THE KWAJALEIN HOURGLASS

The do's and don'ts of saying, "I Do"

I wore my same old make-up, new almost everything else, blue undergarments and borrowed someone else's sanity for my wedding day, because I'll tell you what – no matter how long you prepare and plan for it, sanity is the first thing to go the day of your wedding, usually about five minutes after you wake up.

Jeremy, my now husband, and I had been engaged for 16 months before we got married. When said in that manner, it seems like planning a wedding over that long would be a piece of cake. Let me first mention we live in the middle of the Pacific Ocean on Kwajalein and only planned to be back in the States twice before our wedding – once so I could get my hip replaced (kind of puts a damper on wedding planning) and the other for my older sister's wedding (which consisted of me running errands with her and her two small children for two weeks straight – also puts a damper on wedding planning). But limited time in the States to plan your wedding does afford you one advantage – you have no time for dilly-dallying. Decisions must be made and you do not have the option to "think about" anything; decide now or it won't get done. So that's what we did.

Luckily, one of my bridesmaids was working as an intern for a wedding planner. Also luckily, everything is on the internet these days, and one thing you can do right after you've had your hip replaced is sit on your behind and surf the Web looking for venues and vendors. So that's what I did. We ended up visiting one venue only because it happened to be near two others we were interested in; honestly, we weren't that impressed from their web site. As soon as we walked in and met the couple who ran it, we were sold. The property itself was beautiful, but it was the owners who impressed us the most. They treated every bride like she's their daughter and were exceptionally understanding that we lived overseas and had limited time. We immediately told them they needed to revamp their web site – it didn't do them justice – and put down a deposit.

So that was my first lesson learned when planning your wedding – don't discount anything until you've seen or tried it. I re-learned this lesson when I shopped for my wedding dress. Now, picking out and trying on wedding dresses two weeks after a hip replacement, while on crutches and a load of pain relievers is not ideal, but I can attest it can be done. My advice – never pick your first dress. You only think you look good because it's the first time you've seen yourself in a wedding dress; trust me, anything will look amazing. Next tip – don't say no because you hate it on the hanger. I wanted something plain and simple, with no lace or sequins or anything girly. Guess what I ended up with? A strapless,

USAKA chosen for Army's Net Zero Energy pilot program

By Ruth Miskovsky
USAKA/RTS Public Affairs Officer

Efficiency is a word that those working in the public works departments on Kwajalein and Roi-Namur are likely to hear more of in the coming months, and years even. U.S. Army Kwajalein Atoll was selected as one of six Army posts for a pilot program in energy conservation. The announcement was made during a recent conference in San Antonio.

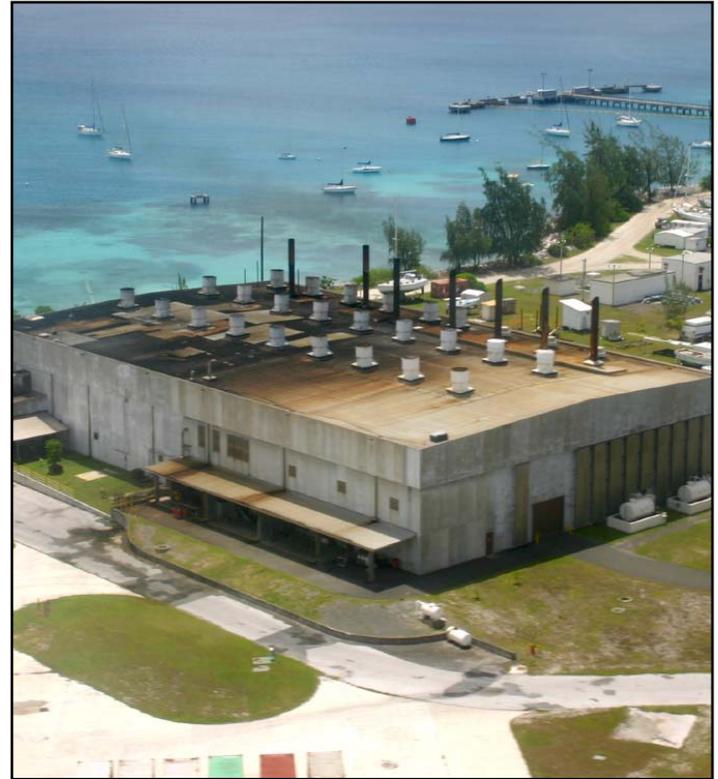

As a Net Zero Energy Installation, USAKA will have a goal of producing as much energy on-site as it uses over the course of a year by the target date of 2020.

