Protests filed on contracts

KRS phase-in process halted

By Jim Bennett

Northrop Grumman and Raytheon announced Thursday (Kwaj time) their intention to file protests regarding the recent award of the IRE and KLS contracts to Kwajalein Range Services.

KRS officials, who began town hall meetings last week, received a "stop order" from the government this morning, meaning all meetings with KRS, including two set for tonight, are postponed until further notice, said Tom Gioconda, KRS Transition manager.

As required by law, the SMDC contracting officer issued the stop work order; however, SMDC is asking the Department of Army for approval to override the suspension, which will allow KRS to continue performance of phase-in/transition activities pending resolution of the protests, said Penny Russell, the KLS and IRE government contracting officer's representative.

Meanwhile, the 40 KRS transition team members currently on-island will remain, working on internal KRS business, Gioconda said.

Russell said the command received copies of the protests in Huntsville Thursday (Kwaj time). The protests also were filed with General Accounting Office the same day. The protests will be reviewed and decided by the GAO's Office of General Counsel. Under GAO protest rules, the normal time frame for the GAO to decide a protest is 100 calendar days.

The current Raytheon contract extensions expire on Dec. 31. Both contracts may be extended if the protests are not resolved by then, Russell said.

Protests also could be filed in federal courts, rather than the GAO, but "that's unheard of in the defense business," said Carmen Spencer, KRS president and site manager.

Spencer met with Col. Jerry Brown, USAKA commander, Thursday morning to discuss protest issues.

"Our overriding goal is to communicate with the public because they are the ones who will be feeling the stress," Spencer said.

Raytheon officials concurred.

In an e-mail from Raytheon Range Technical Services Company headquarters in Reston, Va., RSE Site Manager John Wallace said, "We will proceed with our support of the KRS phase-in until we receive revised directions. I remind everyone of the importance of protecting Raytheon proprietary information and data. Let's not lose our focus on mission support and continuation of services; we don't want to disappoint our customer. I will keep you informed as I receive additional information."

Wallace said the decision was not an

Computer classes for Marshallese employees now offered on Ebeye

By Barbara Johnson
Feature Writer

Marshallese-speaking workers on Kwaj can now upgrade their computer skills in classes taught especially for them on Ebeye.

A new series of computer software classes, aimed at Marshallese-speaking employees who need to use a computer at work, started Monday at Ebeye's Queen of Peace Elementary School. The first class, Windows Fundamentals, will be held every Monday from 1 p.m. to 5 p.m. until Nov. 11.

"First priority consideration [is] offered to RMI employees with an immediate, work-related need for computer skills," said Romeo Alfred of RSE Training, in a memo to supervisors.

The Training department set up the computer classes in response to a need they became aware of, Alfred said. When the training staff talked to supervisors, they identified computers as one of the programs that would most benefit their Marshallese employees.

Some supervisors had sent some Marshallese-speaking employees

Colonel outlines postal and airfare measures

I promised you answers to a few remaining questions from my Roi and Kwajalein town halls:

1. RMI tax

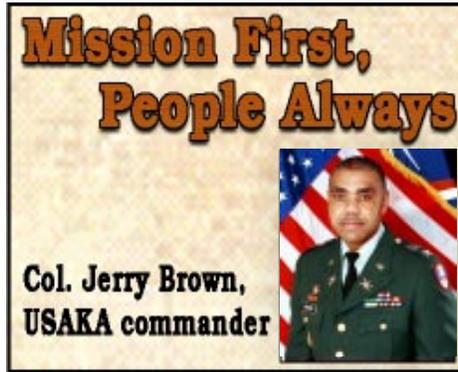

This is definitely on the radar scope and is being addressed with the Department of State. It's a valid issue and we are involved with it. For now, we have addressed the issue as far as possible. Our response to the State Department must be held in confidence. But, please be assured we are concerned about its impact and have forwarded those concerns to the proper representatives at the Department of State.

