Review board investigates bends case

By Jim Bennett
Editor

A USAKA dive review board is looking into the case of a man who suffered from the bends Saturday.

The man, whose name has not been released, returned from diving Saturday complaining of bends-related symptoms. He was immediately taken to the recompression chamber at the USAKA Marine Department.

The case sparked an investigation and the formation of the dive review board, a group by regulation made up of a USAKA safety officer, Kwajalein Scuba Club president, a divemaster or instructor and a dive medicine expert of the chief medical officer.

"We want to find out what happened," said Lt. Col. Steve Morris, USAKA chief of Operations and acting commander. "Then we'll see if there's anything we can learn from this."

More details from the report will be re-

Ambassadors tip off big Labor Day entertainment

By Jim Bennett
Editor

Show basketball team, the Harlem Ambassadors, will jump start a week's worth of local entertainment Saturday.

"This is something special we've never had before," said Simone Smead, Community Activities manager. "This is a great way to kick off the new Kwaj year."

Tip-off is at 7 p.m. at the outdoor basketball court, across from Café Pacific, but food and festivities begin at 6 p.m. Sodexo USA will offer pizza-by-the-slice and grilled burgers and hot dogs, along with beverages.

The Ambassadors are a show basketball team made up of professional players, led by Ladè Majic, "the queen of show basketball." Majic is the only woman coach/player on an all-men's professional team, and has played more

Putting heat illness on front burner

By Jim Bennett
Editor

The heat-related death of Pro Bowl offensive lineman Corey Stringer on Aug. 1, and subsequent heat-related incidents on football fields at the high school and college level, raised an issue in the states with which Kwajalein residents deal successfully every day.

Living 8 1/2 degrees north of the equator, temperatures range from 78 to 88 degrees Fahrenheit on any given day. But during peak hours, 1 to 3 p.m., the temperature combined with relative humidity makes it feel like 105, according to Aeromet.

And yet, in the last 10 years, the island has recorded only a few heat-related illnesses.

"Most of our community is well aware of our close equatorial location and heat-related problems," said Dr. John Janikowski. "In general most people know to use sunscreen, limit exertional activities and replace fluids. Occasionally, someone forgets or gets caught off-guard, or isn't aggressive enough with prevention."

And that's when they run into trouble.

Janikowski said the hospital sees some heat rashes, cramps and exhaustion.

"Most often the more severe problems are associated with a combination of prolonged heat exposure and exertional activi-

Hallowed ground makes for meaningful reflection

A recent trip took me to Virginia, and as it was my first time in the area, I decided to visit some Civil War battlefields.

It is one thing to read about these places and quite another to walk the ground where thousands of men died.

My first visit was to Cold Harbor. If there were no signs I would have driven right by it. The gently rolling green hills and wooded forest at first hide any trace of war.

It was when I took a walking tour of the battlefield that I could plainly see what was left of Confederate earthworks and fortifications that ran through the woods and along what are now modern-day roads.

As I looked down the hill I was on, my mind's eye saw the masses of Union infantry coming across the clearing in the woods and trying to come up the hills that the Confederate Army was defending. It was no contest. The Confederates were entrenched behind stout fortifications. Their position was almost impregnable.

The Union soldiers knew it amounted to suicide. But they obeyed their orders and attacked anyway.

The attack lasted some eight to 10 minutes. In that time, the Union Army suffered approximately 7,000 casualties.

A diary belonging to a Union soldier was found, and on the day of the attack the author had written a single entry: "I was killed today."

Afterwards wounded men lay in the woods and fields for three days while Lee and Grant haggled over terms for a truce which would allow collecting the dead and wounded.

I then visited Gaines Mill, where a desperate battle was fought as a Union rear guard struggled to hold a ridge overlooking the Chickahominy River while the rest of the Union Army retreated.

During the battle, a Confederate color bearer was shot in both arms and both legs. He had his fellow soldiers tie the flag to his body so he could continue with the attack.

I stood at the bottom of the ridge the Confederates had to climb and wondered how on earth they did it. I saw the spot where charging men tried to cross what they thought was a shallow swamp, only to become waist-deep in mud and muck as Union defenders poured shot and shell into them.

I saw where Union cavalry made a last-ditch, gallant charge when the Confederates had broken through the Union infantry.

It's all so hard to imagine. Gaines Mill is a beautiful place.

I traveled to Chancellorsville where Robert E. Lee and Stonewall Jackson devised a daring and risky plan which enabled them to defeat a Union Army that outnumbered them more than two-to-one.

I viewed the spot where Jackson was accidentally shot by his own men. It was a very costly victory indeed. Some say the South lost the war with the death of Jackson.

I went to Petersburg. I saw the place where, after nine months of terrible siege, the Union Army broke through the Confederate lines and started Lee's final retreat.