The Army's Net Zero program selected garrisons to be Net Zero Energy, Water and Waste by 2020. Two posts were chosen to be Net Zero in all three.

Director of Public Works, Todd Dirmeyer, spearheaded the effort to get Kwajalein selected for this initiative. USAKA's application included details on current energy consumption and costs as well as possible future projects that would help the installation achieve Net Zero status.

The Net Zero program has attracted the attention of Congress and the President and will help Kwajalein reduce its dependence on diesel fuel, according to Col. Joseph Gaines, USAKA commander.

An Army energy web site goes on to explain what it means to be a Net Zero Energy Installation and how installations can assess their energy use and plan to reduce consumption. "The Army's vision is to appropriately manage our natural resources with a goal of Net Zero installations. Today the Army faces significant threats to our energy and water supply requirements both home and abroad. ... The Army must invest in its installations and improve efficiencies in energy, water and waste for the benefit of our current and future missions."

The details of how Net Zero Energy will look at USAKA are still being worked out, but given the remote location, transporting diesel to Kwajalein is not only energy inefficient but costly as well. According to the application submitted by Dirmeyer on behalf of USAKA and Gaines, the garrison should look at all available renewable energy options under what was termed a "portfolio approach."

USAKA's application also stressed the importance of energy conservation in meeting this goal. In a recent e-mail, Gaines encouraged all residents of Kwajalein and Roi-Namur to help meet these goals by being aware of the simple measures they can take to reduce energy consumption at home and at work.

Thank You Kwajalein Teachers

This past week was Teacher Appreciation Week and I would like to thank all the teachers here on Kwajalein. Your work in the classroom allows our students to leave here and be successful. Great work! – Col. Joseph Gaines, USAKA Commander

Dancing with the Shields has never been such fun!

By Catherine Layton
Associate Editor

Dancers, music-lovers and people in the mood for an evening out gathered to the Dayve Davis Multi-purpose room Sunday night for an evening of indulgent dining, enthusiastic dancing and delightful music.

The annual Ballroom Dinner Dance is always eagerly anticipated, and gives everyone who's normally accustomed to wearing shorts and sandals a reason to dress up. Hosts Richard and Cheryl Shields set the bar high with red carpet-worthy attire. Richard looked dapper as always in his traditional tuxedo, while Cheryl was as hot as the salsa dances in her red crepe and satin gown.

The music, provided by the "Central Pacific's Most Dangerous Band," sounded better than ever, playing standards to jazz and some classic ballroom in between. The band is comprised of the 17-member stage band from the high school, and plays so attendees can fox-trot, swing or waltz the evening away.

The event wouldn't have been complete without the sumptuous dinner, presented by KRS food services, and included shrimp cocktail, roasted chicken, Delmonico steak and Black Forest cake for dessert.

THEN AND NOW - "MACY'S"

Cheeky Kwaj residents deemed the lone department store on Kwajalein "Macy's," while the counterpart on Roi was named "Gimble's," in keeping with the then-famous competition between the two department store giants. The names gave residents a little taste of home while they were isolated, retail-wise anyway, in the Pacific. The stores kept in a variety of merchandise, from simple and needed items like T-shirts, flip flops and bike parts to luxurious jewelry, crystal, rosewood furniture and exotic carpets. When the monthly barge would come, residents could count on there always being a line to get in for the new products. By 2009, operations were turned over from the contractor-run store to the Army and Air Force Exchange Service.

...and the Scouts go marching in!

By Maj. Stephen M. Parrish Sr.
Troop 314 Volunteer

Boy Scouts from around the world live by the credo “be prepared” and over the soggy weekend of May 1-2, Kwajalein’s own Boy Scout Troop 314 lived it. For the past few months, Scout Leader Corey Wiley and our local Scouts have been planning for a camping adventure to the isolated isle of Ninje, or Nene as the locals refer to it. The initial trip was to occur in March, but severe weather forced the Troop to postpone the trip only to have the weather clear the next morning. This past weekend called for mostly clear skies, only to have it storm nearly the entire time. The “be prepared” motto helps the Scouts handle any situation they face and the two rainy, wind-filled days spent on Ninje were no problem.

