Thanks to island musicians for great entertainment

As we get ready to leave Kwaj, we would like to express our appreciation to the musicians on island who perform for us on a regular basis. In April, we were privileged to attend the Acoustic Guitar night with Ron Curtiss, Dan Eggers, Kevin Ferguson, Jordan Pemberton, and Bud Teague (that is in alphabetical order!) The Acoustic Guitar night was wonderful! The music was excellent with lots of familiar music, plus some great original songs. The audience was great, we might add, in that everyone was respectful to the musicians and did not compete with the music by loud talking.

These musicians were working for free, provided their own equipment, and even set up the tables and chairs themselves.

I would also like to say how very much our family appreciates and loves the Zooks and their wonderful musical evenings, which we regularly enjoy. Before coming to Kwajalein, we hadn't danced this much since college!

We have also enjoyed listening to SAS, the all girl band and hope they keep up the momentum!

There are many other talented musicians on island performing at the Spring Break, and other events.

One of the best sources of music for us has been the school and community chorus and band, for which we have Cheryl and Dick Shields to thank. We have very much enjoyed having the opportunity to listen to these excellent concerts throughout the years we have been here.

These events are so warm and comfortable, they flow with good feelings and everyone feels close and relaxed in the moment. Perhaps the alcohol at the Yuk helps, but we think the music is what connects everyone in such a beautiful way.

We have been very fortunate as music lovers to live here and be able to enjoy these events especially given the high level of talent our local musicians have. The Kaleidoscope Of Music is fantastic example of this statement.

We appreciate you musicians!

Thanks to friends for love, good fortune

Yokwe kom aelop, moce, and farewell! We wanted to say a brief note of thanks to all of our friends and family in the Marshall Islands. We've been here for 13 and 7 years respectively, and in that time we have grown to love the Marshall Islands as our home. It is with deep affection that we leave the Kwajalein Atoll. Thank you to the Iroj Family jen Kwajalein – Kabua's, especially Lerroj Seagull and Morrison for their generosity. To Queen of Peace High School and Parish, especially the ri-jikol (COTT'Z!), for everything they did for us, kommol tata. To our Fijian Family on Ebeye, North Loi, and Gugeegue -- Vinaka. We know we will see you again in Fiji. To everyone on Kwajalein, thank you! There are simply too many people to thank and too many memories to recount, but make no mistake we carry all of the love and good fortune afforded to us back to the U.S. where we will make our new home. God Bless and jeraemmon! Yokwe & Bula,

Commentary

I'm a Kwaj old-timer these days

I've been on Kwajalein for over 12 years. It seems I'm really one of the old-timers now.

In the past several months, I've seen people leave that I thought would be here forever. People who were here when I came in 1993.

Some of them I knew very well. Some of them I only had an occasional word with and waved to as we passed each other on our bikes.

Whether I knew them well or hardly at all, they were still a part of my life. They made Kwaj a unique place to live and work.

There are two goodbye letters on this page from folks who fit that description.

I saw the moon and planets on the nights Bob Carson set up his telescope at Emon Beach. Thanks, Bob.

I've lost count of all the people I no longer see and wave hello to.

Everyone who leaves takes a piece of Kwajalein with them. And that means they take a little part of me too.

Sometimes Kwaj can be a sad place as we watch friends and neighbors depart.

Hopefully they're going to good jobs and good situations.

But they will be missed by those who stay on the rock.

To all who have left and to all who are about to, take care and God bless until we meet again.

As the great Bob Hope always said, thanks for the memories.

Women show strength in Iraqi business world opportunities

by LuAnne Fantasia
Gulf Region Division
U.S. Army Corps of Engineers

With more than $270 million worth of projects open for local contractor bids, 130 Iraqi women attended a Women's Business Day at the Convention Center In Baghdad, Iraq to learn more.

The workshop was sponsored by the Projects and Contracting Office, or PCO, with co-sponsorship and support from the Gulf Region Division, or GRD, of the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers, and the Joint Contracting Command-Iraq, or JCC-I.

