SECAF visit

Secretary of the Air Force Whit Peters, right, shakes hands with Lt. Col. Dave Stoddard, USAKA/KMR deputy commander, Thursday night at Bucholz Army Airfield.

Peters' C-20 transport plane stopped at Kwajalein for refueling while en route from Australia to Honolulu. Peters had been visiting airmen serving in Darwin, Australia, in support of the international peacekeeping mission in East Timor. Peters also attended the site closure of Joint Defense Facility Nurrunger in Woomera, Australia.

During his 45 minutes on-island, Peters visited with Stoddard and Lt. Col. Steve Beal. He and his staff also shopped at the Micronesia Handicraft Shop.

Halloween: A nightmare of a good time

Memories of hastily made construction paper and glitter costumes stuck together with glue and staples — the envied kids had mothers who actually sewed. Sturdy pillowcases, not those flimsy paper bags, for gathering trick-or-treat booty from house-to-house sojourns. Upset stomachs from stuffing chocolate bars, candied apples, candy corn and unidentifiable sugary treats into eager mouths.

The ultimate Halloween treat was the nerve-wracking trip to the local haunted house.

From Oct. 24 through Oct. 31, Kwaj residents have the opportunity to experience Halloween at a variety of events: Costume contests, including the annual shaving cream social; a haunted house at the CRC gym; a party at the Yokwe Yuk Club; and, of course, trick-or-treating on Halloween night are among the offerings.

Residents can not only be scared, but can scare others. Community Activities is looking for volunteers to help with the haunted house at the CRC gym Oct. 30 - 31.

"Anybody who wants to get involved ... if they want to dress up and be spooks or guides. They can do one night or both nights — it's very flexible. Even if it's just an hour, they can do as little or as much as they want," said Steve Snider, superintendent of entertainment services.

The haunted house is a very involved project.

"It is a lot of work. You are walking through a complete maze; there is spooky music. This year there is going to be a big surprise as they enter the haunted house."

Snider continued.

Work on the haunted house will begin Oct. 24. Volunteers are encouraged to contact Community Activities by Oct. 22, but the real deadline to participate is Halloween night.

"If someone even thinks they may be interested, they should call — we'll find a place for them to help," Snider said.

There is also an opportunity for residents to express their own Halloween ideas by sponsoring a room or space in the haunted house. Last year, Kwajalein Hospital, Marine Department, Small Boat Marina and Paul McGrew's crew sponsored scary rooms.

"They can do a complete room or a very small space. We'll make the size they want and help as much as we can with decorations we have available," Snider said.

Call Snider or anyone at Community Activities, at 53331, to help with or to sponsor a space in the haunted house.

Other volunteer opportunities are available for those who love Halloween.

The Hourglass is named for the insignia of the U.S. Army 7th Infantry Division, which liberated the island from the forces of Imperial Japan on Feb 4, 1944. The Kwajalein Hourglass is an authorized Army newspaper published by the Commander, USAKA/KMR, under provisions of AR360-81. It is prepared by a Raytheon Range Systems Engineering editorial staff under contract DASG60-94-C-0067, printed on an offset press, and distributed Tuesdays and Fridays to a circulation of 2,500 military personnel, federal employees, contractor workers, and their families assigned to the command. The views and opinions expressed herein are not necessarily those of the Department of the Army.

Mail should be addressed to: Hourglass, P. O. Box 23, APO AP 96555. Phone: Autovon 254-3539; local 53539. All classified ads and notices must be submitted by noon Friday for Tuesday's publication and noon Wednesday for Friday's publication.

Help is needed at the costume contest for children of all ages at the high school MP room, Oct. 28, starting at 5 p.m. The annual shaving cream social will also need helpers to hand out towels at the Family Pool starting at 4:15 p.m. on Oct. 29. Call Community Activities to volunteer.

Kwaj residents also have other activities on the calendar for Halloween.

The high school MP room will be the location of a dance for grades seven through 12, Oct. 24, starting at 7 p.m.

The Yokwe Yuk Club is hosting a Halloween party on Oct. 31 starting at 8 p.m.

"I actually initiated the Halloween party [at the Yokwe Yuk Club] last year," said Malcolm Gowans, Sodexho Marriott Yokwe Yuk bar manager.

