THUMBS UP

- To the Help Desk for their quick response to my work order. The guys were speedy, professional and very friendly!
- To Jonathan King, for notifying the Metroliner pilot after take off from Roi-Namur July 30 that heavy smoke was coming from the engine that eventually went out. He was the Roi Fire Department dispatcher at the time.
- To Marcus Johnson and the appliance shop for continually going above and beyond what's required of them to make sure the job gets done.

In Remembrance

Joseph Charles "Joe" Koegler, 79, husband of over 51 years to Anne Koegler, died Sunday, at his home in Manning, S.C. An aerospace engineer, he was employed by MIT's Lincoln Lab for the final 25 years of his working life. His career with the Lab took him from Massachusetts to the Kwajalein Missile Range. He served two tours on Kwajalein: 1978-1981 with his family, and 1984-1989 with his wife, Anne. He flew daily to Roi-Namur to work in plans and operations and he later served as assistant group leader at ALTAIR. He is survived by his wife, Anne Koegler; three daughters, Lise Koegler, Beatrice MacDonald and Christine Deveney; two sons, Joseph Charles Koegler Jr. and Robert Koegler; and his sister, Dorothy Lotz.

THE RUMOR MILL

Col. Joseph Gaines addresses circulating rumors head-on. Rumors can earn from one to five ears. One ear is an unfounded rumor, while a rumor earning five ears is the truth.

Rumor: The Army and Air Force Exchange Service is pulling out of Kwajalein and Roi.

This is not happening. We talked with AAFES general manager Tim Neal and he confirmed this. "As long as there are active duty service members on Kwajalein, AAFES will have a presence here," Neal said.

THE KWAJALEIN HOURGLASS

The Kwajalein Hourglass is named for the insignia of the U.S. Army 7th Infantry Division, which liberated the island from the forces of Imperial Japan on Feb. 4, 1944.

The Kwajalein Hourglass is an authorized publication for military personnel, federal employees, contractor workers and their families assigned to U.S. Army Kwajalein Atoll. Contents of The Hourglass are not necessarily official views of,

Summer camp ends as Kwaj kids get ready for another school year

By Sheila Gideon
Managing Editor

Kwajalein kids don't have to go far for summer camp here – just to the elementary school. This was the last week for camp as the kids get ready for the start of the school year on Thursday. Summer camp director Shawn Mirowitz kept the kids busy, both physically and creatively, with different weekly themes. This last week was “All Around the World”; each day they “traveled” to a different country. They've also done themes like “Go Green,” concentrating on recycling; “Cooking Week” where they tried 19 different recipes and discussed nutrition; and “Drama and Theatre Week” where they made up and performed their own play for their parents. Field trips to Ebeye, the CRC gym and a ride on the catamaran kept the kids excited. Summer camp assistant Chi Chi Kemem helped Mirowitz keep the kids in line and, most importantly, enjoy their summers to the fullest.

With summer ending, so does camp. But that doesn't mean the fun stops for Kwajalein children. School Age Services starts Thursday in coordination with the beginning of the school year. The CYSS School Age Services before and after school program is now open for registration. The program offers care to children in grades Kindergarten through six, from the hours of 7-8:45 a.m. and 3:20-5:30 p.m., as well as full and half day programs on out-of-school days. Families needing this service for the upcoming school year are asked to register with the CYSS Central Registration office and submit payment by Aug. 31. If you have any questions regarding the program, call Micah Johnson at 52158.

Upcoming events for SAS include an open house from 6-8 p.m., Sept. 9 in the SAS room 7 at the elementary school. This is an opportunity for parents to meet the SAS teachers and visit the classroom. The first Open Recreation event will be a kick-off pool party to celebrate the start of the school year from 3:30-5:30 p.m., Sept. 10, at the Family Pool. The end of September will be busy as well with the 4-H Club beginning; this year, they will offer programs studying photography, citizenship and drama. To end the month, a World Wide Day of Play will be from 6-8 p.m., Sept. 24, at the youth center field. Teens from the youth center will help sponsor the event.

Any children wishing to participate in the SAS program or any of the Open Recreation events must be signed up with CYSS Central Registration.

New system training at shipping, receiving to benefit everyone on Kwajalein, Roi-Namur

The transfer of goods to our island is important business, which is why the recent training for the Kwajalein shipping and receiving department will be such a benefit to island residents. The Military Surface Deployment Distribution Command, out of Scott Air Force Base, Ill., sent program manager Vernita Anderson-Manning and instructor Dan Lucasey to train the Kwajalein shipping and receiving department on a new and more secure system. The trainees included James Corder, Diane Elliott, Mary Harris and Chris Robert.

The SDDC is a unique Army command that delivers world-class distribution solutions. Wherever military service-members are deployed, SDDC is involved in planning and executing the surface delivery of their equipment and supplies. The team arrived Aug. 10, conducted training for three days, and departed Monday. Instructor Lucasey stayed behind one more week to oversee barge operations with the new system.

