Deputy Mission Commander Moscone looks to the future of U.S. Army Kwajalein Atoll

Managing Editor

They say Kwajalein is shaped like a boomerang for a reason; many residents that leave Kwajalein end up finding their way back here at some point later in life. Kwajalein's latest 'retread,' is our Deputy Commander, Joe Moscone.

Moscone first came to Kwajalein in the early 90's with his wife and three children, when he served as the Community Services Director. He and his family left in 1996.

After they left Kwajalein they made their way to Fort Bliss, Texas and also did a tour in Germany. While at Fort Bliss, Moscone served as Deputy Garrison Commander and managed one of the largest installation expansions in DoD as a result of Army transformation. That experience, along with his 29-year federal career in installation management, made a return to Kwajalein in his words "seem like a good fit," as the Army determines the best course of action for Garrison operations here for the future. "The current on-going study includes potentially reshaping Kwajalein base support functions to an Installation Management Command centric structure is certainly something I can contribute to in a big way, so I'm excited about that."

Moscone and his wife Nancy made their way back to Kwajalein in May. "I tell everybody all the time that as many things that have changed at Kwaj, so many things are the same. I think one thing that has stayed constant is the quality of the people, and just the 'Kwaj way' of doing things, like the potlucks, the teamwork, the camaraderie, everyone knowing each other and helping each other out. It's something that we cherish the most. I worked on an installation in the states and when you go home, you're pretty much separated from the installation. Here, you continue the community spirit and small town atmosphere, which is what we had hoped stayed the same, and it sure did."

Moscone says that his role at USAKA is basically no different than being a deputy for any kind of military unit, although as a civilian leader, he does not maintain certain legal military 'Commander' authorities. As the Deputy, Moscone represents the Commander in most business decision making processes and directs the key staff proponents of the Command. "It's very comparable to a chief of staff of an organization," Moscone says. "A deputy pretty much integrates and coordinates all the staff actions for the organization and keeps all proponents in sync with mission requirements on behalf of the Commander. In USAKA's case, where so many different entities are tied to our mission, from contractors to military and government civilians, in addition to our host nation duties, the word integration is critical to how we execute our operations." Therefore, managing the staff and day to day operations at USAKA presents some complexities that other Garrisons don't quite have to deal with routinely. According to Moscone, that also makes the job much more challenging and satisfying.

In a recent town hall meeting, COL Frederick Clarke urged residents to use Moscone as an ally to solve community issues. "I'm coming from a background that was community based. My role as a deputy garrison commander at an installation involved focusing in on community issues: housing, logistics, schools, community services, support programs, quality of life functions and retail services. I think he [COL Clarke] views me as being a help to the Command as either a problem solver or certainly an information gatherer in those areas. Both SGM Wolf and I will work lock-step in our own lanes to ensure we support the Commander's intent and also provide LTC Eggert and his RTS team everything they need to accomplish their missions. I'm excited to round out the Command group team here."

Something Moscone plans to work on very hard is "taking into account all the restructuring proposals that will be on the table and then developing a single plan that will not only protect this national asset, but will be good for the Army as well."

One recent community issue Moscone is working to resolve is the Morale, Welfare and Recreation fund and the AAFES dividend contribution. "We're working it hard; COL Clarke has made this a top priority. We hope to have a memorandum of agreement signed very soon which will allow our fair share of 'the split' AAFES earns at Kwaj to come back to our community via IMCOM's MWR fund or some other process to improve our MWR program. It's been a long process, but it's close to being done, thanks to the hard work of many in USAKA, particularly our Legal Office."

Moscone is confident that the transition between commanders next week will be a smooth one. "It is very obvious to see what a great impact COL Clarke has had on this community, and it's been a pleasure working for him even for such a short time. He's put in place a solid foundation for others to build from. In this business you don't really worry about the faces too much, as the Commander is still the Commander. Change is constant in military organizations, it's what we do. All Commanders come in, they assess, they act, and they attempt to leave their organizations better than they found it. COL Gaines is going to hit the ground running, as COL Clarke has ensured that he has been provided all necessary information he needs, so all of us look forward to a smooth transition. He will have the unwavering support of everyone associated with USAKA."

Moscone is proud to be here. "This is a great team. This is probably the most unique challenge that a Deputy Garrison Commander could ask for and I'm honored to be a part of it. On top of that, we have that beautiful ocean to see every day. What more could I ask for?"

Murder-mystery dinner a killer show

Article and photos by Sheila Bigelow
Managing Editor

Murder, mayhem and mischief turned a 'Cheeseburger in Paradise' dinner at the country club June 26 into an entertaining and hilarious evening. "Murder in Margaritaland" was the latest murder-mystery dinner sponsored by Community Activities and catered by KRS Retail Services. Each guest was given a role to play and had objectives to perform throughout the evening. Clues were revealed during the night to assist guests in solving the murder-mystery. The object was to use the knowledge your character was provided and do anything in your power to persuade other characters to give up what they knew in order to figure out 'who done it.' Fake money was provided to each guest so they could bribe others either to gain knowledge or to keep them quiet.