I visited Appomattox, where four years of bitter, bloody battle finally ended when Lee surrendered to Grant. I saw the place where Lee offered his sword to Grant and Grant waved it aside in embarrassment.

I stood on the road that was lined with Union soldiers when the remnants of the Confederate Army of Northern Virginia marched to surrender their weapons. Both armies came to attention and saluted each other.

I stood where battle-hardened men cried when they had to give up their flags.

As one Confederate soldier said, "We didn't mind giving up our weapons and such because we knew that the war was over and we'd be going home. But giving up our flags, well, that was something else again. Because there were days when we went into battle for no other reason than we followed that flag."

In all these places I learned more than I had known. It was an emotional experience. What on earth or in heaven could make men do what these men did?

As I walked the hallowed ground of these battlefields, I realized that either I was alone or perhaps four or five other people were there at the same time. It saddened me that so few people would visit places where so many important events occurred.

I guess these out-of-the-way places don't hold the same attraction as Disney World, Six Flags or other theme parks that dot the landscape.

But I would hope that the theme of courage and gallantry that the men on both sides who fought in these places displayed will be passed on to new generations of Americans.

On your way to amusement parks, the beach or other places you're going on vacation, maybe you could turn off the main roads and take time to visit some of these places where history happened and tell your children what occurred there.

For it is in these woods and fields that the country finally became one nation and we all became Americans.

Pentagon faces suit on missile defense

(Washington Post [Associated Press], Aug. 29, 2001) — A coalition of environmental and public interest groups filed suit yesterday to try to force the Defense Department to conduct more environmental studies of missile defense construction and testing. The lawsuit, filed in U.S. District Court [in Washington D.C.], contends that the 1969 National Environmental Policy Act requires the Pentagon to conduct fresh studies of the testing's impact on Alaska, Hawaii, California and the Marshall Islands. Studies in 1994 and 2000 were for old programs. The administration's new proposal includes plans for an emergency anti-missile system with five missile silos at Fort Greely, near Fairbanks, Alaska, by 2004. ...

Lt. Col. Rick Lehner, spokesman for the Pentagon's BMDO, said the previous environmental studies are adequate. "We spent the past three years doing an environmental impact statement for Alaska and North Dakota, and it's an extremely comprehensive document and it covers operations at Fort Greely," he said.

Israel claims regional shield after Arrow-2 downs Scud in test

(World Tribune.com, Aug. 28, 2001) — Israel has successfully launched an Arrow-2 interceptor in the latest test of its missile defense system. ...

As a result, Israeli officials say, Israel now has a missile defense system capable of intercepting the most advanced ballistic missiles developed in the Middle East. They said this includes Iran's Shihab-3 and Syria's Scud-D missile. The Shihab-3 has a range of 1,300 kilometers and the Scud D has a range of 700 kilometers. ...

New funds for defense in danger

(Washington Post, August 29, 2001) — The shrinking federal budget surplus has imperiled congressional spending plans, with President Bush's midsummer request for $18 billion in additional defense money the most likely target. ...

The Democratic Budget Committee chairman in the Senate and his Republican counterpart in the House said they are not prepared to release the funds for the initial phase of the president's defense buildup, effectively blocking it for now. ...

Aides said one compromise would involve trimming money for missile defense from the president's military plan while retaining popular items for readiness and hardware. ...

Meanwhile, officials involved in writing the annual spending bills for 2002 said there still appears to be enough money to fulfill Bush's initial budget request.

Kwaj workers combat heat daily ...

ties," he said.

On the job, workers have recorded only a few cases of heat exhaustion in the last 10 years, said Mike Dowsett, RSE senior safety engineer. How?

"You drink a lot of water," said welder Aaron Yessick. "You get used to it."

Yessick said he and his co-workers take regular breaks, too.

Dowsett described a series of programs designed to combat the effects of heat on workers facing the elements.

First and foremost, employees work in an environment that allows for regular breaks and, when necessary, heat-related breaks for water and cooling down.

Second, the workforce has tools to beat the heat.

When Marine Department staff climb into small holds to work, they often carry a portable air conditioner with them, that pumps in cool air from the outside, said Jim Vencill, port engineer.

Workers who wear hoods, sandblasters and painters, for example, have an additional tool that pumps cool air into the hood.

Recently, Safety added a few new items, too. A bandana with water-absorbing beads gives workers something cool to wrap around their necks or heads, and can be worn underneath hard hats.

Safety is trying on a trial basis for some workers, sugar-free electrolyte tablets, similar to, but better than the old-style salt tablets, Dowsett said.

Off-duty, many of the precautions remain the same, Janikowski said. Drink plenty of fluids, mostly water, but also electrolyte-filled drinks, like the sports drinks on the market.

The old, young and those with health problems should pay special attention to the heat and what their bodies are telling them about it.