2. Airline fares ... what's being done on this?

I met with both Continental and Aloha executives, and we discussed several promising options. Both airlines were very receptive, and further discussions and meetings are scheduled to hammer out the details. I will keep you informed of the progress.

3. People order things that don't come in. Why is ordered prescription medicine sent back? Why does it take two months to get a package to Honolulu?

Our postmaster discovered that we have mail being sent to APO 96206 because of a glitch in the address validation software used by many companies. Sgt. 1st Class Chatman called the APO in question, asking them to redirect that mail to Kwajalein, and she is working with the Military Postal Service Agency to get all Kwajalein residents' addresses loaded into the address system so there will be accurate addresses to validate against.

She is tracking the prescription medicine issue. The information she has indicates a possible problem with the same address-validation software discussed above. I assure you she wants to solve this ASAP since we will be going into the holiday season.

I should clarify that any mail misrouted to Johnston Island goes back to Honolulu to be re-routed to Kwajalein. Sgt. 1st Class Chatman stresses the importance of using the following return address format to help expedite the mail process:

Name (first and last)
U.S. Army Kwajalein Atoll
Box _____
APO AP 96555 or 96557

If the APO number in the address is incorrect and only a name and box number are given, another post office would not know to redirect the mail to Kwajalein; at which point they would return the item to the sender. Also, do not abbreviate U.S. Army Kwajalein Atoll as USAKA because other post offices may not be familiar with the acronym.

There is no reason for mail to take two months from here to Honolulu. All mail received at our post office goes out on the next main delivery day. If you're experiencing this problem, please talk with Sgt. 1st Class Chatman personally, and provide any available receipts or tracking information. Items sent as ordinary mail, with no tracking information, can't be tracked.

4. Since RSE will not allow college dependents back for Christmas (have not earned it), can it be transferred to new contractor?

This question concerns employee benefits under his employment contract. If the person is hired by a new contractor details of the employee benefits must be resolved between the employer and employee. The government contract does not specify how the contractor should handle the situation. The employee should discuss this issue with KRS as part of his employment package.

5. Is there additional funding for family housing?

If you meant will there be increased accompanied slots, I don't know. That is the new contractor's call.

6. Child labor and delivery services at the Kwajalein Hospital?

The Kwajalein Hospital and chief medical officer are currently working with me to determine requirements for maintaining delivery services in our hospital. I hope to have an interim solution for mothers expecting newborns between now and January in a few days and a more permanent solution late January. As more information becomes available on this service, there will be follow-up articles and information in The Hourglass.

easy one for Raytheon officials.

"Raytheon does not protest lightly ... we believe that the procurement process was fundamentally flawed. As the long-time, highly awarded incumbent, we have a lot invested in this program, and a strong desire to see that the Army does the right thing at Kwajalein," Wallace said.

Meanwhile, KRS, in continuing their phase-in, had scheduled a series of focus group meetings to address issues specific to smaller organizational units rather than those issues covered in the larger town hall meetings, last week, Spencer said. Those meetings are all on hold. During town hall meetings last week, the company covered the general benefits packages, applications process and phase-in questions.

KRS won the combined IRE and KLS contracts last month after a year-long proposal effort by all three competitors. The deal is valued at $626 million for four years, with the potential for up to $2.5 billion over 15 years.

When the KLS contract was awarded to Raytheon in 1994, the incumbent, Johnson Controls, filed a protest that lasted six months.

Marine guards adapt to War on Terror

By Kathleen T. Rhem

American Forces Press Service

WASHINGTON — International terrorism is forcing the U.S. State Department to put more emphasis on how it secures its overseas facilities and, in turn, causing DoD to re-evaluate how it trains Marine embassy guards.

In testimony this morning before the House Armed Services Committee's Special Oversight Panel on Terrorism, a senior State Department official explained how changes in the world are affecting U.S. missions outside the United States.

In the past, threats were more regional, with terrorism risks being more country-specific or based on local politics, said Ray Williams, deputy assistant secretary of state for countermeasures and information security. The State Department put considerable resources into improving physical security at such "high-threat" posts as Beirut, Lebanon, and Bogota, Colombia, he said.

