TIP OF THE WEEK

USAKA Regulation 190-5 states that bicycle registration is mandatory. The purpose of registering your bicycle is to assist KPD in establishing proof of ownership in the event your bicycle is lost or stolen. This regulation requires bicycle owners to register their bike within two weeks of buying, making or receiving a bike as a gift. All personnel departing Kwajalein must out-process with KPD and show the disposition of their bike. The easy way to accomplish this task is for both parties to come to KPD and allow us to transfer the registration from the previous owner to the new owner.

Unregistered bikes will be treated as abandoned. They will be tagged with a notification tag for seven days before being impounded. After being impounded for 45 days, the bikes will be prepared for sale at the quarterly police auction. Bikes that have no value will not be held; they will be disposed of.

In February, KPD renewed the process of identifying abandoned bicycles. The goal of KPD is to achieve voluntary compliance with the intent and spirit of the regulation. To avoid having your bicycle impounded for being abandoned, register your bicycle. Your bicycle can be registered at the police department 24 hours a day, any day of the week.

Students urged to SOAR

Student Online Achievement Resources is an innovative program that makes it easy for parents to play an active role in their children's education. SOAR is an internet-based application. Students take an assessment aligned to state standards and SOAR directs them to individualized tutorials to improve skills where needed. Parents can monitor their children's progress from anywhere and are provided with resource materials. SOAR content is appropriate for students in grades 3-11. Younger students may need adult assistance to navigate the program. SOAR is free – there are no costs associated with registration or use of this program. It is funded through a congressional appropriation.

The Military Impacted Schools Association sponsors SOAR in partnership with the University of Northern Iowa, The Princeton Review and Skills Tutor. They have come together to provide resources to assist with the unique challenges for children attending schools on military bases.

First, go to www.SoarAtHome.org and register yourself and your children. Students can begin taking assessments immediately, enjoy skills resources, analysis of assessments and utilize skills tutor lessons.

THE RUMOR MILL

Col. Joseph Gaines addresses circulating rumors head-on. Rumors can earn from one to five ears. One ear is an unfounded rumor, while a rumor earning five ears is the truth.

Rumor: The IMCOM transition is dead.

This is false. The IMCOM transition is not dead but on hold. This is pending a review of other options being considered by the Army for the future sustainment of USAKA. After this review and decisions by the Army, further information will be publicized.

THE KWAJALEIN HOURGLASS

The Kwajalein Hourglass is named for the insignia of the U.S. Army 7th Infantry Division, which liberated the island from the forces of Imperial Japan on Feb. 4, 1944.

The Kwajalein Hourglass is an authorized publication for military personnel, federal employees, contractor workers and their families assigned to U.S. Army Kwajalein Atoll. Contents of The Hourglass are not necessarily official views of, or endorsed by, the U.S. Government, Department of Defense, Department of the Army or USAKA. It is published Saturdays in accordance with Army Regulation 360-1 and using a network printer by Kwajalein Range Services editorial staff.

Seven Soldiers battle to be SMDC Soldier of the Year

By Sheila Gideon
Managing Editor

Seven Soldiers put their skills to the test as they competed for the U.S. Army Space and Missile Defense Command Pacific Region Soldier of the Year title. The competitors visited U.S. Army Kwajalein Atoll June 3-7, where the annual event was held for the first time. The Soldiers were measured on their performance of various Army Warrior Tasks. In the end, Staff Sgt. Chauncey Carter and Spc. Ryan Powers were declared the winners and will move on with the ultimate goal of competing for the Army's Best Warrior.

The participants performed and were measured in five events. The first was rifle marksmanship, which was done at their home companies. Carter, who won as a noncommissioned officer, and Powers, who won as a Soldier, can both attribute their wins to excellence in rifle qualifications. When they arrived at USAKA, their first challenge was the standard Army Physical Fitness Test. While some Soldiers considered this the toughest part of the competition due to the weather on Kwajalein, others felt they performed best in this area. "It was tough out here with the wind but I think we all rose to the challenge," said Staff Sgt. Reid Gaskin.

The mystery event, urban orienteering, was held June 3. The Soldiers were not told about the event until right before they were to perform it. They were tasked to use a map of Kwajalein to plot a route to 20 buildings, find an envelope and answer the military trivia questions they found. Points were awarded for finding the building, answering correctly and timeliness. A majority of the participants considered this the most challenging event. For some, having to ride a bicycle to each building was the most brutal part, while others were tripped up by the trivia questions.