The camping merit badge requires Scouts do many things, to include 20 different campouts and 10 miles of cumulative hiking. To meet some of the merit requirements, the Troop decided they could do a little hiking and camping at the same time. The trip to Ninje required Troop 314 to tackle the daunting task of hiking the six-mile causeway from Ebeye and then camp out on Ninje. The Scouts had to pack all of their own gear, food, tools and a supply of water for drinking and cooking – enough to last two full days. This gear was carried on the backs of the troop members with several backpacks weighing over 40 pounds each.

Although the Scouts met at the Dock Security Checkpoint at 5:30 a.m. Sunday, their spirits were high and they longed for the chance to camp out with their buddies and in some cases, their dads. After a photo, some quick safety instructions and accountability, the troop began the long march down the island causeway. After several breaks (every 1.5 miles or so), the troop arrived on Gugeegue (Kone-Jekan-En) at 9:30 a.m. and after another short break, began the trek across the exposed reef to Ninje Island. An adequate campsite was located near the house of Mr.

Kwajalein Boy Scouts Troop 314, and their dads, trek the six-mile causeway between Ebeye and Gugeegue, as part of their camping adventure to Ninje Island.

Nemo-La and the troop quickly noticed the mostly clear forecast was apparently for another location. With winds gusting and rain falling heavily, the soon soaked troop established camp and began the arduous process of trying to get things dry again.

The rain might have dampened the ground and much needed kindling, but it could not dampen the troop’s spirits. With adventure on their mind, Scouts and dads investigated the island, searched for shells and chatted with Mr. Nemo-La. The troop prepared meals, learned about the wild, treated minor injuries and started a fire to cook food and roast marshmallows. Although the rain persisted relentlessly, the Scouts made the most of the adventure and had a great time.

The night came quickly and so did the morning, but the Scouts arose

“The Scouts do a lot of really fun things, but more importantly, they teach valuable lessons the boys will keep with them their entire lives. In addition, and much like the military, they experience times together that, for some, will build bonds for a lifetime and for others give them a kinship with all others who have called themselves ‘Scouts.’” bright-eyed and ready to get moving. After a simple breakfast and a significant clean up of the island, the Scouts prepared for the trip back to civilization. The epitome of “be prepared,” Scout Leader Wiley had arranged for transportation back to Ebeye bringing much joy to some sore feet and tired bones. Arriving on Ebeye, the Scouts adventure mode kicked into full gear again and the exploration of the local shop’s candy aisles began. The hour until the ferry was to arrive passed quickly and all the Scouts made it home safe and sound, ready for the next adventure Wiley will plan for them.

Although I was never allowed to be a Scout as a kid, I am proud that I have given my son, Stephen, the opportunity to be a part of such a great organization. The Scouts do a lot of really fun things, but more importantly, they teach valuable lessons the boys will keep with them their entire lives. In addition, and much like the military, they experience times together that, for some, will build bonds for a lifetime and for others give them a kinship with all others who have called themselves “Scouts.” There were numerous individuals that made this and other Scouting events possible, but a special thanks to Corey, for taking your time to lead the Troop and give our Kwajalein boys a chance to be a part of something great.

No-smoking zones revised

Hourglass Reports

As promised, Col. Joseph Gaines has made the downtown area smoke-free. The move came after he announced this intention at the most recent town hall on Kwajalein.

USAKA Policy Memo 600-8 was signed April 26 and will be enforced starting May 15. The USAKA commander had the interest of the community at-large in mind when he made this decision.