"Transnational terrorism, which we're now seeing, reverses the entire matrix," Williams told the panel members. "Now, Calgary to Cairo, it's a level playing field." He said about 4,000 "significant threats" are made each year against American missions abroad.

U.S. Marines provide internal security at most overseas State Department posts. The shift in the threat to American assets overseas has forced them to shift their focus as well.

"The Marine Corps does recognize that U.S. embassies have and will be again the target of terrorist attacks,"

Marine Brig. Gen. Douglas O'Dell told the panel. O'Dell commands the 4th Marine Expeditionary Brigade, Camp Lejeune, N.C.

A month and a half after the Sept. 11 terrorist attacks on the United States, the Marine reactivated O'Dell's unit as an anti-terrorism unit and made the Marine Security Guard Battalion a major subordinate element to the 4th MEB.

"In doing so, the Marine Corps fully affirmed that Marine security guards are on the front line of the war on terrorism every day," O'Dell said. He said the new unit's focus is to instill in the Marine guards that their sites may be targeted by terrorists "no matter how remote or how benign its locale."

Marines are one of four security layers protecting U.S. State Department overseas missions. Host-country security elements help identify threats and secure embassy compound perimeters, while local-national guards control access by screening vehicles and visitors, Williams explained.

In recent years, the State Department has added surveillance-detection teams as an additional layer of security. Williams said the plainclothes SD teams work unobtrusively beyond the walls of the embassy. He said they're charged to detect "pre-operational surveillance" directed at American personnel and facilities.

Marine security guards form the innermost ring of security, Williams said. They control access to sensitive areas of the embassy, safeguard classified information, and provide a last line of internal defense.

CMI receives $500K grant

By KW Hillis

The Republic of the Marshall Islands approved a $500,000 Capital Improvement Program Grant last week for the College of the Marshall Islands on Gugeegue, according to Dr. Wayne Schmidt, CMI president.

The CMI campus on Gugeegue closed its doors after the 2002 spring semester to allow for reorganization and new construction. Meanwhile, an alleged embezzlement of $641,000 from the school's coffers hit the school hard, as reported in the Oct. 1, 2002, Hourglass issue.

This grant along with a two previous half-million dollar grants, one from the RMI and one from the Republic of China, are being used to fund construction and other improvements on the school's Gugeegue and Majuro campuses, he said.

Schmidt said previously the Gugeegue campus is still on schedule to reopen by fall 2003.

Inhalents, poisonings present dangers to youth

By KW Hillis
Feature Writer

The statistics are grim. One in five students in the U.S. has used inhalants by eighth grade, according to the National Inhalant Prevention Coalition. The results are even grimmer. Besides damaging the heart, liver, kidneys, brain and other organs, the user can die anytime he or she uses an inhalant — even the first time.

Self-induced poisoning in the form of inhalation abuse by young residents or even an unintentional ingestion of household chemicals or medicines by a small child is the focus of Kwajalein Health Awareness Committee's and NIPC's National Inhalants and Poisons Awareness campaign this month, said Kathy Campbell, committee chairperson.

Kwajalein has not seen any substance abuse cases or any serious poisonings admitted to the hospital in the last three years. But that doesn't mean it can't happen, according to Dr. John Janikowski, Kwajalein Hospital acting chief medical officer.

Recently, signs have been put up at Ten-Ten and Surfway restricting the sale of cough medicines and flavoring extracts, both products with an alcohol content, to adults 18 and older. Last year, signs restricting the purchase of canned whipped cream were posted at food outlets on island.

"When there is a community concern, we respond to it," said Lloyd Jordan, Residential Services manager. He said the signs were put up in response to calls from parents and school officials concerned about possible abuse.

Education, not silence is the key to preventing substance abuse by children, said psychologist Marion Ruffing. She saw substance abuse by children in the states and by young adults on Johnston Island.

"Awareness is the best preventative thing we can do for the children. Not talking about an issue is not facing the issue," she said.

