and returning trashcans to the quarters after pick-up.

"I just plant it. I just throw it in a pot and it grows," she said.

Geronimo said she has over 100 orchid plants of 10 different varieties. She takes cuttings from other plants and starts new one. Some of the other plants which Geronimo cares for daily are hibiscus, banana, jasmine, aloe vera, ginger, bougainvillea and a single chili plant.

Geronimo added, she spends about an hour each morning tending and fertilizing her plants.

"I just like to garden," she said.

In a continuing effort to help with the beatification of Kwajalein, all residents should act as good neighbors with or without the prizes, said Ed Black, Technical Facilities manager and deputy manager of Public Works. That includes picking up palm fronds laying in yards putting them by the curb for pick up.

Also, all portable trash containers must be put back by the buildings by the close of business the day following trash pick up, he added.

Some housing is TDY and the portable trash can is put out for pick-up, but because the residents no longer live there the can does not get put back by the house, explains Black. Everyone needs to help out, he said.

Neal to lead cultural awareness program ...

Col. Jerry Brown, USAKA commander.

"It's very important," Neal said. "We need to make sure kids have a voice and we listen to them."

With school starting next week, expect to see Neal visiting with school officials and students, alike.

Neal will also promote cultural awareness issues by supporting the Special Emphasis Equal Opportunity Program, with which he has experience.

"We won't force-feed anyone, but we're going to let people know it's out there," he said.

Neal said the atmosphere at Kwajalein does force him to think of other soldiers around the globe.

"It's easy to lose sight of the rest of the world," he said. "We all have friends and family over there in harm's way, not just soldiers, but civilians have friends and family there too. We're here enjoying life and they're there fighting for their lives."

Still, he said he's looking forward to doing his mission at Kwajalein.

"This is the Army's best-kept secret. I'm energized and motivated. I could not have dreamed this."

Labels pay off on school supplies

By Jan Waddell
Staff Writer

The Kwajalein Kids Club, along with the Army Women's Organization League, have joined forces in a continuing effort to collect Campbell's product labels and General Mills box tops to purchase educational material for the Ebeye Head Start program.

The KKC consists of about 15 members ranging from first- through the sixth-graders. They meet before and after school and have been organizing and counting the box tops and labels, said Trina Tiffany.

Box tops earn cash from General Mills, which can be used to purchase basic school room supplies, and the Campbell's product labels are used to purchase items directly from the Campbell's catalog such as computers, audio/visual equipment, sports equipment, reference books, musical instruments and even a mini-van, Tiffany said. They have earned $250 in box tops and collected and about 9,000 Campbell's labels so far this year.

The EHS program has about 200 children ranging in age from three to five years old, Tiffany said.

Label and box top donation can be made at the Surfway, in the bin located at the front of the store, or can be turned into the KKC, which meets at the elementary school in the morning and afternoon, or at the Child Development Center.

For those interested in donating, clip the Box Tops for Education label off General Mills products and clip the front label off the Campbell's products.

Some of the Campbell's qualifying products are Pepperidge Farm, Swanson, Market Day, V8, Prego, Pace and Campbell's Soup. Five extra bonus points are earned for Soup at Hand and Campbell's Ready to Serve, and V8 Splash earns 10 extra bonus points.

AWOL will meet with members of the EHS program to determine this year's students needs, said Tiffany.

The donation of the education material to the EHS will be sometime around May of 2004.

CA plans rookie softball clinic

By Jim Bennett
Editor

You're over 21, well over 21, and you haven't picked up a bat or ball glove since the neighborhood kids picked you last for the sandlot game, lo those many years ago. No problem, says Kaya Landers, Athletic supervisor.

Landers and her husband, Torrey, who works as Recreation superintendent, will host an adult softball clinic Aug. 23, at 5:30 p.m.

It's part of an effort to make adult athletics more accessible to more people. In fact, the Landers will host a pre-season clinic for all the major sports.

"The whole definition of recreation, in my mind, is that it is user-friendly," she said. "You have clinics for children, but where can adults get coaching?"

For softball, the one-evening clinic will feature fundamentals such as hitting, catching and the game's rules. In addition, those interested will be placed in a free agent pool for drafting onto C- and D-division teams.

"This gives us a way to make softball available for all kinds of people at every level," Landers said.

Youth Services plans for big changes

By Jan Waddell
Staff Writer

The Child and Youth Services program will experience growth and change over the next few months.

"One of the biggest changes is in the personnel," said Ann McCoy, Child and Youth Services Coordinator.

Mark Yurovchak is the new Youth and Sports director. He came to Kwajalein from Las Vegas, Nev., with his wife, Tarah, who will teach sixth grade and two daughters Lexis, 11, and Caleigh, 5.

Mark Yurovchak

Yurovchak, a certified physical education teacher, has been involved with youth related activities for the past 10 years. He played Division I Baseball at the University of Nevada Las Vegas, and coached youth basketball, 10 and under fast pitch baseball, along with junior high basketball.

An additional six to eight staff members will also join Yurovchak and McCoy over the next few months, said McCoy.

The CYS center will have longer hours with two adult staff onsite for safety, said Yurovchak.

Some additional changes McCoy and Yurovchak have planned for CYS are activities linked to the Boys and Girls Club of America and 4H along with a technology club, "Power Hour" photography club, culinary workshop and various sports and sports clinics.

There will also be a Global Positioning System club which will join Fort Richardson and Fort Wainwright in Alaska; Camp Zama in Japan; and Fort Shafter and Schofield Barracks in Hawaii, said McCoy. She added that Kwajalein will join the other facilities in organized activities and events using the GPS system.

By joining with the Boy's and Girl's Club America and 4H, Kwaj youth can participate in contests, earn scholarships and compete nationally with other clubs and organizations, said McCoy.

"We want to see the interest of the kids," said McCoy. "A lot of our programs will be flexible depending on the interest of the kids."

"If they want to have a dance, I can set that up," said Yurovchak. "We are going in a positive direction."

Yurovchak will also hold clinics for different sports. He added, if there is enough interest in a certain sport then he will set up a clinic for that sport whether it is tennis, badminton, basketball or baseball.

"I need to get an insight from the youth what they would like. I am open to suggestions," said Yurovchak.

McCoy said she anticipates it will be two to three months before the whole program is completely up and running.
