I apologize for inaccurate commentary statement

As hard as it is to believe, I can be wrong sometimes. If you listen to what my wife says, it's more like all the time, but what does she know?

Anyway, after reading the first actual reviews of the Dakota Fanning film Wednesday evening (it was shown at the Sundance Film Festival and most of the reviews I saw called it a stinker), it appears it's not Fanning's father (in the film) who commits the sexual assault as I wrote in the Jan. 20 issue, but a 20-year-old milk delivery man.

I wrote the piece based on the best available information I had at the time. Even though commentaries are basically opinion pieces, I strive to be as accurate as I can and try to research subjects thoroughly before I write about them. I care very much that my facts are right.

As far as I know, I haven't been factually incorrect in the past, but if it ever comes to my attention that I'm in error, I'll take the hit and let you know I was wrong. I apologize to readers for my inaccurate statement.

Letters to the editor

Resident questions health insurance 'piggybacking' issue

At the last Kwaj Town Hall Meeting, an audience member wanted to know why KRS doesn't "piggyback" on its parent companies, Bechtel and Lockheed Martin, to get lower rates for health insurance. KRS responded that they are a separate entity from the other two companies and that it isn't legal for KRS to use their insurance (Nov. 18 The Kwajalein Hourglass).

But in the June 11, 2004 edition of The Kwajalein Hourglass, Ike Richardson, then president of KRS, said that KRS piggybacked on Bechtel to secure the bid prices from Aetna.

If it was done then, why can't it be done now? Since there will be no town hall meeting until May, will KRS please tell us what changed in two years?

Reader challenges opinions in Dakota Fanning commentary

This is in response to Dan Adler's commentary, "Some lines should never be crossed." While I see the basic moral intent of Adler's column, I feel that I should challenge some of the opinions expressed in the piece.

Quoting Adler, "Movies rated R can show life as it really is and sometimes make strong statements for reform and change."

For all we know, the movie Hounddog could be one of those films that "makes a strong statement for reform and change." As Adler states, he "has not seen the movie" and "may be misjudging it." The movie is being shown at the upcoming Sundance Film Festival and the final cut has not yet been made, and in my opinion, no one can rightfully judge a film without actually seeing it first. From what I've heard, Dakota Fanning was not harmed during the filming

Marshallese government grant makes training reality, students learn sophisticated automotive diagnostic skills

By Nell Drumheller
Editor

Thanks to a $100,000 grant from the Republic of the Marshall Islands National Training Council, ten men are becoming better mechanics.

The ten-day training program ended today at Kwajalein Range Services automotive department. The program focused on basic automotive electrical systems.

"The funding was provided by the RMI National Training Council from a grant was awarded in April and set aside for KRS RMI employees' skill development programs," Romeo J. Alfred, Marshallese Training and Employment Program Human Resources representative said. "In addition to the automotive program, a Pharmacy Technician program at the Kwaj hospital was funded by that same training grant."

Alfred explained, "This is one of the program initiatives outlined under the Marshallese Training and Employment Program where KRS tries to identify ideal positions customarily held by off-island contract hires which RMI employees could realistically be trained to fill using available resources."

The students included two men from Majuro.

"The trainees were selected by their respective supervisors with input from the RMI Training Coordinator," Alfred said.

Roki Kiluwe, a high school teacher from Majuro and one of the trainees, said he will take what he learned and offer coursework to his students. He said he was chosen to attend this program because he has a background in electronics. "I've learned a lot. I've learned about troubleshooting," Kiluwe said of the program. He added with a smile, "And I can fix my car when I get home."

The other trainee from Majuro, Labads Telman, is a mechanic. He said the training was good and that he uses the same type of equipment.

Steve Mont came from Tucson, Ariz. to teach the class. He said the program balanced classroom and hands-on training. "Technical English is difficult for everyone," Mont said. But he said while the language differences could have been barriers, students in the program helped out one another. Mont added that the students had a basic understanding of the electrical systems but that some of the diagnostic tools used in the class were new to them.

"Nearly two years ago, the Automotive Department was experiencing difficulty attracting candidates to fill many of its open off-island slots," Alfred said, explaining how the program evolved. "The RMI training department was approached by Tim O'Rourke, a Six Sigma Black Belt, who was looking at possibilities of addressing the automotive recruitment issue from a training standpoint, i.e., train RMI employees to fill some of these Auto Mech positions. Funding was the primary setback in providing high quality training for these RMI employees. We contacted NTC, and the rest is history."

Other career paths are being considered for RMI

NTC funding. "Among others," Alfred said of the training programs, "we're currently working out the final details for a Heating Ventilation Air Conditioning and Refrigeration training program for RMI employees at Public Works."

Alfred continued, "I think the benefits to the Marshallese are pretty obvious. Higher skills equate to higher pays and higher tax returns for the RMI government. Placing RMI employees in skilled level positions which are customarily held by off-island hires represent huge savings for the customer in recruitment costs, retention costs, as well as travel, housing, and other off-island benefits. In addition, these types of programs provide our RMI employees with well-documented skills that they could market outside of the Marshall Islands, including the United States." For more information on this program, contact Alfred at 59778.

