THE KWAJALEIN HOURGLASS

Honor all those who served

As we prepare to observe Memorial Day, I encourage all USASMDC/ARSTRAT Soldiers, civilians, contractors and Family members to reflect on those who served before us to defend our freedoms and protect our democracy.

While Memorial Day marks the traditional beginning of the summer season, it is also the beginning of the 101 Critical Days of Summer. These are the days between Memorial Day and Labor Day when there is a significant increase in off-duty accidents and injuries. Leaders must reiterate the importance of safety awareness and education prior to Memorial Day and the summer season. We should focus our discussions on alcohol use, fatigue, speeding, the use of the buddy system and standards.

If you are traveling this Memorial Day weekend, remember to allot enough time to safely reach your destination, wear seat belts and do not drink and drive.

I wish all of the members of the USASMDC/ARSTRAT Family a very safe Memorial Day and ask that you take a moment to remember, with appreciation and pride, those who gave their lives for the noble causes of freedom and peace. Thanks for all you do every day for the men and women serving around the world.

Secure the high ground!

— Lt. Gen. Kevin T. Campbell
Commanding General

Time for some spring cleaning

Yokwe community,

As we approach the beginning of the summer and the end of another school year, it is good to reflect and take time this Memorial Day weekend to enjoy our freedoms as well as take time to relax with family and friends.

As always, I ask that you do so in a responsible and safe manner. A great time can be clouded by an accident that could have been prevented if we only took the additional precautions.

I ask, as always, to not only look out for your family and friends but to also look out for the community.

We should also take this opportunity to catch up and do a little pre-summer clean up.

Some of you have done a great job in clearing up the clutter outside of your homes while others need to do a little more work.

Let's look around and get rid of the things that no longer work or are just lying around. Consider it part of wellness.

A clean community starts with individual responsibilities. Clutter outside of homes detracts from the community and serves as places for pests to nest. We appreciate your support and your personal contributions to the environment in which we all share.

COLONEL FREDERICK S. CLARKE REQUESTS THE PLEASURE OF YOUR COMPANY AT A CHANGE OF RESPONSIBILITY CEREMONY FOR OUTGOING SGM PATRICK A. KUTAC AND INCOMING SGM HOHN D. WOLF WEDNESDAY, THE SECOND OF JUNE, 2010 AT TEN O'CLOCK A.M., IN ISLAND MEMORIAL CHAPEL.

The 2010 Memorial Day ceremony will be at 9 a.m., May 31, at the flag pole site. Guest speaker will be KRS President and retired U.S. Army Col. John Norwood.

THE KWAJALEIN HOURGLASS

The Kwajalein Hourglass is named for the insignia of the U.S. Army 7th Infantry Division, which liberated the island from the forces of Imperial Japan on Feb. 4, 1944.

The Kwajalein Hourglass is an authorized publication for military personnel, federal employees, contractor workers and their families assigned to U.S. Army Kwajalein Atoll. Contents of The Hourglass are not necessarily

U.S., Nato ready Kandahar offensive

By Sgt. 1st Class Michael J. Carden
American Forces Press Service

With U.S. and NATO forces on the verge of major operations in Kandahar, Afghanistan, a top commander there today underscored the complexity of their charge, citing “political problems and impunities” as the main challenge to overcome.

Operations in Kandahar follow months of combat and other efforts in Marja, a former Taliban stronghold in Helmand province. While the goal in Marja was ousting extremists, the ultimate goal for Kandahar is to legitimize the local government into something its citizens can believe in, said Maj. Gen. Nick Carter, a British army officer who commands international forces in southern Afghanistan, in a video news conference with Pentagon reporters from his base there.

“It’s about connecting the population to its government,” the general said. “That requires building representative governance from the bottom up. We’ll define success here by...credible, transparent, inclusive and representative governance that is genuinely connected to the population.”

Carter described life in Kandahar City, citing its historic and cultural significance. The city is traditionally an economic and commercial hub. Yet, though the city bustles with bazaars and businesses, there’s little investment, essential services, sanitation, health care or education, he said.

“It’s pretty challenging in terms of productivity and in terms of quality of life,” he added.

Carter estimated that up to 1,000 insurgents are in Kandahar province, and he said they have “a degree of control over the battle space” in the rural north and south regions of Kandahar City. “They will be a military challenge,” he said, but he added the challenge in the city is more complicated than the insurgency. It’s more a problem of order, organization, administration and basic policing than it is contested battle space, he said.

Challenges are present in private-sector security companies and militias, the general noted, explaining that such organizations make it difficult for the Afghan government to compete with salaries for government soldiers and police. He called for a need to regulate private security companies and militias.