There were 20 guests playing the major roles of the story. Jane Seelye played the part of Managing Mo. "I was managing Sandy Beachbum (professional surfer) and I would do anything to make sure that he surfs to make me money." In her role, Seelye had to deny accusations people made about her client's alleged drug use or affairs. Other guests tried to blackmail her for information. "They told me they had information and they had photos and if I paid them they would keep quiet. But since it was all not true, I had nothing to worry about," Seelye said with smirk. To try to figure out who the killer was, Seelye opted to interrogate people confidentially about whether they knew anything or had in fact done it themselves. "I just questioned people nicely," she claims.

Elizabeth Forsyth, who played the part of a Swim Instructor at the dinner, used the process of elimination and bribery to get her clues from other players. She bribed the paparazzi, island natives and even the owners of the resort. All in all, she thought the night went great. "We all had things that we had to say to one another or accusations you had to make throughout the night. Then Jack Daniels was murdered and everything changed. It's was a 'who done it.' We had to figure out who was guilty and find the clues. Everybody was a suspect. We had to use what we knew and what we had learned to figure out who done it. It was an excellent night. Kim Yarnes did a great job."

Mary Long played the part of the Paparazzi. She spent a good portion of the night stirring up scandals to photograph and then use to blackmail others with. "I talked Managing Mo and Sandy [Beachbum] into kissing and hugging to show they had an affair going on. I had a wine glass given to Starr Bright, so the picture looks like she's holding a glass of wine and drinking even though she's in rehab. I just worked it. I made myself obnoxious and annoying. I had the hotel staff trying to kick me out. Everybody hates the paparazzi," she said with a laugh. This was the first time she has attended an event like this and said, "I had a very good time. I'd do it again."

In the end it was exposed that Mike Lundberg, playing Lifesavin' Sam was the murderer. "I done it," he admitted. To try to keep his secret under wraps, Lundberg tried desperately to place the blame on other suspect characters. "I was trying to push it off on Izzy [Islander, an island girl], who was Jack's [Daniels, bartender who got killed] ex-girlfriend. And I was trying to push it off on the surfer [Sandy Beachbum] who had the Izzy tattoo. I was trying to pin it on Starr Bright's agent." Lundberg, being the murderer, had to bribe several guests to keep his secrets quiet. "A lot of people came up to me and I had to bribe them to not talk about me being a drunk. I was a drunk and I didn't want to lose my job. And I was sick in the bathroom because I was drinking when Starr Bright got saved [she almost drowned]." Jack Daniels knew about Sam's bar tab and knew he was drinking and sick when Starr almost drowned, so he said he had no choice but to murder him. Lundberg spent every last dollar bribing people to keep them quiet and in the end, it literally paid off. Only three participants correctly guessed who the killer was.

tor, reveals how she figured out 'who done it.' "My character had a crush on Lifesavin' Sam, but never acted on it because he was dating Kylie Cocktail. All my clues suggested that it was maybe going to be Kylie that did it. I thought was it going to be somebody obvious or somebody not so obvious? In my mind I was thinking who the least obvious person was. The clues said that Lifesavin' Sam wanted to keep his job and be the best lifeguard that he could be. The clue came out that Jack Daniels died and he had seen Lifesavin' Sam drinking right before Starr almost drowned. So he had a secret on him plus he had the bar tab issue. So I just deduced that it was probably him." LaCost earned some dough that night by having information on other characters. "I had the goods on Kylie. She actually paid me because of her affair; I knew about it so she paid me to keep quiet." LaCost not only collected money by bribing other characters, she also charged guests for swim lessons. LaCost thought that all the characters did a great job playing their parts. "Thurston Howard III, he was entertaining. All the paparazzi really stayed in their parts. Everybody really got into character and I liked BJ McDonald, the fire dancer. I've never been to one of these before so I wasn't sure what to expect but this was really fun, I liked it."

New sergeant major at Kwajalein

SGM Hohn Wolf arrived on Kwajalein May 27 and took over as U.S. Army Kwajalein Atoll's Sergeant Major June 2. Wolf's last station was in Fort Bragg, N.C. where he was the Operations Sergeant Major for the 108th Air Defense Artillery Brigade. Wolf was stationed there from 2003-2010.

