Stream of consciousness makes one fly on TV wall

Have you ever just let your mind go and ramble?

We are all taxis for the Kwaj flies that are too lazy to fly.

They wait outside our doors in the morning, and when we emerge to head for work, they latch on and ride into town.

No matter what you do, they hang on! I have seen people who are flapping their arms and slapping themselves with their hats, but nothing works.

Personally, I think each one of us is assigned a fly the minute we step-off the plane.

How about the Kwaj dinner-wave? This was a wave I learned early on. If dinner is an outside event, you do the Kwaj dinner-wave. You hold your food plate close to your body, and in between bites, you wave your hand over your plate. That way the flies get less, and you get more.

The gecko, now there is a strange creature, fun to watch, but a little light in the brains department.

We find them in our homes freezing cold and begging for help. If they are lucky enough to prominently display their freezing body to us just as hyperthermia sets in, they have a chance.

We take them outside and they warm up, and they are back in our homes the next day.

And talk about dense, hermit crabs have got to top the list. They scurry across sand, rocks and grass and at the slightest ground-movement they retreat back into their shells, kind of like the entertainment wrestler John Cena, "You don't see me."

This brings me to a special spot in my heart, WWE wrestling — "RAW" and "Smack Down." I can't get enough.

I have been watching some sort of entertainment wrestling since I was knee-high to a grasshopper.

My grandfather's favorite TV show was wrestling. Every weekend I would sit at his feet, and he would hoot and holler and slap his knees.

Yeah, TV was a different game back then. There was "Leave it to Beaver," "Father Knows Best," "Dennis the Menace" and "My Three Sons."

It then progressed to "Mork and Mindy," "Flying Nun," "I Dream of Jeanie" and the "Partridge Family."

Now it is "The Bachelor," "Fear Factor,"

"Average Joe" and "Survivor." Maybe TV hasn't changed.

While back I was reading of the newest reality game show, "The Will."

This is where some very rich person gives 75 percent of their wealth to a trust account, and then all of their family members compete against each other to be the last person standing and they get the money. Sounds like Dr. Phil has a ready made cliental.

Well, I will now just ride my Kwaj bike back to my cinderblock house and watch "Cold Case" or the roller.

(Editor's Note: Along the same subject, would it have killed Tara on the Bachelor to keep her lunch down long enough until Jesse dumped her? Then she could have thrown up ON HIM!

That would have rated classic television status — the kind you tape, watch, rewind, watch, rewind and watch again looking for every nuance including the grimace on his face, the proverbial "dooah."

I know it's not "Smackdown," but TV can't lose when you combine pretty girls, creeps and disgusting gastronomical distress. Script writers can't make this stuff up.)

Women's club retailers raise $70K for education

By Jan Waddell
Reporter

The Yokwe Yuk Women's Club sales operations raised $70,000 for local education this past year.

The club donated the money to the Education Assistance Committee in a gathering May 17. The Mic Shop donated a $50,000 check and the Bargain Bazaar donated $20,000.

"This is the big one," said Cindy Stevison, Yokwe Yuk Women's Club president. "Every year we present the EAC with money for grants and scholarships."

Grants go to Micronesian high school graduating seniors who fill out an application, have volunteered for three community service projects and complete an essay.

Any Micronesian student who fills out an application receives a grant, said Dianne Tarnstrom, The Mic Shop chairperson.

"Every school on Ebeye will get a grant," she added.

The Mic Shop funds were raised from sales of Micronesian hand-crafted items. Crafts come from Palau, Chuuk, Pohnpei, Kosrae and the Marshall Islands.

"We deal directly with the craft people," Tarnstrom said.

The Mic Shop carries items such Tarnstrom added most of the woven items come from the Marshall Islands along with jewelry, shells, stick charts and purses.

The Bargain Bazaar raised the funds from the sale of items donated by the Kwajalein community.

"We were able to raise $20,000 because of all the great people on this island," said Kate Lollar, Bargain Bazaar manager. "They donate stuff we are able to sell."

Lollar said volunteers run the Bargain Bazaar.

"I need help," Lollar said. "I need volunteers. All my volunteers are PCSing."

Stevison said The Mic Shop is also volunteer-run, and it too needs volunteers.

Anyone who is interested in volunteering for the Mic Shop or the Bargain Bazaar can contact Stevison at 58222.