Those participating in active sports or other activities in the heat should warm up before and cool down afterwards. Also, when exercising, keep air conditioners on moderate levels. Going from extreme heat to cold can "shock the system," Janikowski said.

Because alcohol has diuretic properties, cooling off with a cold one is not the best way to rehydrate, he added.

(RSE Safety's Amber Morse contributed to this report.)

Divers should plan to prevent DCS ...

leased when they become available, Morris said.

The Kwajalein Scuba Club averages 1,300 to 1,350 dives a month or 16,000 dives a year, making it the most active dive club in the world, said Doug Hepler, KSC Safety and Training officer.

There have been no bends cases within the club over the past several years, according to Hepler.

Last year, the club recorded one incident involving depth limits being exceeded, but that diver did not develop the bends.

The club also has a review board and safety council, which examines any cases that do come up.

The bends, or more clinically known as decompression sickness, results when nitrogen bubbles form in a diver's body. When a diver stays too deep for too long nitrogen gathers in the blood and tissues. When the diver ascends to the surface, the gas bubbles.

For the diver this can mean pain, paralysis or even death. Symptoms include numbness, tingling, pain in the joints and limbs, weakness and paralysis, Hepler said.

Prevention is as simple as following the training provided divers, Hepler said. Open Water divers should go no deeper than 60 feet and Advanced Certified divers should go no more than 130 feet. Divers should use dive tables to plan dives, even if they're using a dive computer during the dive, and the deepest dive in a series should be first.

professional games than any other woman player. Before coming to the Ambassadors, she played for five years with the Harlem Wizards, another show team.

The pros will face stiff competition from a Kwajall-star and celebrity team, led by coaches Curtis Wrenn and John Wallace. The all-stars and celebrities will switch off quarters providing the match with both competitive basketball and humorous moments. Many of the celebrities, including Lee Allas, the Rev. John Dorr Norman Sablas, Jerry Cornell, Cowboy Gallo-way and high school coach Tom Farris have never played basketball, while others haven't played in several years.

The Ambassadors' show features slam dunks and impressive ball-handling, along with their own comedy routines, Snider said.

Formed in 1998, the team has traveled to more than 60 military bases worldwide, including a trip to front-line posts in Bosnia and Kosovo this year.

In May, the team toured the Pacific, including stops in Majuro, Pohnpei, Palau and Guam, but because of scheduling was unable to perform at Kwajalein, though they stopped on the island for a layover.

"We were treated so well, we were very excited to come back to Kwajalein," said Jacquelyn "Cookie" Oliver, tour manager and referee for the match.

Monday morning at 10 a.m., the Ambassadors will hold a special assembly for students, ages 3-18, at the CRC Gym. Titled "Stay in school, Stay off drugs," the gathering includes, "a lot of razzle-dazzle," Snider said. "It should be fun."

All fun on Labor Day

Following the basketball, live entertainment on the island will shift gears and head to Emon Beach where Community Activities and Sodexo USA will host a Labor Day social Monday.

The fun starts at 2 p.m. with pick-up volleyball on the beach.

Meanwhile, Sodexo USA will hold water balloon and egg tosses, sack races, soccer ball relays and tricycle and wheelbarrow races.

Music D.J.s will spin tunes starting at 2:30 p.m.

At 3 p.m., contestants will face off in watermelon, donut eating contests and cherry-in-the-whipped cream contests.

From 4 to 6 p.m., quizmasters Tom and Ralph will host a round of Quizzo On the Beach.

Finally at 6:30 p.m., Zooksville, the latest incarnation of local band, the Zooks, will perform.

Funny you should mention that

Thursday, residents will have the opportunity to see three top level comedians in action. Don Barnhart, Paula Bel and Michael Burton will perform at 7 p.m. at the Richardson Theater.

Barnhart comes to the USO "Comedy Break" tour after appearances on Evening at the Improv, Star Search, MTV and Friday Nights. He recently completed another USO tour to Saudi Arabia, Kuwait, Israel and Bosnia. When not on tour, he regularly headlines for comedy clubs and college campuses. He's also a member of the Second City Conservatory Program in Los Angeles.

Bel performs her "cutting edge humor we can all relate to," regularly at the Boston Comedy Club. She's also played The Tonight Show, NBC's Friday Night Video, Showtime's Full Frontal Comedy, Vibe, Comedy Central and comedy clubs across the country.

Burton is known for his improvisational style, and is currently a regular on Comedy Central's "Make Me Laugh." A USO tour veteran, he has performed USO shows in more than 20 countries.

The show is the second "Comedy Break" this year, up from one in previous years.

"There's more focus on entertainment," Snider said. "And it all comes down to budgets and the sponsors."

Coca-Cola, Veterans of Foreign Wars, USAA Foundation, AT&T, BAE Systems, Yahoo! and GlaxoSmithKline are sponsoring this tour.