Singers, musicians, comedians keep up tradition of bringing little bit of home to those serving overseas

By Nell Drumheller
Editor

Traditionally entertainers travel overseas to bring a bit of home and a change of pace to men and women serving in the military. During World War II, the Korean War and the Vietnam conflict, internationally-recognized celebrities toughed-out unpleasant conditions and often enemy fire to lighten the load of America's service men and women in harm's way. So it is today.

"Armed Forces Entertainment is the official Department of Defense agency tasked with providing entertainment to U.S. military personnel overseas," Kim Parker, Community Activities entertainment supervisor said. "Each year AFE hosts more than 1,000 shows around the world, reaching an estimated half a million people at 270 military installations."

On Wednesday and Thursday nights the AFE entertainer Cindy Alexander and her band performed on Roi-Namur and Kwajalein.

AFE hosts "up and coming" talent, and Alexander fits the bill. The pint-sized singer-songwriter has been acclaimed by music critics in her native Los Angeles and was named the Songwriter of the Year at the L.A. Music Awards. In November Alexander won the NBC reality program Star Tomorrow which pitted musicians, via the Web, against each other. Votes were tallied on line after viewers watched the groups' videos.

"This is the most worthwhile thing I've done with my music," Alexander said prior to her Thursday concert on Emon Beach.

"I've always wanted to perform for the troops," she added. The U.S. Army Kwajalein Atoll leg came at the end of her three-week trip through the Pacific. They had already performed in Japan and Guam. The travel, long hours and flights had begun to take its toll on the musician and her group. But her the-show-must-go-on spirit pumped her up for one more performance.

Alexander said the process to become an AFE performer was long. "After a year, it happened," she said. "I know this is not a tourist location. I am a World War II history buff. It's an honor to be here."

AFE has six regional circuits. Kwajalein is one of the Pacific Circuit tour sites. "Each installation on the Pacific Circuit submits individual annual entertainment requests, and then the Pacific Region coordinator, Frank Tagatac, compiles everything," Parker said. Tagatac consolidates the entertainment requirements and sends it to the Chief of AFE. "They draft a plan to try to distribute entertainment fairly, but priority is given to contingency operations, then remote and isolated locations. They hash everything out at the AFE Annual Conference and try to finalize tour plans, then the chief has to sign off on everything.

"Each year I submit an annual entertainment request that prioritizes the type of acts we would like to host, the number of acts we can support, and the specific time of year when we would like to host these groups," Parker said.

"That being said, what's on the entertainment plan for the year isn't always exactly what happens," Parker added. "There are a lot of variables trying to scout talent and find a certain type of band that's available in a certain timeframe.

"We make specific requests for entertainment, but, we don't always get what ask for. We're just grateful for anything AFE can send our way," Parker said.

AFE is a division of the U.S. Air Force and AFE foots most of the bill for the traveling shows. Local Morale, Welfare and Recreation organizations, or as things are within USAKA, Kwajalein Range Services, feeds, lodges and offers local transportation for the AFE groups. "Community Activities does not pay to bring AFE groups to Kwajalein or Roi. The Air Force funds it through the employees, we all benefit from these relationships, but they are not the cure for every problem. Richardson used the term “piggyback” referring to the fact that KRS went through our parent companies to help us in locating and obtaining Aetna’s services. Bechtel, in particular, has a very large international account with Aetna. If Bechtel had not intervened, Aetna might not have even offered services to a company as small and remote as KRS, and we might still have the lesser coverage that Staywell provided. Indeed, when KRS was looking at other options in 2004, at least one other insurer declined to consider covering us. So the relationship got us in the door with a major, reliable provider. However, the rates that were set for KRS were (and are) based on the claims experience for our employees, and they are in no way affected by the rates that the parent companies receive. That’s what we were saying at the November Town Hall meeting.

By the way, Farris and other Hourglass readers should note that they don’t need to wait for the next Town Hall meeting to get their questions answered. They can address them through their chain of command, or for HR issues simply call Human Resources. If you are not sure who to contact, e-mail or call Bob Bills at 50767.

of the one-minute scene and a child welfare official was there along with the actresses’ mother and agent. The shot was supposedly made using above the shoulder camera angles.

There are said to be two taboos in mainstream film which are child abuse and the killing of animals. Both happen to be unfortunate realities, but what’s to stop a filmmaker from using either in a motion picture?

Sometimes it takes a bit of in-your-face cinema to bring a topic into the mainstream and encourage active debate on the subject.

