Aviation Department earns Army safety excellence award

By Jim Bennett

Kwaj commuters to other islands know about the safety record of the Aviation Department. They get to and from work safely every day.

Now the Army knows. It recognized the department with a 10-year Award of Excellence for safety, presented Thursday by visiting SMDC Commander Lt. Gen. John Costello.

"When I was in the airborne, pilots always asked us why we would jump out of perfectly good aircraft and we always said, 'I've never seen a perfectly good aircraft.' But if I have, it would probably be here at Kwajalein," Costello said.

The award recognizes more than 10 years of safe operations by the department.

According to Steele Clayton, Aviation safety manager, safe operations are achieved when a unit's aircraft have no serious incidents over a given period of time. Incidents include any aircraft damage that the department could have directly prevented through, for example, maintenance inspections or repairs, refueling, loading, or piloting. That does not necessarily include all downtimes, because some are beyond the unit's best efforts.

"When you think about our corrosive environment and climate here, and that we're over water virtually 100 percent of the time, all the factors that exist here at Kwajalein, you see why this is a group award," Clayton said. "So many people and departments have to work together, each to the highest standard, to sustain accident-free performance."

The department employs around 130 people, including ground support staff, mechanics, pilots and flight attendants. Cooperative work with other departments like Safety and Industrial Hygiene, the aviation medical examiners at Kwajalein Hospital, and many others, play a part in Aviation's success.

John Costello, SMDC commander, presents the Army's 10-year safety Award of Excellence to, from left, CW5 Hal Lucas, USAKA/KMR aviation officer; Steve Wallace, RSE Aviation Department manager; Steele Clayton, Aviation safety manager; and Tony Gargano, RSE vice president. Clayton said the Aviation department, with its Dash-7 commuter airplanes and UH-1H Huey helicopters, makes up to 13 flights a day—six to seven on the Dashes and five to six in the Hueys. Airplanes log, on average, five hours a day and helicopters average four hours a day. The time period covered by the award includes more than 34,000 flight hours without a major incident.

All incidents are graded on a scale of A through E, with A being the most serious and E being the least. A class E incident means less than $2,000 damage to the aircraft and no injuries. A class D would be $2,000 to $10,000 in damage and no injuries. Classes C through A indicate more serious damage and injuries or fatalities, and disqualify a unit for safety awards. Kwajalein, however, has had no incidents greater than a class D since 1988.

All Army units are eligible for annual safety recognition awards. Accomplishment awards are given to units with a one-year safety record. After two years the unit receives an Honor award, and after three-year periods the unit receives an Award of Excellence. But 10-year awards remain unusual.

"I've been around Army aviation for 30 years and I've never seen one of these," said Steve Wallace, Aviation Department manager. "It shows the consistency of the excellent work here."

D.A.R.E.ing to make a difference

Reed to teach anti-drug, anti-violence program to Kwaj children

Kwajalein police Sgt. Roger Reed will dare to return to the classroom this fall to teach children about the pitfalls of drugs and violence.

A former military police instructor, Reed was recently named the department's new training officer. Part of his duties is to teach the D.A.R.E. (Drug Abuse Resistance Education) program to elementary students on Kwaj.

The 42-year-old father of two said he is looking forward to returning to the classroom and instructing kids not only about the dangers of drugs and violence, but how to avoid those types of situations and deal with peer pressure.

"It's another avenue to educate them to the different dangers and the different ways to avoid [those dangers]," he said. "When we talk about drugs, it's not just illegal drugs. It's dealing with alcohol, cigarettes, anything that's addictive in that nature that's a health hazard."

Reed will replace Lt. Harry Luckett, promoted to lieutenant over at Roi-Namur. Police Chief Terry Hardy said Reed was chosen for the assignment because of his extensive background in military criminal investigations and instruction.

"We are very fortunate to have people like him with that kind of experience, maturity and knowledge in law enforcement," Hardy said.

The DARE program was developed in 1983 by the Los Angeles Police Department and the Los Angeles School system. It is now taught across the United States and worldwide. In addition, the U.S. Department of Defense has authorized the program to be taught on military bases.

The course will be taught over a 17-week period beginning in October. It will cover everything from the effects of mind-altering drugs to building self-esteem to reducing violence.

"When the program first started, it was specifically drug involvement, but they have expanded it now to include violence," Reed explained.

The core curriculum will be taught to the sixth grade. However, Reed will also instruct third grade students and make visits to the younger elementary children.

Kwajalein police Sgt. Roger Reed will be the island's new DARE officer. He was named DARE Officer of the Year and Outstanding Team Member during his training course in Honolulu.

Karen Ammann, Kwajalein schools superintendent, said there are approximately 50 students enrolled in the sixth grade. Another 45 children are expected in the third grade. Most of the kids, she noted, enjoy the visits with the police officers.

1998 Drug Surveys

- Each year drug abuse kills about 14,000 Americans and costs taxpayers about $246 billion.
- Overall drug use in the U.S. has fallen by half in the last 20 years.
- Illicit drug use among teenagers has remained stable for two years in a row, and even decreased in some cases.
- In 1998, surveys found the first increase in the perceived risk of marijuana among young teens since 1991.

"They really like the interaction with the police officer more than anything else," she said.

Reed conceded there is a certain mystique enjoyed by police officers when interacting with children.