On June 4 the Soldiers performed the Warrior Tasks and Battle Drills. It tested skills every Soldier in the Army needs to know. There were five stations where their performances were measured. They had to interact with media, evaluate a casualty, use visual signaling techniques, request a medevac and give a spot report.

Sunday was the last day of testing and ended with the administrative boards. It consisted of five panel members and the president, Sgt. Maj. Hohn Wolf, who organized the competition at USAKA. Competitors did facing movements so board members could evaluate their uniform; they made sure it was worn properly and fit correctly. Soldiers were asked to explain why they thought they should be chosen and gave a brief oral biography. Panel members then asked questions; they were able to ask as many as they wanted until satisfied. Wolf chose to do rapid fire questioning – any panel member could ask any question at any time.

Soldiers were chosen for this competition by excelling within their companies. "You have to succeed at your unit level and stand out from your peers," said Spc. Noah Harvey. Each Soldier prepared for the competition differently, yet they all seemed to have a few tactics in common. As Carter put it, "Study, study, study." Spc. Trey Barker recommended studying the warrior tasks and battle drills. "That way you prep yourself to be as well-rounded as you can," Barker said.

Regardless of results, all participants would recommend participation to their fellow Soldiers if given the opportunity. Gaskin said, "You meet a lot of people who may or may not work in your field. You learn new perspectives. It's cool to get out and see how other people do things and go to new places." Barker agreed, saying, "You meet people from all over. You learn from them so you can go back and excel in your own unit."

SAR exercise trains, fine-tunes response

Article and photos by Catherine Layton
Associate Editor

A search and rescue exercise operation was conducted Wednesday. It incorporated various departments and emergency responders on Kwajalein, and included U.S. Coast Guard observers from Maui and the Joint Response Coordination Center in Honolulu. The exercise was coordinated by Maj. Stephen Parrish.

The exercise began at 8 a.m. when a B-boat sent a broken distress call to the Small Boat Marina that they were in high seas and taking on water, after which radio communications were lost. The B-boat had filed a float plan for four adults to fish on the east reef, using Bigej Pass; the boat, however, did not follow their float plan, so the search began.

The SBM notified Kwajalein Police Department and the crew of the search and rescue boat SR-001 mustered on deck to get underway. Jeff Booty, the captain of SR-001, made radio contact with the SBM to gather information such as the B-boat's float plan, passenger manifest and time of departure. Emergency medical technicians from Kwajalein Fire Department, Stan Edwards and Frank Knight, boarded the vessel and within 20 minutes of notification, SR-001 was underway towards Bigej.

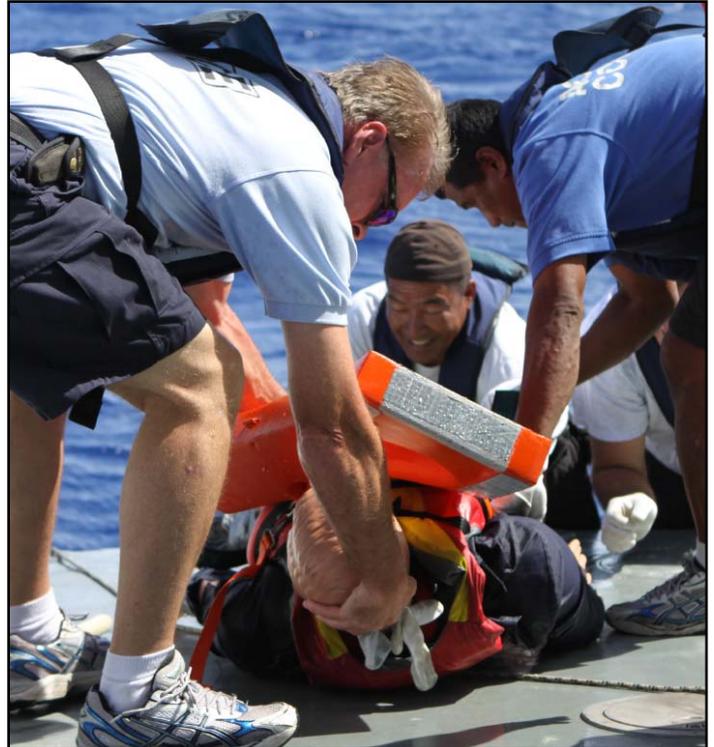

The SAR boat reached Bigej and set up a search grid to cover the most area in the shortest time. Actual winds were a sustained 34 knots, which made for a rough ride. Booty determined that better use of time was searching in the lagoon for the "distressed" B-boat, since waters were rough and he felt it was unsafe to take his boat and crew oceanside in high seas.