Wolf says he had heard of Kwajalein one time before coming here in late May. "In 2004 I did a staff ride with the battalion from Fort Bragg to Washington D.C. We went through the Hoffman building and went to the Air Defense branch where all our assignments were done. At the time, there was an opening or an upcoming vacancy for master sergeant on Kwajalein and one of the other 1st sergeants in the battalion said, 'Hey, put me in to replace that master sergeant that's leaving Kwajalein.' So I said, 'Yea, put me in to replace this guy when he leaves.' So back in 2004 I knew that there was Army in Kwajalein. Last June, I was informed that my name had been submitted to backfill SGM Kutac I was really excited and really hoping to get the job out here."

On whether or not moving to an isolated tropical island was a curse or a cause for celebration, Wolf said, "I really think it's dependant on the individual. My wife and I, we were very excited to find out that I was nominated and then when I was actually selected, were ecstatic, very excited, and very glad to be coming here."

Wolf's 20-year-old daughter Lauren arrived on Kwajalein with him May 27 but has since headed back to school in N.C. to pursue a research project at her college over the summer. Lauren will begin her senior year in the fall, studying environmental science and biology. Wolf's 16-year-old son Ryan will attend Kwajalein Jr/Sr High School in the fall as a junior.

Wolf is the second sergeant major to take post on Kwajalein. "COL Clarke is the Garrison Commander. Army installations throughout the Army have a Garrison Commander and a Garrison Sergeant Major. So even though my principal job duty title is Senior Enlisted Advisor to the Commander, in all respects I'm similar to a garrison sergeant major. This is considered a brigade level command. There is a typical Army structure for garrison, but this is still a unique situation because you do not have the same structure as a regular Army installation."

A post on Kwajalein for most sergeant majors is unique because of the large number of civilians that live on the installation. Luckily, Wolf has had experience with this before. "My last deployment to Iraq in 2006-2007, I deployed with a small contingent of Soldiers, about 133, on a prototype weapons system. Outside of my Soldiers, everybody else that worked with that system was civilians and contractors. So to a small extent, I have had that experience before."

SGM Wolf took over his position from SGM Patrick Kutac on June 2. Since that time he has been working on some major projects Kutac began in the two years as Kwajalein's sergeant major. "I am carrying on some of the things that SGM Kutac started. Then of course we are doing a change of command so when COL [Nathan] Gaines comes in and gets established, he may give me other or additional, specific items. So until I get specific items from COL Gaines, I will continue with what SGM Kutac was working on."

"I am continuing with MWR [Morale, Welfare and Recreation], making sure we do get the funds and that they are applied toward MWR. I'm working to see what we can do to eventually get a commissary here. Then we're working some of the 'behind the scenes' things like trying to get another Personnel Sergeant because we were authorized one and we could use one. I'm just working on trying to get some of the things that go on behind the scenes that you don't really see and try to make sure that stuff continues in a smooth, uninterrupted path."

While Wolf has not met COL Gaines face-to-face yet, he has corresponded with him via e-mail on subjects regarding their time together on Kwajalein. Wolf says that he and COL Gaines intend on continuing to offer town hall meetings to Kwajalein and Roi residents as well to the RMI workers. "We will continue to offer them as a means for the community to have an open dialogue [with USAKA]."

Wolf says that teamwork is essential within USAKA. "We are looking at continuing a close relationship between the Commander, Sergeant Major and the Deputy to keep the continuity of service and the unity of command. We all work closely together to resolve issues. We've got to make sure we get all the information and sometimes you've got to get multiple parties involved. I do foresee it being a close working partnership between myself, the colonel and the deputy."

Wolf and his family seem very happy to have come to Kwajalein. "So far it's been great; they love it. My wife is very happy. They like to say that the A.P. in the address stands for 'Almost Paradise' but she says it stands for 'Absolute Paradise.' We look forward to helping the community continue being the strong, great community that it is."

Answer to cancer

By Hannah Fronzak
Associate Editor

Dr. Kevin Skinner from the Kwajalein Hospital delivered a presentation at the Coconut Room June 25 on cancer screenings and prevention. For those who could not attend, below is some of the information presented.

Breast Cancer Prevention/Detection

For women in their 20s and 30s, it is recommended that clinical breast examination be part of a periodic health examination, preferably at least every three years. Asymptomatic women aged 40 and over should continue to receive a clinical breast examination as part of a periodic health examination, preferably annually and prior to mammography. Annual mammography should begin at age 40.

Colorectal Cancer Prevention/Detection

Colonoscopies are performed with deep sedation beginning at age 50 then every 10 years. It may be necessary for colonoscopies to be performed earlier and more often in accordance with positive family history and other conditions

Prostate Cancer Prevention/Detection

Screening recommendations for prostate cancer are changing and complex. Two of the more common methods are the Digital Rectal Exam and Serum Prostate Specific Antigen, which generally starts at about age 50 and is performed annually thereafter.