Without government oversight and government-backed security forces in place, Carter said, the average

Afghan has little in the way of legal rights and freedoms. Criminals and overall disorder pose more problems in the city than the Taliban and insurgency, he said.

“What’s needed is that this regulation and proper administration is delivered, so that the police forces have something...to sort out and bring to order,” the general added. What’s required, too, he added, is for the capacity of government offices to be built up, so they can bring order and administration to the city.

“If you provide all of those,” Carter continued, “then you’re not going to have an intimidation problem [from the Taliban] at all.”

The surge of U.S. forces arriving in Kandahar will give NATO the muscle it needs to institute the culture of change needed there, he said. More U.S. troops enables more Afghan police training and improved command and control and information sharing, he added, and most importantly, those forces will help to alleviate criminal intimidation and impose “a ring of security” to keep insurgents at bay.

The general stressed that the planning and execution of operations in Kandahar are Afghan-led initiatives directed by President Hamid Karzai.

The provincial governor is reaching out to his city and district mayors to engage the population and build relationships with the population, he said.

Carter said he expects operations to begin in the “next month or two,” and that by Ramadan, which begins in August, security improvements will begin to be apparent. It will take some three months before a strong, credible government is formed in Marja, he said, leading him to believe that it could take just as long, if not longer, to sway public support and perception in Kandahar.

“The key point of this is that it’s a political movement, the Taliban,” he said. “It takes time for people to be convinced. We’ll have to be patient over the course of the summer watching as the intimidation reduces and the population becomes more on our side.”

Spelling Bee winners know their ABC's

Hourglass Reports

This year's George Seitz Elementary Spelling Bee was held on May 13 at the elementary school. Over 90 parents, family and community members watched as fourth, fifth and sixth graders competed to out-spell each other in this year's competition.

Eight students from each of the grade levels were selected with one alternate to compete on the day of the bee.

Representing the fourth grade classes were Dash Alfred, Abigail Bishop, Lila Burnley, Erin Burk, Dolly Heskiaia, Allison Homuth, Cameron Jones, Allyson Moore and Krystal Ching as their alternate.

Fifth grade classes selected Christine Abargan, Jillian DeCoster, DeVante Floor, Thomas Greene, Kristy Haferkorn, Justin Makua, Brian Scofield, Shawna Wilttrout and classmate Lea Lokeijak as an alternate.

Mesko Alred, Alex Burnley, Poupei Frase, Leonora Kabua, Langston Stewart, Ciara Swanby, Adam Tiffany, Eric Tiffany and Xavier Bellu and Joe Makua as alternates represented the sixth grade students.

Letters flew, nails were bitten and eyebrows were raised as the students and the judges went round after round to complete the grade level events.

Thanks to the hard work of the community volunteer judges Marion Ruffing, Joe Lagman, Kim Yarnes, Sgt. Maj. Patrick Kutac, Rick Funk, Alex McGlinn, Anne Alrick, Jane Sholar and Tonya Thompson, the event went off without a hitch and winners were awarded prizes and certificates.

Fourth grade winners with volunteer judges Marion Ruffing and Joe Lagman. First place winner is Lila Burnley, second place is Allyson Moore and third place is Erin Burk.

Sixth grade winners are first place Alex Burnley, second place Adam Tiffany and third place Leonora Kabua. Volunteer judges are Anne Alrick, Alex McGlinn and Rick Funk.

Fifth grade spelling bee winners with volunteer judges Kim Scruton-Yarnes and Sgt. Maj. Patrick Kutac. First place winner is Kristy Haferkorn, second place is DeVante Floor and third place is Justin Makua.

Former Kwaj Kids get married

Hourglass reports

When David Waddell walked into the Grace Sherwood Library shortly after he moved to Kwaj in August of 2003, he had no idea that he would be meeting his future wife behind the desk. All through high school he and Kendal Young were inseparable until David's family PCS'd right after their senior year started. Kendal graduated valedictorian from KHS in the class of 2006. David got an appointment to the Air Force Academy in Colorado Springs, Colo. and Kendal attended Florida State University in Tallahassee, Fla. Kendal graduated Summa Cum Laude this past April with a Bachelor of Art in English Literature and minor in History. David will be matriculating this month with a Bachelor of Science in Systems Engineering Management. He will be commissioned as a Second Lieutenant in the USAF and will be assigned as a pilot. On February 13, 2010 David proposed to Kendal at The Garden of the Gods in Colorado while she was visiting. Their wedding took place on May 27 at the Air Force Academy Protestant Chapel. The two will return to Kwaj later this summer to visit family and friends before they return to the States for their first posting in Mississippi.