After approximately an hour, a helicopter was dispatched from Kwajalein to aid in the search from the air. The helicopter searched the west reef, while the SAR boat continued to search the east reef. The B-boat was sighted by the helicopter oceanside at Gea Pass. Pilot Mike Chickilly identified the overturned boat and four personnel in the water. He reported the sighting to SR-001 and the Emergency Operations Center.

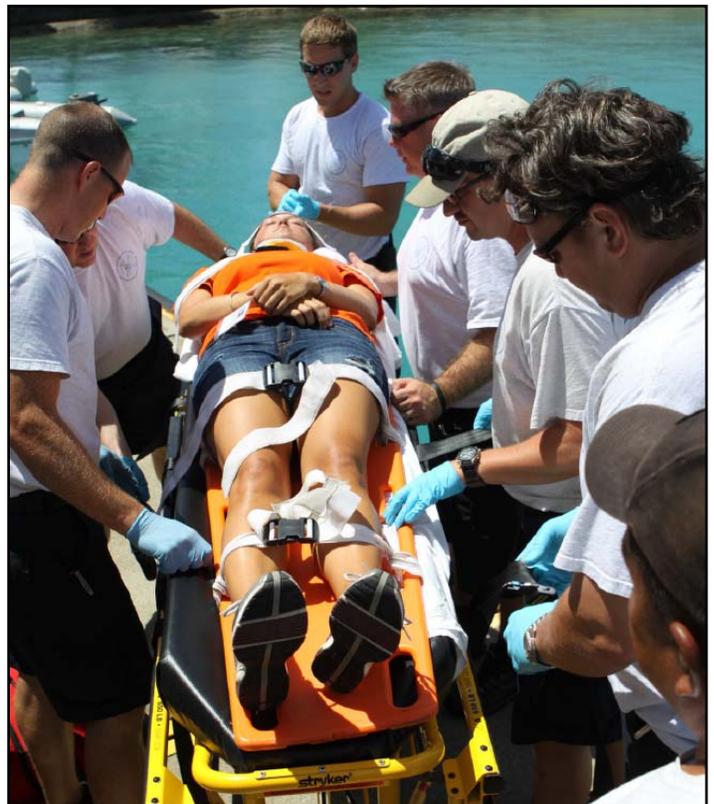

SR-001 reached the area in about 15 minutes and recovery of the "passengers" took precedence. For the scenario, there were four passengers with various injuries, including hypothermia, unconsciousness and multiple scrapes. The crew pulled aboard all victims, represented by a 180-pound training dummy.

The SAR boat headed back towards Kwajalein, contacting the SBM to make arrangements for space to be cleared for mooring and for the EMTs that would be arriving. The boat arrived at 11 a.m., and EMTs boarded the vessel and began assessing the injuries. The victims were transferred from the boat to the pier and into the ambulance.

The reason for the exercise was to focus on any possible weaknesses in search and rescue efforts and improve coordination between departments. A full assessment of the operation will be discussed with all participants. An initial assessment was held after the scenario was completed so participants could elaborate on their observations and experiences. Adjustments will be made in future search and rescue operations from lessons learned in this invaluable operation.

Jeff Booty, captain of the Search and Rescue boat SR-001, along with crewmembers Abimelek Danny and James Langitor pull the 180-pound mannequin from the water during the search and rescue exercise Wednesday.

Emergency responders met the SR-001 at the Small Boat Marina to assess and transport the "victims" to the hospital for treatment during the search and rescue exercise Wednesday.

Comprehensive Gates Millennium Scholarship awarded to KHS senior

Article and photo by Catherine Layton Associate Editor

There is never a shortage of remarkable graduates to come out of Kwajalein High School, and with impressive youth comes impressive rewards. Scholarships are an exciting segment of the graduation ceremony, with 34 awards given by local clubs and contractors to the graduating class of only 23 students.

