Would she be alive if not for MySpace?

I have a 13-year-old niece back in the states. Bless her heart, she has a lot of problems.

She's overweight, wears glasses, is a little slow in learning and, well, she didn't get much in the looks department. On top of that, she has a very hard time communicating with teens her own age.

Because of the teasing and cruel remarks she gets at school, she has had a very rough time. She has absolutely no self esteem and no feeling of self worth. She suffers from depression and attention deficit disorder.

My brother and sister-in-law have taken her to many doctors and she is on medications for her depression. They are at their wits end about what to do for her. They worry every day that something may drive her to commit suicide.

Since I'm close to such a bad situation, I was very angry and saddened when I heard the story of a 13-year-old girl in Missouri who was the victim of a cruel hoax perpetrated on MySpace that was reported on CNN.

The girls' name was Megan Meier. She too suffered from depression and attention deficit disorder and was on medication. She also apparently had trouble making friends.

Megan had a MySpace page and one day a boy named Josh started corresponding with her and told her he wanted to be friends. Her mother said Megan was very happy when chatting with Josh on the Web site. She thought she had made a really good friend.

But after a month, 'Josh' told her that he didn't want to be her friend anymore because he had heard she was mean and said bad things about her friends. At the same time, postings started showing up on the site saying such things as 'Megan is fat' and 'Megan is a slut.'

The next day, the young girl killed herself.

This incident would be incredibly tragic even if 'Josh' had been real. But he wasn't. He was made up by a family down the street from where Megan lived. The reason? Megan had been friends with a teen girl in that family until they had a fight and quit being friends.

The girl's mother was the one who set up the MySpace account for 'Josh' to lure Megan in only to crush her later. The woman told police that the entire family was involved in the hateful postings to Megan.

There is nothing that can be done to those people legally. They broke no law. It's not against the law to play a cruel hoax on a vulnerable child, unfortunately. Megan's family probably can't even sue those awful people responsible for driving Megan to suicide.

That all seems real fair doesn't it?

Like most everyone, when I was growing up, I experienced some teasing because I wore glasses and heard the old 'four-eyes' stuff. And, as we all know, to a child, that kind of thing can be devastating. I'm ashamed to say I did some of it to other children as well.

Most children endure some teasing and bullying, and in turn, dish it out to children weaker or more geeky than

Santa's arrival parade, Winterfest, downtown block party set for Dec. 1

By Nell Drumheller

Santa and Mrs. Claus will land on Kwajalein sometime between 5 and 5:15 p.m. on Dec. 1 according to an inside source employed at Santa's North Pole Toy Factory.

"This year's Kwajalein parade and tree lighting ceremony will be different than years past," explained the insider.

"The route is going to be slightly changed, because of the event location change," she continued.

"Santa and his entourage will park across the street from Macy's where Santa will take a short break in the Adult Recreation Center while waiting for the tree lighting ceremony to begin at 6:15 p.m.," she added.

This year's Christmas tree lighting ceremony will include a 12-foot artificial tree located on Macy's lawn facing Ten-Ten. The tree lighting ceremony was moved to this location to consolidate the activities of the ceremony and the Retail Winterfest, and also because the Yokwe Yuk Club is closed.

The tree-lighting ceremony is scheduled from 6:15-7:15 p.m. Simone Smead will emcee; the high school band and choir will perform, local girl scouts will sing, the Keckhoff high-energy dance troupe will perform, LTC Harold Buhl will speak, and then Santa will flip the switch, lighting the tree and officially starting the holiday season.

After that, Retail's Winterfest kicks off with special one-day sales at the stores, holiday basket drawings, and wine tasting in front of Ten-Ten. Child and Youth Services will have activities for children, and weather permitting, the joust and bounce house will be up for youngsters.

Dining Services will have pork sandwiches, corndogs, cotton candy, popcorn and chips for sale at the downtown block party.

The Oceanview Club will be open with full bar service and there will be frozen Margaritas, chips, salsa and island quesadillas for sell near the post office.

"Out of all of the places Santa and Mrs. Claus visit during each holiday season, Kwajalein is a favorite," Santa's spokesperson said. "Sure, part of it is the great change in weather, but it's also the enthusiastic reception we've gotten over the past 40 years. It makes us eager to come back year after year."

Schedule of events Dec. 1

- 5-5:15 p.m., Santa's arrives at the airport
- 5:15-6 p.m., Santa's parade to block party
- 5 p.m.-7:30 p.m., block party downtown
- 6-6:15 p.m., Santa arrives at block party
- 6:15-7:15 p.m., tree lighting ceremony
- 7:30-10 p.m., Winterfest

Iraqis work to fight insurgents

Local neighborhood-watch programs confront terrorists

By Capt. Johnny Giroux, USA

Determined to rise up against al Qaeda terrorists, concerned local citizens, working together with coalition forces, have started neighborhood watch programs in this area of northern Iraq.

The citizens are calling the movement "Sahwa," an Arabic term that means "awakening."

The neighborhood watch programs were established Nov. 14, two weeks after local citizens approached Soldiers of the 10th Mountain Division's 1st Brigade Combat Team, 1st Battalion, 87th Infantry Regiment, with the idea. More than 1,000 citizens showed up, ready to be recruited to take up arms in defense against the terrorists in the region.