"We had a fantastic turnout. This year we are going full blast. We will be playing 'Rocky Horror Picture Show' along with a performance of the 'Time Warp' from the movie," Gowans added.

Steve McGrew will DJ the event. There will be prizes for the best costumes, male and female, and also the worst costumes.

There will also be different games with prizes, such as the "mummy game."

"Couples will come on to the floor and attempt to mummify their partner by wrapping them with toilet paper," Gowans explained.

In addition to the games, prizes, music and dancing, food with mouth-watering names, such as "puked-up potatoes," and "maggot stew" will slither out of executive chef Robert Baker's kitchen at the Yokwe Yuk to complete the total Halloween experience.

"[Halloween] has always been a big deal. It's the kickoff to the holiday season," Ellen Smith, Sodexho Marriott food service director, said.

Added Gowans, "Halloween goes back to everybody being kids ... It gives you a feeling of perhaps being back at a party in the United States. It's a seasonal thing as well.

"It's tradition."

Top Army official wants to develop dominant force

WASHINGTON (Army News Service) — The Army "will roll up its shirt sleeves" and start changing now to develop a force that is strategically responsive and dominant across the spectrum of operations, said Chief of Staff Gen. Eric K. Shinseki Oct. 12 at the Association of the United States Army's annual meeting in Washington, D.C.

Shinseki shared the Army's vision for next-century's force in a keynote speech that he gave at the AUSA's Eisenhower luncheon and during a press conference that followed the luncheon, which included Secretary of the Army Louis Caldera.

Shinseki said the Army must be more responsive, lethal, agile, versatile, survivable and sustainable to meet the needs of the nation.

As the first step, Shinseki said the Army will develop two technology-enhanced, fast-deployable and lethal brigades at Fort Lewis, Wash., this year, using knowledge gained by Force XXI experiments and off-the-shelf technology available from the private sector.

"The decision to go to Fort Lewis was to pick a site where you had a capability to do a heavy and a light transformation," Shinseki said. "You also have a great deployment airfield at McChord ... so if you're going to pick this [brigade] up and deploy it and demonstrate that you have gained something in terms of strategic responsiveness, that is helpful."

Previous work with the "Strike Force" concept will be incorporated into the brigade conversion project at Fort Lewis.

Shinseki noted that the U.S. Army was at a similar juncture 100 years ago following the U.S. victory in the 1898 Spanish American War.

A refreshing thought: Opinions do count

By KW Hillis

The waiting list had not changed and the time dragged on and on. So Wendy Houston and her friend, Vera Fisher, asked each other why they were waiting and went ahead and formed their own book club.

Houston, hairstylist at the Surfside Beauty Salon, "wanted to get into a book club for years. I like to share my thoughts and feelings with another person. You read a book and it's a great book and tell someone about it. If they haven't read it, they just don't get it."

Houston's group plans to read from a diverse selection of books — mysteries, autobiographies and classics, to name a few. Some book clubs focus instead on one genre, such as science fiction. Houston has found no lack of people on Kwaj who love to offer their opinions.

Clubs have been springing up all over Kwaj, some successfully operating with full attendance while others are floundering.

What better source to find out how to set up a successful book club than Phyllis Manley, the Grace Sherwood library manager. Manley has been a member of a thriving book club for the last year. According to her there are four basic guidelines, and some additional suggestions, for starting a book club:

1. Every member should feel they can attend the meeting, even if they don't want to participate verbally or if they have not read the book for that session.

Houston added, "Each person should read the book. Commitment is very important, but I'd much rather someone come and attend than not at all."

2. The club should establish the ground rules during the first few meetings. Anticipate what may happen (for example, a garrulous member may try to take over or get the group off track). Discussing any problems up front will keep the members from feeling singled out later on. The frequency of the meetings and location should also be set.

Phyllis Manley, left, and Wendy Houston share their opinions about two new books to be placed on a reading list available free to all patrons and book club members at the library. Both are active members in successful book clubs. (Photo by Jim Bennett)

3. Each member should participate in the selection of books for the group. First they should submit their own list, along with a short blurb on each book. Then the entire group will vote to create a reading list.

"Vera and I initially selected a couple of books just before everyone left for summer vacation. We vote on a few books at a time, keep a list of any books suggested and will vote again every few months," Houston said.