Many students also received scholarships for achievements given by other organizations or universities. One award, the Gates Millennium scholarship, is unprecedented even by Kwajalein's standards, and was awarded to senior Leimamo Wase.

A family friend told Wase about the Gate's Foundation and encouraged Wase to apply. "When Mamo came for her first college discussion, she asked if I knew about the scholarship," KHS guidance counselor Jamie Bowers said. "It is always sitting here on my shelf, but very few people qualify for it, because of the high leadership expectations and the high GPA requirement," he continued.

Wase asked if Bowers would assist her with the application process. It was a large application, and it required nine essays along with the nomination from Bowers, and a recommendation from her National Honor Society advisor, AnnElise Peterson. Wase started in October and submitted the entire application packet in January. "It was even more encompassing than the college applications," said Wase.

One morning in April, Wase came to school and went to Peterson's room and was greeted with congratulations. It took Wase by surprise, not even realizing why she was being congratulated. Peterson opened the email, "...and she showed me the email, and we both got so emotional. We went to Mr. Bowers, but he hadn't seen his email yet either!"

It was an exciting day for all. "This is an amazing, life-changing opportunity and we are very proud of Mamo, and very proud she came from here. She worked really, really hard for this," said Bowers. He continued, "This provides 100 percent personal and financial support in financial aid throughout her higher education years. It is unusual because the millennium program assigns Mamo a mentor, located in Washington, D.C., someone we have been in contact with throughout the entire process. That mentor will follow her throughout her entire experience, including her undergraduate and beyond if she chooses to pursue that. She'll receive complete financial payment for college, plus expenses, including leadership opportunities, summer programs and career guidance from the foundation for as long as she wants. It is unprecedented at Kwajalein for a student to receive a scholarship of this magnitude."

Kwajalein High School guidance counselor Jamie Bowers worked with Leimamo Wase during the extensive application phase for the Gates Millennium scholarship that started in October. Wase turned in the application in January, and was notified in late April of her award.

Twenty-three Spartans say farewell to Kwajalein Jr./Sr. High School June 3

Darryl Lorok shows his “Spartan Spirit” at he walks the stage to receive his high school diploma.

Article and photos by Sheila Gideon

Kwajalein has many traditions and the high school graduation ceremony is one of the most exciting and unique ones to look forward to each year. As usual, the Davye Davis Multi-Purpose room was transformed into a shrine to this year’s graduating seniors. There was a line outside the door of eager parents, families and friends, all waiting to see their special graduate walk barefoot in darkness to the stage with their single lit candle.

It was standing-room-only once all the graduates entered and Shereima Reimers welcomed guests. Jake Villarreal then translated her greeting into Marshallese.

Melissa Peacock then delivered her Valedictorian address. She quoted some of her favorites – Bob Marley and Bugs Bunny. She told her fellow classmates, “Whatever your vision is, whoever you want to be, it is up to you to make it happen.” She encouraged them to push through the difficult times and even if things don’t turn out the way they intended, it doesn’t mean it won’t work out in the end. “Do not burden yourself thinking about what could have been. Instead, think about what can still be. Live life to its fullest. Class of 2011, today is your day. Now wake up and live.”

Julie Alves and Leimamo Wase wowed the crowd with their hula to “Maunaleo.” The two friends have been hula partners for many years.

Next, scholarships were given. Each recipient was praised for their hard work not only in the classroom but within the community. Presenters stated it was difficult to pick just a few winners out of so many wonderful and deserving applicants.

Dan Valles, Kyle Cassiday and Robin Loeak displayed their talent for music with their rendition of “Never Gonna Be Alone.” Valles and Cassiday played guitar while Loeak sang and played drums.

The Class History is a comical graduation tradition. Cassiday, Stephanie Premo and Carrie West made the audience laugh and cheer with the tale of how the Class of 2011 came to be. Premo told the story of how valedictorian, Peacock, misspelled 'puppies' in the first grade spelling bee. "Don't worry, Melissa. We all know you can spell 'puppies' now," she joked. The students weaved the story of how they were sad to see classmates go, but thrilled to see them return, some of them more than once. Maddi Hall and her family moved from Kwajalein and returned twice. In seventh grade, they welcomed Valles and "his huge fro," and Will McPhatter and his southern accent. As "Sevies" they endured a lot of embarrassment, but were able to redeem themselves that year by winning the Turkey Bowl. In tenth grade, Aubrey Sanborn nearly set Reimers on fire with the Bunsen burner. "Shereima didn't speak to her for the rest of the week," Premo said as Reimers beamed a smirk on stage. Cassiday recalled in eleventh grade when Mr. Fullerton began making them memorize important dates in American history. Cassiday asked his class, "What year was Brown versus Board of Education?" They all replied in dry unison, "1954." West wrapped it up. "We have been through a lot together and will be sad to see each other go. Thanks for the memories, class of 2011."