The program provides the citizens with weapons and a regular paycheck and has the goal not only of providing employment, but also improving security throughout the region.

"This is the biggest thing going on (for the local Iraqis) ... because one, it's putting money in their pockets and stimulating the local economy, and two, these people really want to provide their own security," said Maj. John Allen, 1-87 Infantry operations officer.

These newly drafted members of the local Multaka Night Watch, as they also are known, will take to the streets as sentinels against terrorist activity while receiving salaries based on the effectiveness of their performance.

For example, for every roadside bomb attack that occurs in their neighborhood, a certain amount of money will be withheld from that pay period as a penalty, while consistent periods of tranquility will be rewarded with bonuses.

"What this program is doing is creating significant problems for the insurgents, because it drives a wedge between them and the populace," said Army 2nd Lt. Alan Finnie, 1-87 Infantry. "By taking away the one incentive advantage the insurgents had over the government, namely money, the people now have every reason to reject terrorist intimidation and embrace the responsibility of eliminating (al Qaeda in Iraq) influence in their communities."

As a result, coalition and Iraqi forces benefit from the increased freedom of maneuver provided by the citizens groups, allowing them to more effectively seek out and eliminate the terrorist threat, Finnie said, also noting that many recruits appeared quite enthusiastic.

"It was good to see regular people showing up in street clothes taking pride in their own area so they can stand on their own feet and provide their own security instead of relying on us to do it for them," said Army Cpl. Evan Siegrist, 1-87 Infantry Personal Security Detachment squad leader.

Such a show of force by Iraqi citizens willing to confront terrorists sends a message to insurgents that their destructive influence among the population will no longer be tolerated.

"Al Qaeda in Iraq is threatened by the Sahwa," Allen said as he described immediate intelligence reports of disrupted terrorist movements due to citizens group activity.

The success of this initial recruitment effort marks the beginning of a two week-long initiative to enlist volunteers for the program throughout the 1-87 Infantry Battalion's area of operation.

Youth flag football games showcase good defensive play, wet-weather battle

By Jason Kettenhofen
Child and Youth Sports program

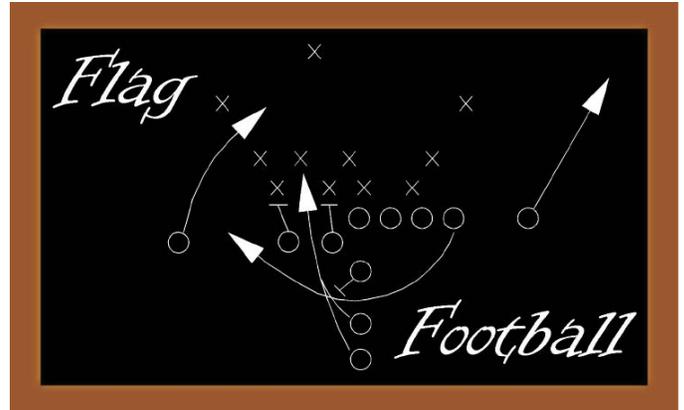

The first Child and Youth Services Flag Football Game was a defensive battle, with Tom Wright's Yellow Kwaj Dogz facing Marvin Lovato's Green Team on Nov. 17. The first half had some good running plays by both teams, but when it mattered most the defense came up with nice pass deflections to break up big play possibilities. The only score of the game came in the second half on a receiving touchdown to Yellow Kwaj Dogz' Annie Hepler. A great job by both teams.

On Tuesday, with rain in the forecast the Yellow Kwaj Dogz took the field to play the Blue Team. During a downpour, Blue Team's Keith Brady returned the opening kickoff for a touchdown. Lutha Tomas and Chi Chi Kemem coach the Blue Team.

The first half had a number of punts as the teams battled the wet conditions. The Yellow Kwaj Dogz got things going later in the first half as Jimmy Beio threw a 10-yard pass to Annie for a touchdown. The extra point conversion was successful to Logan Everts.

The second half was a bit of the same as far as the weather, but the teams focused on the game as the Yellow Kwaj Dogz' Justin Hill caught a 15-yard touchdown pass. Midway through the second half Annie ran ten yards for a Yellow Kwaj Dogz touchdown. Later in the half the Blue Team scored on a big play as Kaulu Kaluhiokalani threw a 40-yard pass to Keith. Kaulu had two interceptions on the day for the Blue Team. A well played game by the players and coaches.

Outdoor illumination prohibited after midnight

Hourglass reports

The U.S. Army Kwajalein Atoll/Reagan Test Site regulation covering housing management was updated on Oct. 1.

A part of Reg. 210-50 covers exterior lighting, including holiday decorations.

The regulation states that outside lights must be turned off during daylight hours. This applies at all times of the year.

Specifically referencing holiday hours, the regulation defines when and how the 'electrical consuming decorations' may be used within USAKA.

Exterior lighting (including decorations) and other miscellaneous electrical appliances must be turned off after midnight.

Also, no Christmas or New Years exterior electrical consuming decorations will be allowed prior to Dec. 1 or after Jan. 3 of each year.

