Holly Botes is the new Attorney Advisor at U.S. Army Kwajalein Atoll. She moved here with her husband, Henry, and daughters, Jolyn, 7, and Leighton, 4. They hail from Pasco, Wash. Holly and Henry are looking forward to spending down time with their kids and enjoying the beaches. They are also very excited to get rid of their cell phones. The kids are looking forward to getting involved in swimming and other sports.

THE KWAJALEIN HOURGLASS

The Kwajalein Hourglass is named for the insignia of the U.S. Army 7th Infantry Division, which liberated the island from the forces of Imperial Japan on Feb. 4, 1944.

The Kwajalein Hourglass is an authorized publication for military personnel, federal employees, contractor workers and their families assigned to U.S. Army Kwajalein Atoll. Contents of the Hourglass are not necessarily official views of, or endorsed by, the U.S. Government, Department of Defense, Department of the Army or USAKA. It is published Saturdays in accordance with Army Regulation 360-1 and using a network printer by Kwajalein Range Services editorial staff.

Scholarships available for Marshallese students to attend summer programs

JSA offers classes at Princeton, Georgetown, Stanford

By Sheila Gideon
Managing Editor

There are several programs available for American and Marshallese students to help prepare them for college. Not all of them, however, offer full scholarships to prestigious universities in the United States. Junior Statesmen Summer School is one of those opportunities. Junior State of America offers summer educational enrichment experiences for high school students to take classes at Princeton, Stanford or Georgetown Universities where they take a government class and a speech and debate class. Dr. Katie Langford visited Majuro, Kwajalein and Ebeye last week to recruit Marshallese students to not only attend the summer program, but to apply for one of the four full Department of the Interior scholarships that pay full tuition and round-trip airfare to the summer program.

"The U.S. government is invested in the education of Pacific Islanders and also Caribbean Islanders," Langford said. Grants from DOI are awarded to students as scholarships to attend these educational enrichment programs. Students from Guam, Palau, Federated States of Micronesia, American Samoa, Marshall Islands and U.S. Virgin Islands are eligible for this grant. Each area gets four DOI scholarships. To be eligible for the Marshall Islands scholarship, you must be a Marshallese citizen with a Marshallese passport, going to school in the Marshall Islands. Ri'katak students who attend school at Kwajalein are eligible. There are smaller monetary scholarships available for American students who are interested, but the full scholarships are for Marshallese citizens only.

This was Langford's first visit; however, recruiters for JSA have visited before; there has been a JSA presence in the Pacific for close to 30 years. On March 14, Langford met with Al Robinson, Kwajalein Schools superintendent, and Jamie Bowers, Kwajalein Jr./Sr. High School guidance counselor. The next day, she visited several schools on Ebeye to discuss the program with school faculty and students.

Langford's task as a recruiter was to educate students on what the programs entail, the application process and to interview any interested students for the upcoming summer program. She described in detail what school is like so they understand the challenge they are signing up for.

Students will live on campus in the dorms for three weeks. They go to school up to 8 hours a day, six days a week. She talked about dorm life and the weather at each location. There is a college student who lives in the dorm with them and there is always a Pacific Islander on staff. She even talked about food. "Stanford has rice at lunch and dinner, which is significant because that's a big portion of their (Pacific Islanders) diet." She discussed home sickness. "For some students, this could be their first time off island." It's not all work and no play. There are dances every Saturday night, cultural trips and talent shows. If they have family in the area, they can be signed out and visit on their day off.

For Pacific and Caribbean Islanders, there is an extra prep week at the universities before classes start. "The students are usually concerned about whether they can cut it or not. It's demanding for every single student," Langford said. "With the educational system being what it is, there's a gap between Pacific Islanders and Caribbean Islanders and the U.S. mainland kids. What we do during that week is try to close that gap." The prep includes reading skills such as skimming, due to the large amount of reading required throughout the program. "We teach them how to do research at a major university library. That is so shocking to them ... to see a major research library; it's bigger probably than their school property." They learn how to write research papers, organize and practice speeches. "It's sort of a crash course in how to do college." Arriving a week early also helps them adjust to the time zone change.

Most students who participate in the program attend the summer before their sophomore or senior years. There is also a program only at Princeton that is for eighth-grade students going into their freshman year.