The room got quiet as the seniors took a seat together on the floor, facing the stage. The Album of Memories showcased each student as babies, toddlers, teenagers and young adults. Each photo got well-deserved smiles and laughs as the audience watched all 23 students grow up before their eyes.

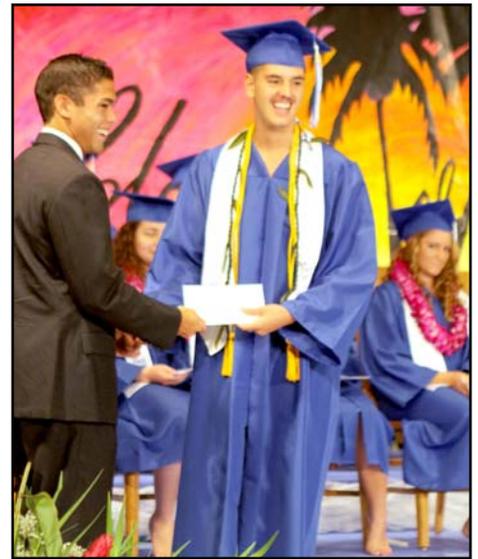

Melissa Peacock receives a scholarship from Neibanjang Lavin, who represents the Jiron Drik Drik club.

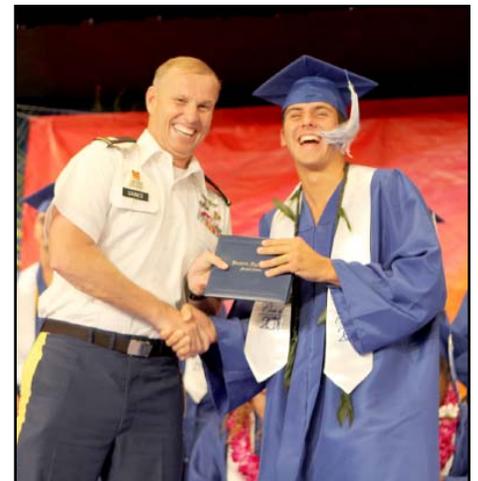

Before receiving their diplomas, the students thanked some special people. "Throughout our lives, there have been many people who have helped us become the unique, spirited young adults we are today," began Alves. "We would not be standing up here tonight without all the encouragement, inspiration, advice, motivation and guidance we've received from everyone in the community." They called up Barbara Bicanich, Jamie Bowers, Dick Shields, Gloria Cassiday, Laura Alves, Sarah Stepchew and Wendy Peacock and thanked them with a lei and loving hug.

Principal Al Robinson took the stage to honor the top two students of the graduating class. "We wanted to make sure [they knew] how much we appreciated the effort that goes in to just about perfect academic success." He first recognized the class salutatorian, Mathieson, who graduated with a 3.84 grade point average. Valedictorian Peacock was also given a medal and honored for her 3.99 average.

Finally, it was time to get down to business. Col. Joseph Gaines, USAKA Commander, and Sgt. Maj. Hohn Wolf joined Robinson on stage to hand out the diplomas. Then the class turned their tassels and became high school graduates with beaming smiles on their faces. The students exited the MP Room and met emotional family and friends outside to receive congratulations and of course, numerous flower and candy leis.

THEN AND NOW - "THE POST OFFICE"

Though the post office workers at USAKA don't have to worry about snow, they do complete their appointed rounds through nearly every other thing thrown at them, be it from Mother Nature or Hickham Air Force Base. The post office brings excitement when the little handwritten slips show up in our boxes, and sometimes frustration when they don't. Packages are eagerly anticipated by residents, whether they are gifts from family and friends or items sent back from vacations. We send our unique items to those never getting the chance to visit our temporary home, extending further the ever-present necessity of our link to the larger world.