Skin Cancer Prevention/Detection

Following the ABCD rule of moles can help detect skin cancer. ABCD stands for the following:

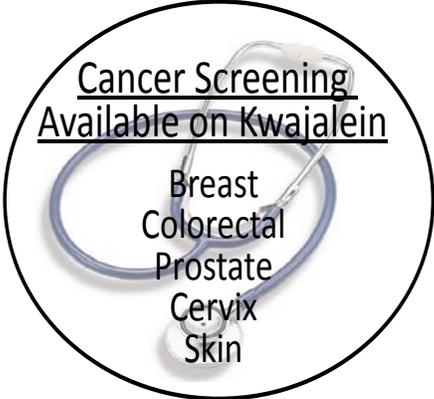

A for asymmetry: A mole that, when divided in half, doesn't look the same on both sides.

B for border: A mole with edges that are blurry or jagged.

C for color: Changes in the color of a mole, including darkening, spread of color, loss of color, or the appearance of multiple colors such as blue, red, white, pink, purple or gray.

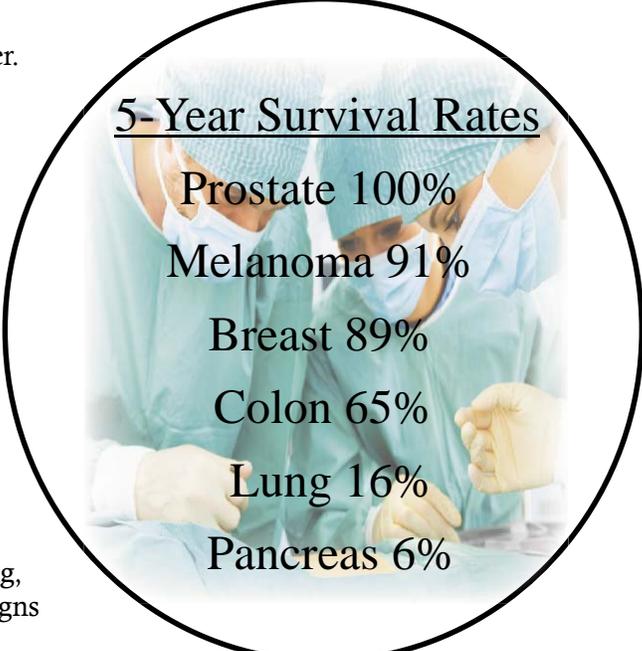

D for diameter: A mole larger than 1/4 inch in diameter (about the size of a pencil eraser).

There are other signs that can help detect a possible cancer. A mole that is growing or changing in shape or color, a sore that does not heal, spread of color from the border of a spot to the skin around it, redness or a new swelling beyond the border is suspect. Also be aware of itchiness, tenderness, pain or change in the surface of a mole—scaliness, oozing, bleeding, or a new bump or nodule. Moles that have any of the above signs should be checked by a doctor.

Thank you for helping me celebrate my graduation and for your generous gifts. This special time for me wouldn't have been possible if you were not there to help celebrate.

Komol tata to each scholarship board for recognizing my accomplishments and hard work. I was very happy and appreciative to learn that I was selected as the recipient of these scholarships: Marshall Islands Scholarship Board, Massachusetts Institute of Technology Lincoln Laboratory, Kwajalein Quality of Life Committee, Yokwe Yuk Women's Club, Scholarship Committee, Marshall Islands Club and the Jinetiptip Club.

All the families, friends and community members of Kwajalein Atoll, you can expect a personal thank you letter from me soon.

Growing up and living on Ebeye all my life, I have seen a need to return and help my country. American University is the place where I want to go to get this knowledge and experience valuable for the Marshall Islands. Please rest assured that your contributions and scholarship awards are well invested.

I would like to major in Education, Political Science or International Relations. I plan to return to Ebeye and pursue a career in one of these fields upon graduating from American University. Thanks to you, I am one step closer to that goal.

By awarding me the above scholarships you have lightened my financial burden, which allows me to focus more on the most important aspect of school - learning. Your generosity has inspired me to help others and give back to the community both on Ebeye, Kwajalein and the Marshall Islands in general. I hope one day I will be able to help students achieve their goals just as you have helped me.

GRAND OPENING USAKA/RTS LAUNDRY!

Yesterday, the long awaited opening day of the new USAKA laundry facility finally arrived. The facility provides a brand new, spacious facility conveniently located directly adjacent to the Dock Security Checkpoint. The Laundromat location and design relieves the need for the laborious task of hauling laundry bags all around USAKA as was previously necessary. Now that the new facility is opened, laundry bags will no longer be authorized to come onto USAKA; however, for convenience, sufficient storage spaces will be provided to allow for workers to store their laundry bags while they are at their places of work.