"This day was designed and organized to benefit the Iraqi business woman and the Reconstruction Program," said Senior Executive Service, Karen Durham-Aguilera, director of programs at PCO. "Our goal is to create diplomatic and long-lasting relationships based on our mutual desire for peace."

With every one-in-five in the Iraqi workforce being a woman, Durham-Aguilera told the group she is encouraged by their progress and pleased to be part of the workshop designed to further promote the involvement of women in the reconstruction process. As a woman with Middle-Eastern roots, she noted that it's rare in the Arab world for women to enjoy as much power as they do in Iraq.

"You have the freedom to build a better future for all of Iraq and insure that the door of opportunity is open to everyone," Durham-Aguilera said.

"Our aim is to help the women of Iraq to network and gain a helping hand for business opportunities and increased professional and economic growth," she added.

Dean Sinclair, business development manager of IAP worldwide, challenged the women to "know exactly what your company has to offer—service, product, and construction—and be the best at what you do." He asked them to visit all of the vendors' exhibits and "tell us what you can do for us."

One Iraqi woman contractor, Kate, said she usually doesn't communicate with other contractors because it's not safe to do so.

"I am surprised at the large number of women here today," she said. "It is encouraging." After living in England for 20 years, Kate returned to Iraq 6 years ago, and although her company is general construction, she expressed that she does want to specialize someday. "Right now, we just take all construction work we can get."

Another contractor, Nadia, said her company consists of five specialty companies; printing, catering, supply, maintenance and transportation.

"We have projects in Anaconda, Bayji, Al Asad, and at Camp Victory and Freedom Camp in Mosul. Some of the areas are dangerous but what am I going to do? We have to go there to work. It's our duty," Nadia said.

Many of the women met, for the first time, three representative of the Iraqi Business Women's Union—a grassroots organization that has grown from nine to 33 members in two short months. Its members are teachers, housewives, electrical engineers and commercial managers, to name a few. The founders have established bylaws and charge nothing for membership.

"We pay for everything out of our pockets, because we must do this to get this union started," one of the founders explained. "Most Iraqi women are well-educated but not working. And, we have money in our country, but we don't know how to invest it. This is our goal...to teach that."

The three women have been invited to Iran next month to study and get ideas for sorely-needed commercial products that can be produced or manufactured at home in Iraq.

"We need everything from pre-fab homes to canned foods," they said. "And, we need to train women to become business women."

Iraqi-born Azza Humadi, women's issue coordinator for the PCO, organized this event as well as numerous previous successful conferences for Iraqi business women.

The day following the event, she received an e-mail from a woman in Kirkuk to say, "... your conference is proof that Iraqi women have the main role in rebuilding Iraq ... I hope your next conference is for women and how they can develop business

... and about investment in order to foster economic growth for Iraq."

Karen Durham-Aguilera got the same feedback the day after the conference. "Many Iraqi ladies told me afterwards, and some sent me e-mails, that I touched their hearts and their minds that day with my words and our actions."

Army Col. Edwin Martin, a principal for the Joint Contracting Command-Iraq, said, "We want to encourage our prime contractors—through award incentives—to provide maximum opportunities for women-owned businesses to compete for subcontracts. We also encourage informal mentoring by our large prime contractors with the Iraqi women-owned small businesses."

(Editor's note: Fantasia was the U.S. Army Kwajalein Atoll Public Affairs officer prior to transferring to Iraq.)

Marshallese crafters use palm trees to make clothing, baskets, shelters

Weaving is a part of Marshallese culture that dates back as far as the 1700s and is still alive and well today.

According to the book Handicrafts of the Marshall Island, the finest weaving was reserved for Marshallese clothing of the past, which was made of pandanus in the same way as the mats of today.

The two materials that are generally used for weaving are pandanus and coconut fronds, said Sue Rosoff, historical preservationist. Kimej is a delicate, fine but strong membrane from which the highest grade of artifacts and the best hand-bags are made.

According to Rosoff, the new shoots from the trees are striped and put in the lagoon for a few days to be bleached. Handicrafts of the Marshall Islands says preparation of the material is a lot of work for apparently little results since the pieces are short and thinner than paper and a day's labor yields only a handful. After the material is bleached it is hung up to dry, then straightened and spread by being run through the fingers. It is often split into narrower widths for weaving and is sometimes dyed.