The application process includes two essays about a political topic that interests them. "They don't have to talk about a global issue; they can talk about an issue particular to their island," Langford said. The last essay discusses why they should be considered for the scholarship. They must also have a teacher or guidance counselor recommendation. The last requirement is a transcript.

Langford has already interviewed 15 students in Majuro. If anyone from Kwajalein or Ebeye wants to apply, they will all be competing for the four DOI scholarships. Langford said it's worth the competition for what you get back from the program. "You get residential college experience so you know what it's like. You're better prepared (for college)."

National Honor Society Coffee Shop

By Mary McPhatter and John Sholar
KHS Guest Writers

The National Honor Society held its annual Coffee Shop fundraiser in the MP Room on Sunday evening. NHS organizes the event each year to raise money to fund service projects on Ebeye. This year's Coffee Shop raised over $2,500.

The night was filled with drinks and desserts while guests listened to live music and reminisced over old yearbooks. In honor of St. Patrick's Day, the 2013 Coffee Shop was Irish themed. Guests could enjoy homebrewed root beer and cream soda, choose from several Spartans Espresso specialties, or dine on homemade desserts. Local musicians, young and old, entertained guests throughout the evening. Young children could have fun in the "Kiddie Korner," where they watched movies, colored pictures and played games.

"The enthusiasm was contagious. Everybody had a great time, and I'm sure we'll be able to use the proceeds to benefit schools on Ebeye," said Rachel DeLange, who cheerfully danced the Irish jig in an attempt to sell green shamrock necklaces to customers.

The NHS is a group of students dedicated to the principles of leadership, scholarship, community service and character. They are comprised of 28 hardworking students; teachers Matt and Mindi Gerber act as advisors. The club is led by four senior officers: President Kori Dowell, Vice President Mary McPhatter, Secretary Shannon Wilkinson and Treasurer Eva Seelye.

Using the proceeds from the 2012 Coffee Shop, the NHS club purchased school and athletic supplies which were then delivered to the Seven Day Adventists, Calvary and Jabro Schools on Ebeye. After the supplies were delivered, members of the club split into three groups and spent the rest of the morning interacting and playing games with the Marshallese students. The proceeds from this year's Coffee Shop will be put towards a similar service project in the coming school year.

The night was a great success, thanks to the collective efforts of many community members. Dick Shields served as master of the MP Room, Keith and Wendy Peacock donated their delicious homebrewed root beer and cream soda, and Laura Callaway and Pam Melinauskas coordinated the Spartans Espresso team. Couches and chairs were delivered from Furniture Warehouse for guests to relax on. The event would not have been possible without all the musicians who performed and those who came out to support the cause.

Desserts, coffee drinks and other beverages were served at this year's Coffee Shop by Spartan Espresso and NHS students.

From the Big Apple to 3rd Island

WorldTeach teacher reflects on this year's experience

By Sheila Gideon
Managing Editor

WorldTeach is a non-profit organization that offers volunteer teaching opportunities in developing countries to “gain cultural understanding and ability to work independently in a new and often challenging environment,” according to their website. Teaching regions include Asia, Africa, Pacific Islands, Europe, Latin America and South America.

Stephanie Stretch is the newest WorldTeach teacher at Enniburr School. She graduated from Syracuse University in 2011 with a bachelor's degree in communication design. This was her first teaching experience. She went from working at a design firm in New York City to teaching on this small island in the Pacific. She heard about the WorldTeach program when she was backpacking in Southeast Asia, near Laos. She came across a fellow traveler who was a field director for the WorldTeach China program. She researched the organization and decided it was something she wanted to do.

Stretch arrived in Majuro July 12, 2012 for her one month long orientation period. WorldTeach provides an intensive in-country orientation that includes teacher training, cross-cultural adjustment seminars, health and safety tips, and language lessons. Her actual teaching assignment is for 200 school days.