4. Trust.

Manley said, "Literature brings up different emotions. We are very confidential about what is said at the meetings." Houston agreed and said it was also related to commitment, "It takes time to develop a relationship. We talk about our feelings. If a person pops in periodically, the group doesn't develop the trust."

These guidelines may sound a bit stringent, but they could spell the difference between a good club and a defunct club.

Manley offered additional suggestions.

"Try varying meeting places and include outdoor settings. We bring a snack and a towel to the beach.

Nobody has to clean up their house and it's a lot more relaxed."

Houston's group meets at a different member's home each time. The host provides the refreshments.

Manley also suggested shorter books are better because "books that are too long are rarely finished." Houston's group "decided to read only paperbacks. They're portable."

"Have a moderator. In some groups they just get the meeting started. In others they can handle any disagreements," she added.

Both Manley and Houston agreed the group should be no more than eight people so everyone can participate. In fact, both groups have a waiting list.

"Right now, if someone on the waiting list wanted to take on the task, there are enough people to make a new club," Houston said.

The most important item of all is to have a good list. If the members cannot come up with a book list, the library has one at the front desk.

Houston summed it all up: "Being part of a book club motivates me to read more. It's fun to be able to share your opinions and have them count."

Visiting professor offers courses in American history, government

Traveling has been a way of life for Dr. Mervin Whealy.

He has spent 15 of the last 20 years teaching history for the University of Maryland Overseas Education program. For the past six years, he has been in the Asian Division, primarily in Korea. This is his first visit to Kwajalein as visiting history lecturer for Terms I and II.

"For a historian to stay alive in education, you have to move around," said Whealy, explaining all the moving he has done over most of the past 20 years. He has lived both in Asia and Europe.

Whealy is currently teaching a class at Kwaj called, "The Vietnam War."

He explained that many students are surprised by the French participation in the First Vietnam War during 1946-54. It wasn't until France withdrew from South Vietnam in 1954 that the U.S. became actively involved.

Students learn about the war in the context of the Cold War with the Soviet Union that existed during that time, and about decision-making processes in the White House and in a democracy.

One of the class assignments is to read a monograph on the Vietnam War. Whealy brought many publications with him. He said about 7,000 books have been published about the war.

Whealy received a B.A. and M.A. degrees in education from Fresno State University, a master's degree in history from Wake Forest University, and a Ph.D. in history from University of California at Santa Barbara. He became interested in the Vietnam War while in school.

While at Kwaj, Whealy also teaches two distance education courses via the Internet: The Vietnam War and The American Revolutionary War Era.

He enjoys jogging and reading when he takes time out from academic endeavors.

During Term II, which begins Oct.

Dr. Mervin Whealy has spent 15 of the last 20 years teaching history for the University of Maryland Overseas Education program.

26, Whealy will teach American Government and Recent America: 1945-Present. In this course, equal time will be spent between foreign and domestic issues. Beginning with the U.S. decision to drop the atomic bomb, the course will progress through the Cold War, the Cuban Missile Crisis, the Korean War and the Vietnam War.

On the domestic front, the class will examine the Civil Rights Movement, the Women's Movement, and Watergate.

Saturday is the deadline to register for Term II.

The University of Maryland's Asian Division offers academic programs to U.S. military communities in Asia and the Pacific. Students can take a single class or many classes leading to a certificate or degree.

The overseas program began in 1949 in Europe. Courses are now taught in 12 European countries, the Middle East, Africa, Japan, Okinawa, Korea, Guam, Taiwan and Kwajalein.

For more information about the University of Maryland, contact the Kwajalein office at 52800.

Just an apple won't keep doctor away

Doctors can fight illnesses, but they'd rather prevent them.

They need the patient's help for that.

"If we would cease, all of us smoking, we would end up eliminating lung cancer. Chronic lung disease and numerous other diseases, including heart disease, would probably be halved in terms of frequency," said Dr. Eric Lindborg, chief medical officer of Kwajalein Hospital.

According to the American Cancer Society, cigarette smoking kills more Americans than AIDS, alcohol, car accidents, murders, suicides, drugs and fires combined. If you couple not smoking with eating a healthy diet, exercise and drinking in moderation, Lindborg said people could put physicians out of business.

It's never too late to quit smoking. The American Lung Association reports: If a person quits before lung cancer develops, his lung tissue will gradually return to normal. After not smoking for 10 years, a person's risk of lung cancer drops in half.