Handbags are one of the many different handicrafts that can be found today. Some are decorated in the traditional colors of brown and black while other are finished entirely in kimej, these are said to be the most prized Marshall artifact.

Flowers are built up on wire frames by sewing kimej and then assembled petal by petal. These handicrafts only became popular after the end of World War II. They come in all shapes and colors and new variations are constantly being devised.

Wall decorations are another popular handicraft. Their size commonly ranges from 15-18 inches in diameter but larger ones are made. The base of wall decorations is commonly malwe, stiffened strips of coconut frond, wrapped with kimej.

Baskets are another commonly found item in the Marshall Islands. The bottoms of baskets are often worked with kimej into a design and sometimes shaded. Baskets are sometimes trimmed with little shells. This craft comes in many different shapes and sizes.

Mats are made primarily with pandanus. Kimej can be used to accent it. There are mats for sitting, for sleeping, to protect against rain, to cover boats and many other things. Mats can be made quickly or with more time very detailed. The simplest, which goes on the ground under other mats, is woven from the leaves of coconut frond. Other types are made out of broad unsplit pandanus leaves sewn together. Some are joined in the middle to make it convenient for folding and warmth while sleeping.

Palm fronds are also instrumental in making ing traditional huts. The thatch huts are still being made today.

There are several other types of handicrafts that are made and available to residents and visitors of Kwajalein. For more information on weaving and Marshallese culture visit the Marshallese Culture Center across from the airport.

Rain, rain, come our way

Kwajalein experienced eighth driest winter, spring on record since 1945

By Nick Mirsky
RTS Weather meteorologist

After the wild December of 2004 in which tropical storm Talas lashed Kwajalein Atoll, the weather so far this year has been pretty benign by comparison. The rainfall through the end of May totaled only 11.89 inches, which is 17.03 inches below normal, and is the eighth driest January through May period on Kwajalein island since records began in 1945. So far, however, June has bucked this trend, with rainfall for the first six days of the month at a healthy 2.03 inches, which is above normal for a change.

If you had guessed that El-Nino has something to do with our dry weather, you would be correct. El-Nino is an oceanic and atmospheric phenomenon in the tropical Pacific that occurs every 2-5 years when easterly trade winds relax, allowing warmer water in the western equatorial Pacific to work into the central and eastern Pacific. This eastward migration of warmer water shifts heavier showers and thunderstorms to the east as well, and can lead to major changes in jet stream patterns around the world.

Naturally, given Kwajalein's location, the effect of El-Nino on our weather is direct and significant. In 2004, a weak El-Nino brought warmer water to mostly the central equatorial Pacific, and was ultimately responsible for bouts of stormy weather on Kwajalein. The 2004 El-Nino led to westerly wind events that helped spin up tropical storms close to Kwajalein (Chaba and Songda in August, Nock-Ten in October, and Talas in December), brought an unusually high number of thunderstorms, and helped to deliver a record August rainfall of 23.61 inches.

During the last few months, the El-Nino conditions have generally been in a slow decline. During the dissipating stages of an El-Nino, rainfall at Kwajalein tends to be less than normal, which helps to explain the rainfall deficit so far this year. A consensus of climate models suggests that ocean temperatures in general through this fall shouldn't stray very far from normal.

So, what are the rainfall prospects for the upcoming months? If rainfall were to continue at the January through May rate of 40 percent of normal, we would end up with about 40 inches for the year. Given that the minimum yearly rainfall since 1945 is 59.35 inches, a record-breaking 40 inches for the year is unlikely. Some simple analysis of our monthly rainfall record suggests that the upcoming June through August period will continue to be drier than normal, however, the rainfall rate will pick up appreciably. Looking at the top 12 driest January through May periods (2005 is ranked eighth), total rainfall for the subsequent June through August periods were below normal in all cases except for one. Excluding the lowest case and the highest case, the average June through August rainfall for the remaining cases is 4.45 inches below average, or about 85 percent of average.