And the hits keep coming

Following the comedy show rhythm and blues band, 808, will play on Kwajalein Sept. 22, 6 p.m. on Emon Beach; and on Roi, Sept. 23, 8 p.m. at the Outrigger.

With eight musicians, all with different musical backgrounds, the band plays from a song list that includes everything from ErykaBadu to Earth, Wind and Fire to Lauryn Hill to Destiny's Child, with a little Whitney Houston and Toni Braxton thrown in the mix.

The Chapel Praise Band, from the Cavalry Chapel in Honolulu, will bring gospel music to the island at the end of the month.

The group travels a couple times a year to overseas performances in Japan Korea, Middle East, to name a few, spreading their message.

Ten members make up the group, which plays "gospel pop music," said Paul Fritz, who is organizing the event.

Concerts will be held at the chapel, on Roi, either the Richardson Theater or Emon Beach and on Ebeye.

Swimming aides may be used, but not competitively. Anyone is welcome to participate. Refreshments will be provided by the KRC.

Ball rolling on youth basketball and kickball seasons

From Staff Reports

Youth basketball and kickball starts rolling Sept. 18 and runs through Nov. 17.

Kickball, involving 3- to 5-year-olds, will be played on Mondays, while basketball, for kids ranging from grades kindergarten to six, will play through the week, after work hours.

"Youth is a great league where the kids can go in, play and have fun, but also learn at the same time," said Audra Mayhan, Recreation Services superintendent. "It's an exciting age-range."

With one day left on sign-ups, the league has Tiny Tots in kickball, and basketball for Small Frys, grades K-1; Pee Wee Division for second and third graders and Junior Boys and Junior Girls divisions for grades four through six.

Pee Wee coaches will meet at the CRC Gym Wednesday at 5 p.m. Junior Girls coaches will follow at 6 p.m. and Junior Boys coaches will meet at 7 p.m.

A skills assessment clinic will be held Thursday at 4:45 p.m. for the Pee Wees, 6:15 p.m. for the Junior Girls and 7:45 p.m. for the Junior Boys. All participating athletes must attend.

The Tiny Tots clinic and Small Fry clinic will be held Monday, at the CRC Gym, at 1 to 2:30 p.m. and 3 to 5 p.m., respectively.

Summer Fun basketball champs crowned

By Bruce Sinkula

Sports Writer

The month-long Summer Fun Basketball season concluded earlier this week with Ebeje and Mavericks claiming championships Tuesday and Wednesday nights.

In Tuesday night action, Ebeje, sporting slick purple and gold uniforms, defeated Navigators I, 52-44, to capture the B division championship.

Ebeje built a nine point halftime lead and were never seriously challenged the rest of the game.

Jensen poured in 20 points for the victors while Elvid Bobo and Jeff Loeak paced Navigators I with 19 and 15 points, respectively.

Wednesday night featured a closely contested A division championship game between the Mavericks, who upset the previously undefeated Gummos in the semi-finals, and Bukakar, a team with several members of the Spartans I Men's basketball team.

The fourth seeded Mavericks — milking every ounce of roster fluidity available to them — completed a rather improbable title run by upsetting second-seeded Bukakar, 48-46.

The first half featured scoring runs by both teams. Bukakar jumped out to an early 13-6 lead; however, the Mavericks answered with a 12-2 run midway through the first half.

For the remainder of the game, neither team could garner a lead greater than six points. The inability of either team to assert itself was most evident near the end of the game.

The Mavericks held a 43-42 lead with about three minutes remaining. After several possessions by both clubs over the next two plus minutes the score remained the same. Tom Sieja converted a pair of free throws with 45 seconds remaining to end the two-team scoring drought.

A basket by Patrick Casey evened the score at 46 with 15 seconds remaining. With 7.7 seconds remaining, Burke Vinluan fouled Ryan Bosch who calmly sunk two free throws for the game's final points.

Bosch and Sieja led the Mavericks with 16 points each with Patrick Casey leading Bukakar with 13 points.

Automation is coming to Automotive's gas pump on Oct. 1 and all drivers will need a key to fill up their vehicles.

Anyone with a personal fuel charge or DO number needs to contact Automotive Services before Sept. 15, said Philip "Smitty" Smith, Automotive Operations superintendent.

Automotive Services Maintenance specialist Adam Ramsey said he will issue a plastic key with an electronically encoded chip to the driver once information including the charge number, phone number, type of vehicle and type of fuel are programmed into Automotive's new software.

"Those without a key will not be able to use the pump," Smith said.

The fuel station is now located near the new COOMS building on 9th street across from Automotive, where the car wash used to be.

Once the system is in place, a driver will insert the key and fill up the vehicle, Smith said. The information from the key will go directly to Finance, taking care of the accounting aspect of the operation.

Those in need of a fuel key can contact Ramsey at 58502.