There are a few exceptions to the rule requiring that lights be turned off at midnight: for solar powered yard and porch lamps and for U.S. flag lighting.

Happy Holidays

The Kwajalein Holiday Party sponsored by Kwajalein Range Services will be 7-11:30 p.m., Dec. 15, in the Davye Davis Multi-Purpose Room. The plated, sit-down dinner will be served at 7:30 p.m. Latecomers will not be fed. The dress for the evening is island formal. Tickets are $15 and are available at the Community Activities office in Building 805.

Championship meet gives young swimmers chance to show talent

By Nell Drumheller
Editor

More than 75 young people competed in each of the two swimming seasons annually on Kwajalein.

The area surrounding the Family Pool, including the viewing stands, was packed Monday for the championship meet for the 2007 fall season.

While it might have appeared to be swimmers against swimmers, according to Head Coach Sarah Stepchew, the athletes were really trying to outdo themselves.

"Swimmers of all abilities are able to earn ribbons since we reward not only the first, second and third place swimmers but the personal achievement, or personal bests, for each swimmer," Stepchew said.

All of the competitors spend quite a bit of time in the water.

"We schedule three to four swim meets per season, roughly from three-to-four weeks apart depending on the length of the particular season. The last meet of the seasons is considered the championship meet during which the swimmers are expected to demonstrate the skills they've honed all season. The swimmers earn ribbons during the regular season meets and medals at the championship meets," Stepchew continued.

"The swimmers are divided up at the beginning of the season into two teams, the Mako Sharks and the Barracudas," explained Amy LaCost, a coach for the eight and under group. She added, "The coaches try to divide the swimmers evenly so we have good competition. However, coaches and parents always stress that swimmers are actually competing against themselves to be better.

The best ribbons are personal best ribbons."

Stepchew explained the team break down further, "Each team is broken into three age groups for the practice sessions that are held three times per week: 8 and under, 9-12 years and 13+. Each age group has its own set of coaches, this season we have approximately nine coaches."

Though the next swim season doesn't begin until January and runs through April, many of the older swimmers train all year.

Even though some of the competitors are young, they all know how to swim before joining a team.

"Swimmers must be able to swim at least 25 yards of free style. Swimmers who are age 9 and older must be able to swim 50 yards of free-style," LaCost said.

"We are happy to have attracted a handful of young swimmers from Ebeye again this season and hope to continue to foster their participation on the swim team. They have to juggle boat schedules, sponsorship issues, language difficulties and Ebeye school schedules but still manage to make it to practice with a smile," Stepchew said.

John Landgraff and Susan Landgraff, Rick Larkin, Glenn Hibberts, Rachael Stepchew and Judy Kirchner also coached this season. Lora Kendrick is the program's president; Valerie Hill the vice president and Jane Premo is the treasurer.

Mission Operations Maintenance Contract Process Improvement Project : A Six Sigma team reviewed maintenance agreements which were an annual recurring expense. Through analysis, the FY07 costs were eliminated by replacing these agreements through the procurement of used SGI hardware for on site inventory and obtaining maintenance training. This eliminated the need for the services provided through the contract and resulted in $200,000 in savings.

they are. It's just the way it's always been and probably always will be.

But, away from school and the outside world, home should be a refuge for them. But, these days it seems children can't get away from bullying and teasing even at home. They can be savaged on a site like MySpace that many of their classmates can see. How much worse the teasing and bullying must be for children today. I can't even imagine it.

Even so, as I said, one might expect children to tease other children.

But when an 'adult,' a mother no less, can do something so vile to a troubled child, it boggles the mind. Anger doesn't begin to describe what I feel towards such an apparently very stupid and hateful person.

Of course, I never knew Megan, but I know my niece. And I know there are thousands of children out there just like the two of them. It worries and saddens me that they could actually be driven to end their young lives because of something posted on a stupid Web site. I hear so many horror stories about that MySpace site and others, I wonder why they exist and why parents allow their children to use them.

I've stated in previous columns that I think the Internet is one of the worst things in the world today. It breeds and spreads hatred, lures children into sick porn sites, enables sexual predators to stalk children and has given rise to new ways to commit crime.

I don't know if anyone keeps statistics on such things, but I'll bet we would be shocked at how many children have been lured into being sexually molested and/or murdered and driven over the edge to commit suicide by what they encountered on the Internet.

There are no laws regulating such Web sites as MySpace. The only regulators that can be effective are parents.

I can guarantee that if I had a teenager, he or she wouldn't be using MySpace or any other such Web site. They wouldn't be allowed to use 'chat' rooms or any of those 'friends' sites.

If that would make my teen think I was 'out of touch,' an 'old fart,' or the 'worst parent ever,' that would be just too bad.

I can't say for sure, and neither could anyone else, that Megan Meier and others like her would still be alive today if not for MySpace and other such Web sites, but my guess is they would be.

Here's a clue for you, parents. There's nobody looking out for your children except you. Nobody cares but you. Only by remaining vigilant and being strong enough to say no to your child about using sites on the Internet and other things, can more tragedies like Megan's be prevented.