"We were mandated by Congress and DoD to get rid of our stovepipe-type systems, and come up with a more modern process in order to move cargo in the [Defense Transportation System]," explained Anderson-Manning. The decision was made to retire the World Wide Port System, and replace it with Global Air Transportation Execution System, which also includes surface transportation.

GATES is a more secure software application, explained Anderson-Manning. "The system information is protected really well. They watch every key stroke that you do so you won't be able to make any mistakes." It will be easier for shipping and receiving employees to recognize security breaches, compartmentalize them and shut them down. "Normally, when people roll out new systems, they have major problems." There have only been a handful of minor problems with GATES at all training sites. "It's almost perfect."

The transition to the new system on Kwajalein was "pretty quick and painless," Anderson-Manning said. "They transitioned really well. The folks here are pretty computer ... savvy, so the transition was really easy." In some locations, training can be difficult, whether it be from a language barrier, resistance to change, or most commonly, difficulties with network connectivity; they did not, however, have any of those problems on Kwajalein. One reason for the seamless transition was the preparation done by Gus Garcia, manager of mission systems logistics. He was praised by both Anderson-Manning and Jimmy Matsunaga, manager of transportation and supply, for his work making sure firewalls were open and the new system server was authorized to be put on the network here. "Gus has been a lifesaver as far as network conductivity," Anderson-Manning said. "There were a lot of other sites that we had really big problems with the network connectivity. It's probably one of the first sites we've gone to that we didn't have any IT issues at all."

Anderson-Manning and her team travel all over the world to conduct this training. She's been to Spain, Egypt and East Asia, just to name a few. "We've got 36 sites. We're down to the last two," she said. The overhaul began in 2005, with their last training campaign beginning in November of last year. They are just finishing, with Kwajalein being the next to last stop; the final training will take place in Guam over the next few weeks. "This was probably one of the best sites that we've had to [train at]," said Anderson-Manning, which she appreciated after nine months of travelling the world. "It was nice to have at the end."

AAFES offers many solutions for vendors

Article and photo by Catherine Layton
Associate Editor

Retail shopping on Kwajalein is a subject nearly every resident has a strong opinion about. Things can change quickly, and with the arrival of Tim Neal, the Exchange general manager for Kwajalein, innovative ideas are going to put a new spin on island retail.

A couple of novel ideas are being discussed; first, consolidate the main Exchange and the PXtra into one store, and second, to make the current Exchange a concession mall. "Our plan is, as we go forward, if and when our headquarters decides to reduce to two storefronts, we would consolidate this [the current Exchange] into one large concession mall," explained Neal. A few vendors are already set up in the back of the store, including Daw Frase and Bill Williamson, who moved their storefronts from the former Tape Escape and Micronesian Handicraft Shop space. Caroline Eggers has also signed up, and will move into the concession area in September.

Ultimately, Neal's vision is that "...this will be a one-stop concession, and everyone will be in one location, but nothing is set in stone yet that we will reduce to one storefront. It is an idea that is on the table and is being discussed at my headquarters, and we don't have a final decision. If they do decide to go ahead and implement the change, we are looking at a tentative date of Jan. 1."

The deal is a good one for vendors on Kwaj. "Normally, outside of Kwajalein, Army Air Force Exchange Service charges 20 percent of sales for vendor space, but on Kwajalein it is only 10 percent." Any available store fixtures, storefront space and electricity are included in the percentage paid, but any extras, such as phones or any employees, are to be paid for by the vendors. As far as store fixtures go, "They were not being utilized, so I decided to let the vendors use them on a first come, first serve basis. I know there is another way to get other fixtures through the Army, they just have to sign them over on a hand receipt. I am depleted on glass fixtures, but I have plenty of shelving."

Another benefit in the Exchange is the security cameras that are setup and recording during store hours. The cameras will provide a snapshot of any problems and will allow vendors to check the tapes if they notice any of their merchandise disappearing.

Neal is also looking at the possibility of setting up a booth for short-term vendors to use on a limited time basis. "People that are selling out of their homes are primarily selling to residents of Kwaj because the residents know where to go. We know the people that are here only temporarily don't know where everything is at, so the vendors who don't want the whole commitment of being here every day, but want to be able to set something up to sell things for a short amount of time will have a highly visible place to sell their products."

"We are trying to grow to make it better, but at the same time we are downsizing. We are trying to accommodate this community's needs, and that is what I preach everyday to my people - solve for yes. When someone comes in asking for something, don't tell them 'no,' see what you can do to say 'yes.' We worked with the command, and are now able to send things out on the Thursday ATI flights. So if someone comes in and says, 'I am looking for this grill you don't have, could you get it for me?' I can send a message to AAFES in Hawaii. Hawaii can pull it and send it out on the ATI flight. If everything works out, and if the item gets to the airport on Tuesday, it can get here on Thursday. The only exemptions are items too large to go on the ATI flight, no food and no alcohol."