Donations for the Bargain Bazaar are picked up on Monday afternoons from 1-3 p.m. Call 53686 to donate.

The next general meeting is the Yokwe Yuk Women's club Welcome Back Social in August and the annual membership drive is held every September.

CYS staffers complete 16-module training regimen

By Jan Waddell
Reporter

Two Child and Youth Services employees recently completed an important part of the Army's Morale, Welfare and Recreation Academy's training.

Karen Posey, CYS training specialist and Heather Schantz, CYS assistant youth director, are the third and fourth CYS employees to complete the 16-course program.

Trina Tiffany, Child Development Center director and Ann McCoy, CYS coordinator, first completed the course, and the remaining two CYS employees are currently working on the course.

All CYS employees must complete this training within one year of employment.

The MWR program is an online course with modules such as budgeting, personnel management, basic military protocol, safety, contracting and marketing, to name a few. Each module of the program has a pre-as-essment test and post-assessment test.

According to Posey and Schantz, it took both of them around 40 hours to complete the entire program, but since both have a position at CYS, they worked on the modules when they could.

"We have our job to do on top of it," Posey said.

Schantz said, "It took me about a month and a half."

McCoy said employees used to travel to the MWR Academy in Virginia to take the budgeting module, but the entire program is now offered online.

Schantz is also planning events for the summer starting on June 10 with the Summer Kick Off. The kick ball is to celebrate the end of school and the beginning of summer vacation.

She is also starting a morning CYS program from 8:30-11:30 a.m. along with Camp Adventure, which will be starting soon.

Firefighters practice small space rescues

By Dan Adler
Hourglass Staff

An injured victim is in the cramped, tight space of the lower motor room aboard the KMRRS Worthy. The only way out is through narrow passageways with sharp turns and up steep stairs.

Such is the scenario which played out Wednesday afternoon as the Kwajalein Fire Department engaged in a confined space rescue exercise. It is part of an annual three-week training session that also includes high-angle rescue from a tall structure.

But firefighters spend Wednesday down in the bowels of the ship.

There is very little air, and it is stiflingly hot. Time is critical, but so is safety for the victim and the firefighter rescuers.

A two-man team is lowered by ropes and pulleys down a small hatchway to reach the victim. They are each equipped with a breathing apparatus and are kept to a 20-minute working time limit so they do not become exhausted by their efforts and turn from rescuer to being in need of rescue.

If the victim is not brought out by then, that two man team is pulled out by firefighters assisting topside. Another team takes their place to continue the rescue effort.

Their air is constantly monitored and radio contact is kept.

The process continues until the victim is stabilized and brought through the cramped passageways, up the stairs and pulled up through the narrow hatch. Emergency medical personnel then attend to the victim.

The training, given by Ralph Trowbridge, instructor for Spec. Rescue International, is required to become OSHA compliant and to earn certification as a rope rescue technician.

"A select few are chosen," Trowbridge said. "When they earn certification, they are also qualified to be instructors."

The three-week training is part of a continuous process.

"Although this training is done annually, It's just part of what we do," said Lt. Ken Riley.

"There's training we do on a monthly basis also," Riley added, noting the equipment and classroom instruction that goes on throughout the year.

Water safety starts with regulatory knowledge

By Jan Waddell
Reporter

"Boat smart, Boat safe, Wear it," is the slogan for National Boating Safety week May 22-28.

The Kwajalein Marine Police remind everyone to always follow boating and water safety rules.

A float plan is one of the most important pieces of information a boater can file. If there is a change to the float plan then be sure and call it in.

"Always be specific about your destination," said Sgt. Mike Herrington, senior boat operator.

If there is a problem the police will start the search in the float plan area and then expand the search from there. Filing an incorrect float plan or failing to notify the Small Boat Marina or Kwajalein Harbor Control with a float plan change could delay rescue.

Make sure all required boating safety equipment is on board before leaving the marina.

Personal floatation devices are required for each person on the boat. Anyone under 90 pounds must wear a personal floatation device at all times. Life vests can be rented from the marina.

Herrington added snorkelers must wear a snorkel vest, which can also be rented at the marina.

Each boat must carry at least one person other than the operator, and this person must be capable of making distress signals in the event the operator is unable.

In fact, the buddy system is required for all water activities whether it be boating, snorkeling, diving or swimming.