"The uniform and the badge, to some degree, does put an awe in kids," he said. "They like to hear certain stories."

Reed attended a two-week DARE class at the Honolulu Police Department Academy in order to teach the program. In fact, he excelled at the academy, as he was named DARE Officer of the Year and Outstanding Team Member.

Reed also got a splash of classroom experience while in Hono — and an unexpected dose of reality from a young child who, during a discussion on medicines, inquired about the dangers of ice, a cocaine-derivative drug now popular on the streets of Hawaii and the West Coast.

"Here's a 7-, 8-year-old who knows about ice," Reed said. "They know what it is. That was a real eye-opener for me."

Such designer drugs, or any illegal drugs at all, are fairly rare on Kwaj, however.

"I don't see a significant problem here," Chief Hardy said.

While the DARE program has had its critics over the years, a series of surveys quoted on the DARE website note research studies show that for every $1 spent on drug abuse prevention, communities can save $4 to $5 in costs for drug abuse treatment and counseling. According to a recent story in USA Today, DARE has an annual budget of $220 million. Only $1.75 million comes from the federal government.

Reed said he believes the Kwaj program is particularly beneficial to children here because they are more isolated than stateside juveniles.

"Hopefully, through this introduction, it's teaching them the right things as far as the hazards, and the right ways to avoid the hazards," he said. "They're in a very isolated world here."

Duo of Opiniano, Cardillo dominate volleyball tourney

Ragnar Opiniano and Thomas Cardillo were unbeatable in last Sunday's two-person volleyball tournament. They rolled to an easy 11-0, 11-2 win against the team of Paul McGrew and Kenney Leines in the championship game.

Teams played a single round robin game to 15 points. The championship game, played by the top two teams, was the best of two-out-of-three games to 11 points.

Two other teams also competed Sunday: Lynn Olson and Tony Smith played together, as did Bryce Porter and Herman Paul.

Volleyball enthusiasts take note: Sept. 3 is the deadline to register for the Labor Day Beach Volleyball Tournament, which will be held Sept. 7.

Podunkers pull out win in the sixth inning

By Lynn Olson

The Podunkers edged SOB, 7-5, to capture the Summer Fun Softball Men's Championship last Thursday, Aug. 5.

Mickey Santorum led the Podunkers (4-0) with a three-for-four performance at the plate and two RBIs. Teammates Pat Dowell and Shane Walker each contributed two runs, as well.

Rich Mijokovich helped lead the way for SOB (3-1), pushing across two of the team's five runs.

It was a very intense game, with two evenly matched opponents.

The Podunkers fell behind early, as the SOB scored three runs in the top of the first inning. But the Podunkers showed pluck, crossing the plate four times in the bottom of the third inning.

The SOB were not done yet. The team knocked in a pair of runs in the top of the fourth to regain the lead.

But the Podunkers knotted the score in the bottom of the fifth inning, and then moved ahead in the sixth and final inning with a pair of runs.

In the co-ed division, Chop Suey made chop suey of the competition as they rolled to a 4-0 record in the tournament. Jab Eliklik finished 2-2 while FUBAR went winless at 0-4.

PUBLIC NOTIFICATION of Increased Turbidity in Reclaimed (non-potable) Water. This statement is notification to the public of increased values in the turbidity (a cloudy condition in water due to suspended materials) of the reclaimed water. No increase in bacteria levels has been detected. Operational adjustments are being made to reduce the turbidity. While these increases are not perceived as affecting the health and well-being of Kwajalein residents, turbidity is regulated by the USAKA/KMR Environmental Standards. As a result of these standards, public notification of the prevailing conditions is required. As adjustments are made, increased chlorine content in the water may be necessary; this may result in a more noticeable "household bleach" smell. For more information, contact RSE Environmental Office, 51134.

New resident identified as a mangrove monitor lizard

Story by Bob Fore

The lizard spotted by a number of island residents last week has been identified as the species Varanus indicus, known as the Pacific monitor, according to Domingo Cravalho Jr. of the Plant Quarantine Branch, Hawaii Department of Agriculture.

Cravalho confirmed the animal's identity through the Honolulu Zoo after receiving a picture and description of the reptile by e-mail from Kwajalein.

Also known as the mangrove monitor, the reptile is shy and skittish by nature, and can be expected to retreat from human contact. But they can also become defensive. They grow to as much as six feet in length, and the bigger of the species can be considered as potentially dangerous with a mouth full of sharp teeth, as well as a long tail capable of causing bone fractures, said Cravalho.

This species of monitor can be found naturally from southern Asia to northern Australia along damp river banks and in coastal forests. They were brought to various Pacific islands, including Guam and Kosrae, by Pacific islanders, as well as Japanese immigrants as a food source.

They are easily capable of swimming from island to island, which may explain further migrations of the species in certain areas. Their primary diet consists of carrion, crabs, eggs, rats, and chickens.

The Pacific monitor is also an excellent tree climber, and is very fast and agile. If the lizard feels threatened, it can eject a stream of excrement towards the offending party.

If any residents come into contact with one of these monitors, you should not attempt to capture or bother the animal in any way. Report the contact, and the location of the lizard immediately to RSE Environmental Office at 51134. They will attempt to capture the reptile, and determine a humane method of removing it from Kwajalein.