If you want help quitting, Lindborg suggested talking to your doctor or psychologist Theo Riley.

When prevention fails, early detection can save your life.

For women, annual check-ups that include a pap smear and pelvic examination are important in detecting certain cancers. At about age 40 women should begin getting a mammogram.

Lindborg also recommends that at age 50 both men and women start having annual exams. He said physicians look for breast cancer, colon cancer, diabetes, thyroid problems and prostate cancer.

"Those are the things we can catch early and folks may not have a hint that there's a problem themselves," Lindborg said.

A lot of preventive measures are nothing more than a shot in the arm.

"Many adults feel shots are just for kids," Lindborg observed. "There are a number of vaccines that are appropriate and very beneficial for adults." If those shots were more widely used, he added, many illnesses could be prevented.

Two of the newer vaccines are for hepatitis A and chicken pox. The hepatitis A vaccine is recommended for travelers to developing countries. That includes anybody who travels or socializes in Micronesia outside of USAKA. Hepatitis A is usually transmitted from an infected person through food. Proper handwashing is critical in stopping the infection.

There is also a vaccine to prevent typhoid, which is present in Micronesia. Lindborg also recommends the vaccine for people visiting or living in Micronesia (outside USAKA) for extended periods of time.

Hepatitis B is currently recommended as a childhood vaccination. It prevents the transmission of a blood-borne type of hepatitis. People who engage in high-risk activities, such as those associated with the transmission of HIV, should have the vaccine, according to Lindborg.

Most adults have had chicken pox as a child, when it's a fairly mild illness. But when it strikes an adult, chicken pox can be devastating. Lindborg recommends any adult who did not have chicken pox as a child get the vaccination.

Everyone should get a tetanus booster every ten years, he added.

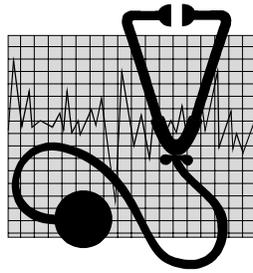

People with chronic lung disease, like asthma, or smokers can also get a "Pneumovax" shot to prevent pneumonia.

Additionally, flu shots are available free at the hospital's immunization clinic weekdays from 1-4 p.m., and at the Health Fair next week.

People with chronic diseases, including heart and lung disease, can benefit from flu vaccine, according to health officials. Those who are age 50 or older could benefit, too. The Center for Disease Control reports anyone who wants to reduce his chances of getting the flu should and could take the vaccination.

The close quarters on Kwajalein increases the likelihood of disease transmission, Lindborg noted. He also said there is probably an increase of overall exposure to many different diseases because people from all over the world visit Kwajalein.

Doctors will be available Oct. 25 at the Health Fair to answer questions about preventing disease and early detection.

THE GMAT test date is Jan. 15. The GRE General Test Administration is scheduled for Nov. 20 and April 8. There is no pre-registration for these two tests. Candidates must complete the forms from the bulletins available in the Community Education office and bring the fee on the day of the test. The GRE subject test for April 8 requires pre-registration. The deadline for registration is Jan. 5 because the application needs to be to ETS in New Jersey by Feb. 11. The TOEFL examination will be given May 3. Candidates must complete the registration form available in the Community Education office and forward this along with the correct fee to ETS before March 27.

YOKWE YUK Women's Club will hold its monthly meeting tonight at 5:30 p.m., in the high school MP room. Ladies from Ebeye will show us how they make a muumuu without a pattern in less than an hour. We will have a potluck dinner for our guests first. Bring something to feed at least eight people. For more information, call Lesley, 53235.

All of the girls in Sue Burt's Junior Girl Scout troop turned out the airport to say good-bye Oct. 8, as she left for Kansas City.

Burt was one of 11 delegates chosen to represent USA Girl Scouts Overseas at the triennial National Girl Scout Convention, Oct. 14-17, in Kansas City, Mo. The other overseas delegates are from Europe, Panama and Guam.

"The best part of scouting is cadets and seniors," Burt said. "They can go all over the world and have a connection."

Burt was chairman of Girl Scouts at Kwaj for the past two years, and this year is treasurer and leader of a Junior troop.

Kwaj has about 83 Girl Scouts, including 20 adults.

Burt said she also enjoys adult scouting.

"I've had a lot of fun doing adult Girl Scout things over the years," she said.