"We are trying to upgrade our customer computer system in-store for faster connection speed to the Web site. Customers can order anything from the AAFES catalog or online. Some stuff can be shipped straight to your post office box. On large items like hot tubs or a couch, those items will ship from our distribution center in Atlanta and will ship in our container on the barge, so it could take around 60-70 days. Shipping costs depend on what the vendor charges AAFES to get to the center in Atlanta, but the shipping on the barge through AAFES is not on the customer."

"We understand that AAFES continues to make adjustments here," said USAKA Commander Col. Joseph Gaines. "From USAKA's perspective we're excited about the many new things AAFES is doing for us - like pizza delivery, new products like spearfishing gear and larger retail areas for our private vendors."

The main key for getting things you want on Kwajalein is to talk to the management. Solutions abound, and so too it seems, our options.

SUMMER READING

The 2011 Summer Reading Program had 62 participants, and submitted 339 reading records. There were more than 16,200 pages for our chapter readers and 1,250 books for our beginner readers — that's approximately 40,000 pages!

This summer's super readers are Arwen and Sage Fleet, who submitted 27 reading records; they each finished 162 books.

Ashley Homuth and Amanda Lescalleet each submitted 13 reading records, finishing 78 books a piece. Chapter book reader Parker Girod completed 5,311 pages of reading this summer. Sofia Beals was the second highest page reader.

The success of this program is owed to many folks including the library volunteers, Catlin Layton, Jon Nelson and all of the parents who read with their children and encouraged them daily. A very special thanks to Parker Girod, who is officially our youngest library volunteer. Girod works weekly to help keep the library organized and has even been recruiting her friends to help.

THEN AND NOW - "THE ZEUS MONUMENT"

Testing for anti-missile technologies began in the 1950s after the launch of a Soviet Intercontinental Ballistic Missile. By 1959, the U.S. Army began testing the NIKE-ZEUS system, and by 1961, they had the first successful intercept over White Sands Missile Range in New Mexico. In December 1962, Kwajalein hosted the first long-range intercept over the Pacific. The NIKE-ZEUS missile monument was erected in 1965 from an excess rocket. The rocket began falling apart in 1990 and was dismantled. The base is all that remains of the monument.

USAKA RMI Student Intern Program comes to an end

MIT/LL hosted two RMI student interns in a 10-week program to provide mentoring, resources, motivation and assistance to encourage them to pursue further education and employment in the Marshall Islands in computer and science-related fields. Student interns Toshio Langbon and Kimi Jiwirak worked in a hands-on environment and were given the opportunity to learn and experiment with computers and networking equipment. Jiwirak is a junior at the College of the Marshall Islands and will pursue more education in order to become a computer instructor. Langbon is a senior at CMI, majoring in business. He would like to pursue a career in networks or system administration. Pictured above, left, Col. Joseph Gaines congratulates the interns for their accomplishments and for their desire to come back and work in the Marshall Islands after college. From left, Gaines, Langbon, Jiwirak, intern instructor Ranny Ranis and MIT program technical advisor Kathy Carusone. DISPATCH FROM ROI

Quick and Easy Brie – No one can believe how easy this appetizer is when I've made it for guests at the various lodges I have worked at. It is simple, but makes a fabulous statement served on a decorative plate surrounded by fresh herbs or apple slices with the bread in a basket nearby. The rich taste of the brie is nicely balanced with the sweet or the savory filling you put inside.

Recipe: Quick and Easy Brie

- Round of Brie cheese
- Frozen puff pastry
- 1/4 c. each dried cranberries and toasted chopped almonds OR
- 1/4 c. each ready-made pesto sauce and sun-dried tomatoes

Allow one sheet of puff pastry to thaw at room temperature for 20 minutes. In the middle of pastry place either cranberries and almonds or the pesto and tomatoes. Place the round of brie on top. Gently fold the puff pastry over the top of the cheese and pinch together to seal. Place seam-side down on a cookie sheet and cut a few slits on top to allow steam to escape. Place in a 375 degree oven for approximately 25 minutes or until the pastry becomes golden brown and crisp. Allow to cool briefly, place on a serving plate with thin-sliced, crusty bread. You may also serve with thin slices of crisp apple if doing the cranberry and almond version, or with roast garlic and chopped tomatoes with the pesto version.

Beginning immediately, many items on the golf course will be relocated. Items include "all benches, ball washers, trash cans, water cooler stands or anything otherwise not considered permanent" that are within 500 feet of the center of the runway. This action is happening as a result of the Bucholz Army Airfield survey. Please be patient as we find new locations for these items. Questions, contact Bob Butz.