WorldTeach volunteers fill out a questionnaire and choose their general location, but not the specific island or school. Stretch picked the Marshall Islands, but didn't know she would end up on Enniburr. When Stretch first got off the plane in Majuro, the heavy humidity imprinted on her first. Then she took a look around and realized just how small the islands are. Even though she did research before she arrived in the Marshall Islands, she expected Majuro to be much bigger than it turned out to be. “[That] says a lot,” Stretch joked, “because it's huge compared to [other islands] in the Marshalls.” When she finally got to Enniburr, she was even further amazed at how small the island was. “It's just as wide as it is long,” she remembered thinking.

Stretch teaches grades 3-8 English and a grades 7-8 girl's health. Her ability to understand Marshallese gets more and more fine tuned as the year goes on. “I can understand it much better than I can speak it.” She said students in grades 5-8 have decent comprehension, so the language barrier has not been too difficult. She uses hand gestures and body language to convey what they can't understand verbally. “It's much better than I thought it would be. ... It's a fun language. I like learning it. It's fun when the kids get to teach it to me, and they like to teach me.”

WorldTeach volunteers are set up with a host family who they live with during their teaching stay. The deBrum family is hosting Stretch. “They are very accommodating,” she said. “They treat me very, very well and I'm lucky to have them.” She has two host brothers, one in 7th grade and one is just 2 years old. Her host mother is a kindergarten teacher at the same school. The deBrum's have been hosting WorldTeach teachers on Enniburr and Ujaj for several years.

Even though Enniburr is small and she has been there for eight months, she still experiences something new every day. “Because my day is filled with new experiences, it doesn't really seem like life is so small.” She also visits Roi on Saturday mornings to go online and call family. She will also visit the island on a 480 Form for the weekend once a month. “Hot showers – so great!” she joked.

Despite the challenges, Stretch knows this experience was worthwhile. “I think the most important lesson I've learned from the Marshallese is their compassion for each other. Something as simple as sharing, they take to a whole new level. ... They will put you first before themselves always. I really admire that about them.” She is also reminded of how important education is. “I'm so thankful for the education that I have.”

Looking toward her future, Stretch is not quite sure what she wants to do or where she will end up. She really likes teaching and is working on her Teaching, English and Foreign Language certification. As far as working overseas, she said, “This is just the beginning.” She doesn't see herself staying in one place for the rest of her life. “I really want to try somewhere new.”

DISPATCH FROM ROI

RNCC: A course description... 9 Holes of Tropical Terror

By Jeff Paquin

Hole 1 - A medium par 3

With the wind at your back, you step down a club and take a whack.
You watch the ball sail and hope for a Greenie,
Oh, no, it falls short, you look like a weenie.

Hole 2 - A short dogleg right par 4

The wind is blowing left to right,
Get a good drive and you'll stick it tight.
So you swing real hard and get a good hit,
Oh, no, you've sliced it and it's sitting in (you know it).

Hole 3 - The shortest par 4 with a concrete water hazard

On this short little hole the wind is in your face,
Take an easy drive and you're in a good place.
Second shot in, you're thinking a birdie,
Oh, no, you hit the concrete water, "This aint gonna be purdy."

Hole 4 - The par 4 that thinks it's a par 5

Hole 4 slopes long and to the right,
After a good drive the tiny green is in sight.
Two shots, a chip and two putts in the hole.
To celebrate a par you light up a stogey,
Oh, no, you hear a voice, "That's no par, you just got a bogey."

Hole 5 and Hole 6 - Back to back par 5's.

Uphill both ways in the snow barefoot.
With mild but steady 20 mph winds in the face,
You stumble and stammer and try to keep pace.
You walk off the 6 green, you've passed the test,
Oh, no, you've fallen down, it's cardiac arrest.

Hole 7 - A short par 3 with greenside, green top bunkers

Strong winds from behind a pitching wedge will do,
You land on the green, "Wow, now
that's something new."
You walk to your ball, putter in hand,
Oh, no, the ball's on the green, but's landed in sand.

Hole 8 - An easy par 4 dogleg right with driving winds

Two holes to go, you're almost done,
"Oh, Lord," I pray, "let this be The One."
You drive it long, straight and true,
Oh, no, hit the dang palm tree and it stuck like glue.

Hole 9 - A drivable par 4, 90-degree dogleg left

You walk to the tee thinking fairway or green,
You say to yourself, "Just gotta hit it clean."
You aim for the green, it's gonna be cool,
Oh, no, too hard, it's headed for the pool.