The U.S. Climate Prediction Center's statistical model that produces rainfall outlooks for tropical Pacific islands and atolls is predicting slightly below normal rainfall on Kwajalein for the June through August period, while the rainfall outlook for September through October is slightly above normal. CPC also states that the confidence in these particular forecasts are low. The Pacific ENSO Applications Center is also predicting near-normal rainfall through October.

These model forecasts may very well have value over the long run, however, they are limited by the inherently chaotic nature of the atmosphere, and rely on a limited amount of statistics that change as climate changes. Hopefully, the rainy start to the month of June does indeed signal a return to a more normal rainfall pattern here on Kwajalein.

Multiple efforts attempted to repair Richardson, all leads being pursued

By Nell M. Drumheller
Editor

The Richardson Theater, Kwajalein's ride-your-bike-up and sit-outside movie venue, has been out of order since March 26.

But just because there hasn't been a movie on the screen doesn't mean that nothing is happening.

"Honestly, we are trying to fix this machine with every horse we have in the stable. It is our biggest wish to get the Rich on line and we are doing everything in our power to make it happen," said Simone Smead, Kwajalein Range Services Community Activities manager.

The computer that facilitates playing the movies is kaput. Extensive efforts have been going on behind the scenes since the projector went down. "Community Activities has been working in concert with off-island technical representative from Cinema Dealers in California who were involved in the initial set up. We have also worked directly with the Barco Projector manufacturer in Belgium to obtain further assistance," Smead said. The process for fixing a highly sophisticated piece of equipment like the projector is to trouble shoot; which is basically a process of elimination. "Unfortunately, we have had to go very deep in the process but with each attempt we are narrowing down the problem," she added.

Smead is as anxious as other island movie goers to get the Richardson back in action, but says there's not definite date for a fix. "We cannot provide a specific date for completion because we are continuing to work the problem. What we can tell you is that fixing the projector has been our top priority and not a day goes by that efforts are not being made on behalf of the projector," she added.

According to Smead this is a very sophisticated piece of equipment that rivals or exceeds the complexity of some of the mission assets on island.

The steps taken to repair the projector have been time consuming. "Sometimes the efforts are actually inserting and testing a new board. Other times the efforts include submitting new orders through procurement based on the latest testing results and subsequent needs; Additional efforts include making transportation arrangements to expedite parts, communicating with off-site technical representatives for extensive remote testing, and also tracking the parts when they are in system to make sure the parts are properly met along each step of the way, for example KRS receiving in Honolulu catches the parts being FedExed and then places them on the next available flight to Kwaj.

"Sometimes things take time and unfortunately this is one of those situations. It's not because of lack of effort. And, when we do bring it on line, we will have a grand re-opening with treats for all! We certainly appreciated everyone's patience during this process. Thank you," Smead said.

Inventory closes Ten/Ten for two days, Surfway will be open for extended hours

By Nell M. Drumheller
Editor

An annual inventory will close Ten/Ten Wednesday and Thursday, but Surfway will have extended hours to support the community, according to Paul Divinski, manager, Retail Merchandising and Provisioning.

Surfway will be open extended hours, from 10 a.m. to 8 p.m. on those days. C-Badge workers are authorized to shop at Surfway for these two days.

Additional amounts of wines and tobacco are being transferred to Surfway before Wednesday.

"Also, a selection of best sellers in liquors, liqueurs and specialty beers are being transferred to be available for purchase by K-Badged adults on the sales floor at Surfway during these two days," Divinski said.

Divinski added that both stores carry grocery items, wine, tobacco and categories like health and beauty aids and books/magazines. Surfway carries a much more extensive variety of grocery, produce, frozen meats and other items and chill grocery items.

Merchandise inventories of stores are typically performed once per year. Divinski said that time of inventories will vary by store size and amount of merchandise, but typically it takes two days to perform complete store facility (not warehouses) inventory of a store like Ten/Ten or Gimbel's.

The inventories are a necessary part of business and Divinski said that taking merchandise inventories in the stores is a contract requirement, and allows comparison of actual physical merchandise inventories on hand to the "book" record of inventories on hand. Comparisons of results are used to determine if merchandise is missing, and also to measure effectiveness of inventory control procedures and systems.