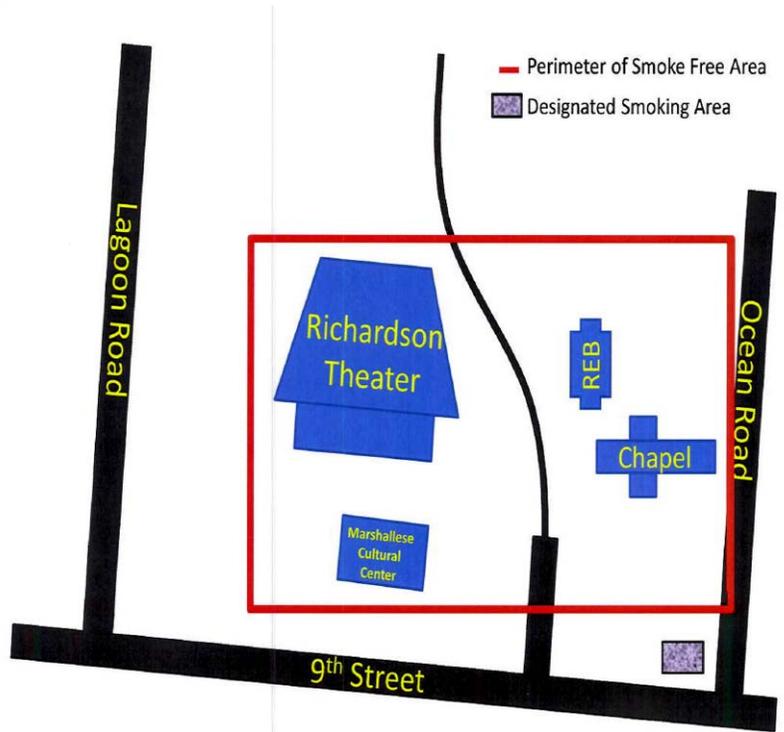

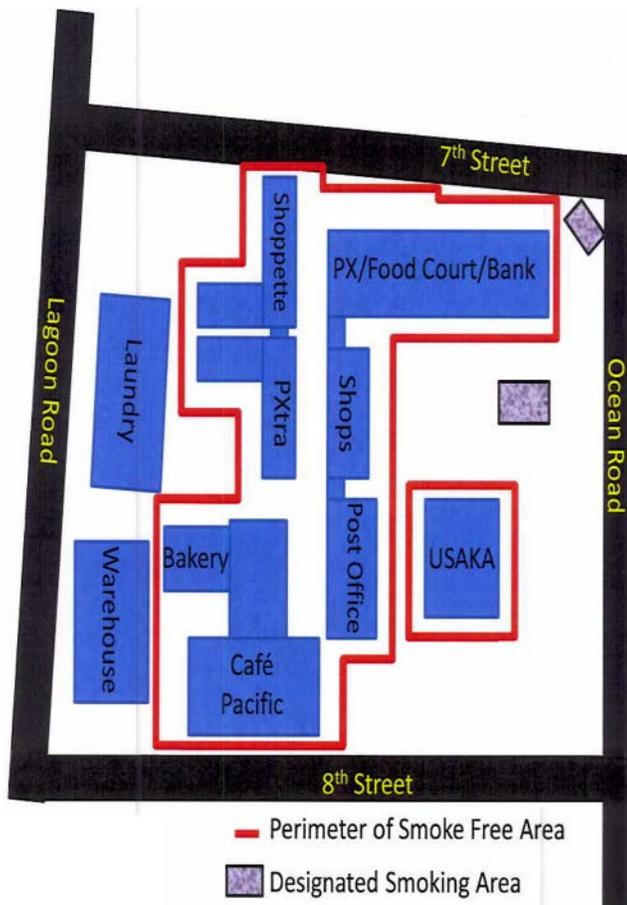

“We are committed to the health and well-being of the entire USAKA community. Our residents deserve a smoke-free environment where they shop, eat, worship and collect mail. It just makes good sense and is long overdue,” Gaines said.

The policy’s intent is clearly outlined and it is designed to protect the community “from the health hazards caused by exposure to tobacco products.”

During the pre-May 15 grace period, USAKA/RTS law enforcement personnel and the Kwajalein Police Department will be reminding community members of the policy. After that, penalties for disregarding this policy could include administrative and disciplinary actions up to removal from activities or being barred from USAKA/RTS.

Anyone with questions about the updated policy or its enforcement may contact the Provost Marshall’s office at 52124 or 53530.

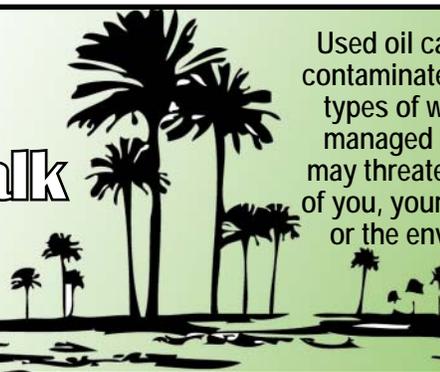

Safely Speaking

Eye injuries in the workplace are preventable through the use of proper personal protective equipment (safety glasses, face shields, welding hoods, etc.). Contact ES&H at 51134 with questions.

E-talk

Used oil can easily be contaminated with other types of waste and if managed improperly may threaten the safety of you, your co-workers, or the environment.

USAKA employee earns doctorate

Just call him Doctor O! Onwuatuegwu “Eche” Echezona finished the required work and was awarded a doctorate in applied management and engineering sciences earlier this year. The degree was granted by Walden University in Minneapolis and required a combination of classroom time, online classes and field work. Echezona concentrated his engineering studies in Iraq, Egypt, Lebanon, Kuwait and Qatar – learning the specifics for construction standards and building codes for that region.