Calling for a boycott of the movie by asking people to “keep their money in their pockets” and to “stay away from the film” sounds more like a head-in-the-sand approach. I would encourage adults to see the film and to form their own opinion. If Hounddog features scenes of child abuse, it may be unpleasant for the viewer, but why shouldn’t it be? It’s a highly unpleasant reality.

was excited to offer our valued Kwajalein customers this new service, which originates in Guam. Unfortunately, due to the nature of U.S. Army Kwajalein Atoll, the airline cannot sell many Guam-to-Kwajalein tickets. In addition, Kwajalein’s population declined by almost 25 percent during the past year, reducing the number of passengers on both the non-stop flight to Honolulu as well as the Kwajalein-Majuro-Honolulu flight.

As a result, the one-stop flight has not been viable during the off-peak period of the year. Instead of cancelling the flight, Continental Micronesia decided to change the year-round, one-stop flight routing Guam – Majuro – Honolulu, which will take effect on March 3. This routing will benefit our customers on Kwajalein by increasing the total number of seats in the market and opening up seats for Kwajalein customers on the normal island-hopper flights.

We understand the preference for the non-stop flight, and we will certainly provide that service to our valued customers in Kwajalein during the peak summer travel period so that most will enjoy that convenience. The flight will operate on Tuesdays from June 5 through Aug. 28.

We would also like to take this opportunity to thank Bolen, her family and all of our Kwajalein customers for their continued support.

Cub Scout Pack 135 holds annual Pinewood Derby

Hourglass reports

Cub Scout Pack 135 held its annual Pinewood Derby Monday in the high school multi-purpose room.

There were 12 Scout entries, two family member entries and 10 'celebrity' entries which included AirScan Pacific, Kwajalein Fire Department, Blessed Sacrament Parish, Ron Tsubamoto, Reno [Nevada] Police Department, Island Memorial Chapel and U.S. Army Kwajalein Atoll.

The race cars sped down the new aluminum track which replaced the old wooden track.

The new track was purchased with funds raised solely by the Scouts. The new track is 48 feet long with four lanes.

An electronic timer was used to send race signals to a computer that displayed the finish

The Last Kiss A successful 30-year-old (Zach Braff) with a maverick girlfriend (Jacinda Barrett) and a lucrative outlook on life struggles with the increasing pressures of adulthood as he weighs the merits of settling down with the woman who loves him against risking it all to be with a comely co-ed (Rachel Bilson) in director Tony Goldwyn's remake of Gabriele Muccino's 2001 comedy drama. Crash and Million Dollar Baby screenwriter Paul Haggis adapts a script originally penned by Italian filmmaker Muccino, and Casey Affleck, Eric Christian Olsen, and Tom Wilkinson co-star.

Flicka A young woman pins her hopes and dreams on a maverick horse in this drama based on the classic novel by Mary O'Hara. Katy (Alison Lohman) is the teenage daughter of a horse rancher (Tim McGraw) who is grooming his son to take over the family business, while Katy is sent to an exclusive private school where she feels like a misfit. One day, while out riding, Katy finds a wild horse, a beautiful black mustang, and she feels an emotional connection with the animal. While her father is convinced having a mustang around his herd will be bad for both his thoroughbred ponies and the wild horse, Katy is certain she can break the strong-willed steed and make him a champion, and she even gives the horse a name — Flicka. As Katy struggles to tame the headstrong Flicka, she also tries to prove to her father that she knows horses as well as he does, and that she's every bit as capable of running the ranch as her brother.

Everyone's Hero A young baseball fan sets out on a cross-country quest to recover Babe Ruth's stolen bat and restore his father's good name in a computer animated family adventure that shows you're never too young to be a hero. Yankee Irving (voice of Jake T. Austin) may not be the best base-runner in his neighborhood, but his love of the game is about to lead him on the adventure of a lifetime when a legendary baseball bat is stolen from Yankee stadium on his father's watch. Now he is determined to get back the bat from the crooked security guard who swiped it (voice of William H. Macy) and place it back in the grip of the best hitter in baseball history.

HEAVY EQUIPMENT operations are planned at the Roi-Namur Small Boat Marina piers to remove accumulated fill material (sand/rubble). Based on available data, the dinoflagellate, gambierdiscus toxicus, is known to exist in sediment material around USAKA. This dinoflagellate carries the toxin that produces ciguatera, and the activity at the piers could intensify the potential for ciguatera contamination of fish stocks. Areas where dredging and/or filling activities are ongoing or have recently occurred should always be avoided for fish harvesting. Please avoid the Roi-Namur Small Boat Marina area for fishing and subsequent fish consumption until March 1.

AFE program, and they typically spend close to $75,000 or more to send ONE group on tour for around 30 days," Parker said.

Entertainers available through AFE are varied. "Kwaj has hosted bands from reggae to country and everything in between; comedians, magicians, professional wrestlers, a band of dancing fuzzy dogs - Raggs Kids Club Band, professional cheerleaders, actors, writers, Polynesian dance troupes to name a few. The fuzzy dancing dogs' troupe was one of the strangest things I've seen, but it was honestly very entertaining and the kids loved it," Parker said.

While the dollar amount coming out of local coffers is low, the man hours and attention to detail aren't. "They treated us like family," Alexander said of her welcome on Roi-Namur and Kwajalein.