"It takes the staff of the store being inventoried, plus additional people from other retail merchandising and provisioning stores, and staff from the Quality Insurance Department is involved in the inventories as Inventory Auditors," he added.

"Store sales-floor inventories are planned for each store, and will be completed by October 1. As at Ten/Ten, announcements will be posted on the Roller, in the Hourglass, KRS Newsline and there will be signs on the doors of the stores several weeks prior to inventory dates," Divinski said.

The Wedding Date. A gal who needs a date for a family function gets the best man money can buy in this romantic comedy. Kat Ellis (Debra Messing) is a woman in her mid-thirties living in New York City and has had more than her share of romantic problems — enough so that she's gotten word that her younger half-sister Amy (Amy Adams) is getting married, and that her mother Bunny (Holland Taylor) and father Victor (Peter Egan) want to fix her up with someone so she won't look alone and miserable for the big day. Adding insult to injury, Kat learns that the best man at the ceremony will be Jeffrey (Jeremy Sheffield), a former boyfriend who cruelly dumped her without warning two years before. Determined not to show up alone, Kat swallows her pride and hires Nick Mercer (Dermot Mulroney), a professional escort, who will pose as her boyfriend for a $6,000 fee. Kat and Nick fly to England for the wedding, and her family and friends are all struck by how charming, handsome, and personable Nick is — and Kat begins wondering if their relationship has to be all business; however, as it turns out, Nick understands Kat far better than she expects.

Million Dollar Baby. Frankie Dunn (Clint Eastwood) is a veteran boxing trainer who has devoted his life to the ring and has precious little to show for it; his daughter never answers his letters, and a fighter he's groomed into contender status has paid him back by signing with another manager, leaving Frankie high and dry. His best friend and faithful employee Eddie Dupris is a former fighter who Frankie trained. In his last fight, Eddie suffered a severe injury, a fact that brings Frankie great guilt. One day, Maggie Fitzgerald (Hilary Swank) enters Frankie's life, as well as his gym, and announces she needs a trainer. Frankie regards her as a dubious prospect, and isn't afraid to tell her why: he doesn't think much of women boxing, she's too old at 31, she lacks experience, and has no technique. However, Maggie sees boxing as the one part of her life that gives her meaning and won't give up easily. Finally won over by her determination, Frankie takes on Maggie, and as she slowly grows into a viable fighter, an emotional bond develops between them.

Hospital offers tips to men for good health

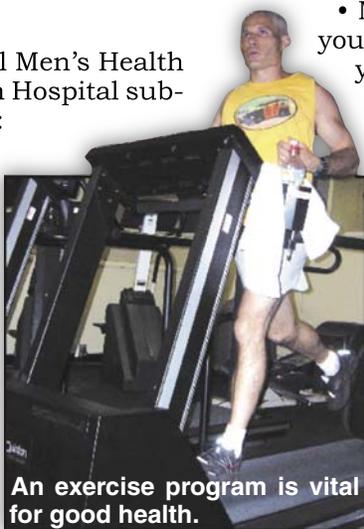

Hourglass reports

June 13 through Sunday was National Men's Health Week. Marion Ruffing from the Kwajalein Hospital submitted the following health tips for men:

- Maintain a healthy weight: Risk of certain conditions such as heart disease and stroke increases with excess weight.

- Be smoke-free: Quit today. If you smoke or use smoke-less tobacco, quitting reduces your chance of cancer and lung disease. Second-hand smoke affects other people's health.

- Take advantage of routine exams and screenings for early detection: When problems are found early, your chances for treatment and cure are better.

- Manage stress: Balance your obligations to your employer and to your family. Don't forget your own needs in the process.

- Know yourself and your risks: Genetics and family history, your habits, work and home environment and your lifestyle help define your health and your risks.

- Be safe – protect yourself: Apply sunscreen, wear protective equipment, wash your hands and watch your relationships.

- Be good to yourself: Health is not the absence of disease, health is a lifestyle. Balance work, home and play. Make healthful life choices.

For more information, call Ruffing at 55362.