THE RUMOR MILL

Col. Joseph Gaines addresses circulating rumors head-on. Rumors can earn from one to five ears. One ear is an unfounded rumor, while a rumor earning five ears is the truth.

Rumor: The funding for high-speed internet is not available and the project has hit a standstill.

This is a good one, but not true. Funding has been reprioritized to make money available for this project. All elements of the project are therefore funded at this time. However, due to mission requirements and other priority actions, the expected completion date has slipped to Fall 2011.

WAY TO GO!

Community Activities was awarded Team of the Quarter, for January to March 2011, by Kwajalein Range Services. Both the Kwajalein and Roi teams were recognized by KRS President, Cynthia Rivera, for “consistently providing innovative and creative programming to enhance the quality of life for Kwajalein and Roi residents while always keeping customer service as the top priority.” They were praised for going “above and beyond” in their actions. A get-together was held for the Kwajalein team April 29 and one is scheduled for Roi later this month.

Upcoming events sponsored by Community Activities this weekend include the Roi Mother’s Day Flower Talk and Kentucky Derby Crazy Hat Party. On Kwaj, there is a Double Feature on Sunday, plus moms can bowl a free game at the Bowling Center from 3-6 p.m. on Sunday.

mermaid-style dress completely covered in lace, beads and anything else girly they could sew onto it. I hated in on the hanger and fell in love with it once I tried it on. I bought it that day and was regaled with compliments and praises on how beautiful it was on my wedding day.

I made sure to take care of everything that was important to me while I was in the States – the venue, dress and food. Everything else I had to trust my mom to take care of for me. She not only picked out my flowers, but designed and put together all seven bouquets, nine boutonnieres and five corsages – yea, my mom rocks.

Jeremy and I arrived in the States two weeks before our wedding. It was just enough time to take care of the few last minute details. Finally, all our plans were finalized and we were ready.

And then the curveballs came. One week before the wedding I learned I was severely allergic to oak, which happened to be infesting all of San Antonio at the time. Six days before my wedding, I had a terrible cough and could squeak out every tenth word I tried to speak – awesome. Then, my wonderful fiancé came down with a severe case of gout three days before the wedding. For those who don't know what that is, basically his big toe blew up about four times bigger than the other one and became this massive, red and severely painful extremity. While it was impressive enough to post the photo on Facebook, it did not bode well for our fast-approaching wedding day. I showed up to our rehearsal to find my fiancé limping around with an old-man cane – again, awesome.

So our big day finally arrived. Being a girl, I had to wake up at 7:30 a.m. to get my hair and make-up done, while my lovely fiancé got to sleep in until noon (so not fair). The limo picked us up 15 minutes late and we were stuck in traffic the whole way there – cue champagne in the limo. We arrived almost 25 minutes late, but I'm the bride and I can do what I want (at least that's what I told everyone when I got there). The next 30 minutes before the ceremony I was in a complete daze.

The bridal party left to line up and the pastor came in to pray with me. Finally, I was alone in the bridal suite – cue the slight freak-out. It wasn't cold feet; I knew from the moment I started dating Jeremy I would tame him into marriage – it was more about the fact it was finally happening. Sixteen months is a long time to plan a wedding, but nothing prepares you for the moment before you walk down the aisle. Finally, my dad came to the rescue; we linked arms and my nerves were eased (my dad rocks too).

The ceremony was light-hearted, yet sincere. Our pastor suggested we face the audience and he stood with his back to them, which we loved. We could see all the guests' faces and they could see ours – it was perfectly intimate. Things happen that you expect, like your grandparents tearing up, the kids in the crowd "whispering" a little too loudly and people "discretely" showing up late. But things also happen that you don't anticipate, like your heel getting caught in between the wood planks and getting stuck as you walk down the aisle, or a certain someone getting emotional that maybe not everyone expected to. Regardless, by the time the "I Do's" were said, the rings were on, and my husband kissed me for the first time, nothing else mattered besides the moment you realized you were finally married to the love of your life – it was perfect.

Everyone always says the same thing about your wedding day – "It's going to fly by." Guess what? They're right. No matter how many weddings you go to, you don't realize how long pictures, dinner, toasts, dances, cake cutting, bouquet and garter throwing, and just plain old socializing takes. By the time we were done with all our "obligations" we literally had less than an hour to cut loose.