Herrington also said many times when a boat is out the boat-operator will allow someone else to drive. Someone who does not have a USAKA license cannot operate a vessel Herrington said.

According to Herrington, regulations require all boats to yield to USAKA work vessels.

Normally boats follow the same guideline as diving by staying to the right, but Herrington advises when leaving the Kwajalein harbor boaters should stay more toward the fuel pier, due to LCM and water taxi traffic.

"Do not drink and drive," Herrington said. All boating operators should be designated drivers.

The USAKA phone book lists water and boating regulations and requirements. It also contains which areas allow different water activities.

B-Boat classes are held the first Wednesday and Thursday of each month with the next class on June 2-3 from 6-8 p.m.

Anyone interested in signing up for the class can at the Small Boat Marina.

Venutian event harkens back to 19th century

By Jan Waddell
Reporter

On June 8 Kwajalein residents could see a celestial event which last happened in 1882.

The planet Venus will transit across the face of the sun, an event which will take just over six hours.

"The transit begins at 5:13 p.m. with first contact, which is when the edge of the disc of Venus just touches the upper limb of the sun, as seen from Kwaj," said Bob Carson. "This is the beginning of ingress. It takes 20 minutes for the disc of Venus to fully enter the sun's disc. This is then second contact or the end of ingress. Venus then moves slowly across the disc of the sun."

He added, "The mid-point of the transit occurs at 8:14 p.m. Unfortunately, this is after local sunset, which occurs at 7:07 p.m. Venus will appear to move from top to bottom across the left hand portion of the sun's disc as seen from Kwaj. Remember that because of our proximity to the equator, the sun will be oriented with north to the right, east at the top and west at the bottom at sunset. So Venus will be about one third of the way through when the sun sets here."

May 25, 2004

Venus is the second planet from the sun and the sixth largest in the solar system

According to National Aeronautics and Space Administration, Venus is similar in size and mass and composition to Earth. But, Venus is also different. It has no ocean and is covered by clouds that trap the surface heat allowing temperatures to reach 450 degrees Celsius.

Venus rotates on its axis once every 243 Earth days and orbits the sun every 225 days.

It is dangerous to look directly at the sun if trying to view Venus' transit.

"You will need either special solar filters to look at the Sun or use the projection method," Carson said. "Details of the projection method can be found on either of the popular Web sites for amateur astronomy, www.skypub.com or www.astronomy.com."

Carson added, "I will bring my telescope and binoculars, both with solar filters attached, down to Emon beginning a few minutes prior to the start of the transit and remain through sunset, weather permitting. The telescope viewing will be open to the public and free as always."

Diving ranks high among active Kwaj residents

Kwajalein has many opportunities available that divers in the United States do not, and local divers have noticed.

The Kwajalein Scuba Club is the second most active scuba club in the world, according to dive instructor Ron Gamble. The record of the most members in the club was 400, but has declined to less than 300 over the last year, Gamble said.

During Wednesday's KSC meeting, Melissa Selzler, KSC secretary/treasurer, reported that the club filled 1,075 tanks in March alone, and that the club usually fills over 1,000 tanks every month.

There are many places to dive on Kwajalein.

According to dive instructor Doug Hepler, the west reef on the Oceanside wall has clarity so great that you can see 150 feet ahead of you on merely a good day.

Also, Kwajalein has some interesting wrecks to take a look at. Some wrecks Hepler recommends are the WWII Junk Piles, P Buoy, K-5 Buoy and the Prinz Eugen.

In order to dive, a person must first complete the beginner dive class. After completion of this class, the diver is then allowed to dive to a maximum of 60 feet. Within six months after the beginner course is completed, the diver must take the advanced diving class, which allows the diver to dive to the absolute maximum depth for sports diving of 130 feet. The diver may also night dive. After the advanced course is completed, a diver could, if 18 or older, pursue higher dive courses such as Rescue Diver, Divemaster, or Instructor, if the class is offered on island, Hepler said.

There are two associations from which to become a certified scuba diver. One is Professional Association of Dive Instruction, and the other is National Association of Underwater Instruction. There is little difference between the two, with the exception that PADI will allow children as little as 10-years old to join the beginner's dive course, and NAUI limits that age to 12 and up, Hepler said.

According to Ron Gamble, dive instructor, classes cost around the $200 to $250 range, but the price depends on which instructor you choose, as the instructor may set the price. Most instructors will provide everything a student needs for the class except for a dive mask, snorkel and fins.