So besides it flying by, the other interesting thing I noticed were all the songs you pick for your formal dances (first dance, father/daughter dance, etc.) are a lot longer than you think. This is especially true if you don't know how to "actually dance." And by that I mean any other style of dancing besides what you used to do at high school dances. Needless to say, combine a hip replacement with toe gout and that's what you get – high school dancing. You don't realize it until you watch your wedding video, but it's horribly boring to watch. So invest in some dance lessons before your wedding if you can.

One of my favorite times during my wedding was the Dollar Dance. Not because we scored a bunch of cash to take with us on our honeymoon, but because it gave me a few intimate moments to spend with guests. The only downside – if your maid of honor is too busy gabbing with the next person in line and you get stuck dancing with your husband's friend named "Moose" that you've only met once and you end up having an awkward what-seems-like-10-minute conversation about bad facial hair and disco balls. Yes, that happened to me.

Something else that is inevitable at your wedding – you will hate your DJ, regardless if other guests are dancing and enjoying themselves. My advice is to let it go. Even though you specifically told the DJ not to play country music besides the 2-3 songs on your list, if he plays it and guests are enjoying being two-stepping fools, just let them be.

Weddings are stressful and there really is no way around that besides going to Vegas and eloping in front of Elvis. Despite it all, at the end of the day I was married to the love of my life. I said goodbye to "Bigelow," all the high-fives, giggles and "Hey, Deuce" comments that came along with it, and officially became Mrs. Gideon. Even thinking back at all the stressful times, they will never be able to wipe the beaming smile off this married woman's face.

Second annual 100-mile bike-a-thon a success

Article and photos by Sheila Gideon
Managing Editor

What were you doing at 6 a.m. Monday morning? Like most, you were probably sleeping. But for 17 Kwajalein residents, they were already at the Marshallese Cultural Center for the second annual 100-mile bike-a-thon to benefit cancer research. The event was organized by Jon Jahnke. Riders were sponsored for a certain dollar amount per mile and all proceeds were given to the American Cancer Society.

Nine participants completed the entire 100 miles, while others put in as many laps as they could muster, some using their 'Kwaj-style' bicycles. Teams were also popular and many chose to break up the 25 laps between partners. Those who biked all 100 miles on their own were Lisa Ansley, Ben Bartyzel, Alan Calvert, Jon Jahnke, Stephanie Los, Henry McElreath, Chad McGlenn, Elliott Moseley and Randy Sliva.

"Raising money for cancer research is the goal," said Jahnke. While there were less riders than last year, those who participated were still able to raise over $4,000. "I was encouraged by our community's concern, compassion and willingness to contribute. Unfortunately, this year it seems our 'perfect' little island has been especially affected by cancer, as a number of people that we all know have been diagnosed with various forms of the disease. Cancer is a reality for many, from which none of us can hide."

There were a few riders who were unable to ride with the rest of the group and plan to ride on May 16. Some who have already completed their laps are willing to join them and the community is invited as well.

Military career right move for three seniors

Article and photos by Catherine Layton
Associate Editor

Kwajalein seniors have always had impressive prospects after their academic experiences here. Robin Loeak, Darryl Lorok and Aaron Mathieson, three members of the 2011 Kwajalein graduating class, have chosen to pursue careers in the military. Both Loeak and Lorok have enlisted in the U.S. Army, while Mathieson has applied to all four military academies, as well as applying for some ROTC scholarships.

Loeak has lived on Ebeye his whole life, and has attended the school system on Kwajalein. He wants to pursue the field of behavioral health in the Army, and is planning on taking advantage of the college benefits offered by a four-year tenure. "I am looking forward to meeting new people, learning more about life and traveling around the world," Loeak said.

The Army was the choice for Lorok as well. A lifelong resident of Ebeye, he feels the Army is an open door for job opportunities. "I have a couple of relatives in the military and they did influence my decision somewhat. I am looking forward to traveling to new places and examining new cultures and then studying in college," he added. Both Lorok and Loeak aren't looking forward to basic training, "... because I am already excited to begin my career," summed up Lorok.

"The idea of serving our great country while receiving a great education interests me," began Mathieson. He continued, "I also want to follow in the footsteps of my father, grandfathers, uncles and one aunt who all served our country. I applied to all academies. If given the opportunity to serve my country, I will be proud and honored to serve in any branch." Mathieson came to Kwajalein in 2007 and will have his final decision on where he'll attend in a few weeks.