After becoming a certified diver, a person must join the Kwajalein

Scuba Club to dive on Kwajalein. The diver is then expected to pay dues in the club annually and attend at minimum required dive-safety meetings held by the KSC. Also, a member is expected to follow the rules and regulations that go with being part of the club, such as reporting violations of the rules, filing night-dive plans with security or the police station and reporting dives completed, also not sharing the tank house combination and keeping to the dive limits.

People diving while on trips to nearby Chuuk and Bikini atolls are allowed to exceed the 130-foot limit that Kwajalein has, as those atolls are not limited by Army regulations, which Hepler said were put in place to decrease decompression sickness and other hazards.

There are times when a diver should not go out, such as before a flight, due to the dehydration that can occur from flying, Hepler said, or within 24-hours before flying, as this can cause decompression sickness. Hepler added that the Roi flights are okay to fly right after diving since the plane is pressurized to sea level.

He added that drinking alcohol anytime before or during a dive can cause a diver to become dehydrated and unaware of surroundings.

“Before and after a dive you must be properly hydrated. Especially before,” Hepler said.

Since Kwajalein is a once in life time opportunity for divers Gamble said, “It’s a really good idea to take lessons while they’re here.”

For those interested in diving, a packet of liability and a list of the rules can be located inside the tank house, or those interested can also contact a KSC representative and request a packet.

Local woman authors bi-lingual children's book

By Mig Owens
Assistant Editor

Imagine a world without books ... no bedtime reading, no 'how to' manuals, no textbooks. This is a reality for Ebeye residents and elsewhere in the Marshall Islands because books written in the Marshallese language are extremely difficult to find.

Lt. Joanna Bucknam of the Kwajalein Police Department has offered her own solution by publishing a children's book, titled I Remembered, or Iar Ememej, in both English and Marshallese.

Joanna Bucknam

Bucknam wrote, illustrated, and self-published the book, which became available online just this month. She credits Connie Guidi for assistance with the artwork and Helbert Alfred for translation.

Set on Ebeye, the book details a young girl's experience at the beach with her family where she learns of her brother's return from schooling abroad.

"Children on Ebeye go to school and some go on to college in the states," Bucknam said. "The book is saying that it's OK to leave and then return to make your own country better by sharing what you've learned."

Inspiration for Bucknam's fictional work arose from conversations with her coworkers, who shared with her that books in Marshallese surprisingly are not available even in schools on Ebeye.

Twenty-eight year old Bucknam has lived on-island for three years and is the KPD officer in charge and access control department manager. A former MP in the Marine Corps with service at Barstow, Calif., and Iwakuni, Japan, Bucknam currently supervises 12 officers at Entry/Exit.

Bucknam said she fell in love with the Marshallese community while first working at DSC after arriving on-island.

"They're always happy," she said. "No matter what the situation, they're carefree and what's most important is family."

As a police officer, Bucknam said she understands that there sometimes may be misperceptions about those in her line of work but added, "I think we have an understanding of the host nation's culture and want to be a part of it. We respect it."

Bucknam hopes that her book helps children to realize that it's OK to dream big and it's OK to leave their family.

"School is very important," said Bucknam, who is currently pursuing a bachelor's degree in criminal justice and psychology. "Because the more you know, the more you can bring positive change to your community."

Copies of I Remembered will be available at Macy's within the next few months, according to Paul Divinski, Retail manager for Merchandising and Provisioning.

"I had been trying without success for over two years to find a vendor for books in Marshallese, and had contacted people in Majuro and reviewed the Marshall Islands Journal," he said. "Joanna Bucknam's books are unique and an excellent addition to the variety of merchandise carried in Macy's."

Joanna Bucknam published I Remembered, or Iar Ememej, in both in English and Marshallese.

T-shirts, note cards, and post-cards featuring one of Bucknam's paintings will also be available at Macy's.

"Joanna created her own artwork for the book and for the items we intend to sell later this year and they capture well elements of life and society in the Marshall Islands," Divinski said.

Another book is in the works for Bucknam, and she has some ideas on how to involve the schools on Ebeye in its production. The second book will feature English and Marshallese side-by-side in an effort to help readers learn the languages.

"The Marshallese culture and people have given me so much," Bucknam said. "This is my way of giving back. They now have a children's book in their own language."