Abusing inhalants is like playing Russian Roulette, since the person can die anytime he or she uses, the NIPC said. Even if a person doesn't suffer Sudden Sniffing Death Syndrome, each time he or she sniffs, permanent damage, including memory impairment, loss of vision, learning disabilities, deafness and other nerve and organ damage, can result. The specific damage to each organ is listed along with telltale signs of inhalant abuse and information parents and children should know on NIPC's Website, www.inhalant.org.

Nausea, lack of appetite, weight loss, nervousness and outbursts of anger, along with a characteristic odor, can all be signs of inhalant abuse, also known as "huffing," according to NIPC. Mouth sores or spots and breath that smells like chemicals are clues, especially the latter, since it takes two weeks for an inhalant to leave a person's body.

Abusing products containing alcohol and other drugs is dangerous since "any time someone uses mood-altering chemicals, they are losing brain cells," Ruffing said.

The National Clearinghouse for Alcohol and Drug Information agrees that the behavior is risky and can result in impaired judgment, blurred vision, slurred speech, irregular heartbeat and even death.

The school system does have substance abuse education programs in place for kindergarten to 12th grade, said Karen Ammann, Kwajalein school superintendent.

"What we're trying to do is to teach them the dangers of using anything harmful to the body, even excess fats and sugar," she said.

Every year all sixth-graders participate in an intensive 17-week program called Drug Abuse Resistance Education, or D.A.R.E., she added.

The inhalant problem is so widespread in the states that some manufacturers are adding mustard to products commonly used in inhalant abuse, said Frank LaBarge, Kwajalein Hospital pharmacist. Mustard will make a person throw up.

The other health focus, accidental poisonings, can happen in an instant.

"Where you have children, you will have accidental ingestions and poisonings," Janikowski said. "Pills may look like candy. Liquid medicines or cleaning solutions may look like juice and soda."

If a child does eat or drink something that is potentially dangerous, he said that the parent or adult should call the hospital if the ingested material container recommends it or if they are uncertain what the child took.

"We have some toxicology information available ... and poison center contacts," he said. If the child is not breathing or unresponsive, call 911.

Ipecac, used to induce vomiting, has to be used with care, LaBarge said.

"It should be used only in the instance where we know exactly what was taken," he said. "If there was an ingestion of gasoline or any caustic substance, then that caustic substance gets a second chance. It can burn on the way up as well as on the way down."

The best precaution a parent or adult can take is to keep all cleaning materials, medications and potentially hazardous materials including some plants such as poinsettias and mistletoe out of sight and reach of small children, LaBarge said.

"Remember, nothing is child-proof, just child-resistant," he added.

Parents and adults can help avoid accidental poisonings and substance abuse by educating themselves and their children about the dangers, NIPC said.

Said Ruffing, "It is always good to be vigilant about your child, even if you know they are safe."

Software classes result of grants, donations ...

to Information Technology for training at Kwajalein, Alfred said, but many employees became discouraged.

RSE Training staff thought if they established a computer center on Ebeye, class members wouldn't have to worry about taking a late boat back from Kwaj or English comprehension problems, he said.

Although the classes will cover the same material in the RSE IT classes and are taught in English, there are some important differences.

"The biggest difference is the pace," said Alan Taylor, manager of RMI Employee Relations, explaining that the material will be covered more slowly, at the classes' pace. He added that another difference is that the class is taught in an all-Marshallese environment, so students will feel more comfortable asking questions.

Most of the classes taught by IT on Kwaj will be offered, such as Word, PowerPoint and Excel, Alfred said, and classes will be taught by different RSE employees whom they feel are skilled in software programs and also able to understand Marshallese.

RSE IT employee Annie Consul is teaching the Windows Fundamentals class. She said the first class, which has 14 students, went really well.

"They're so excited to be able to do this," she said. She also emphasized that the class on Ebeye on Mondays allows the Marshallese students time to learn without worrying about getting home from work late or rushing for a boat.

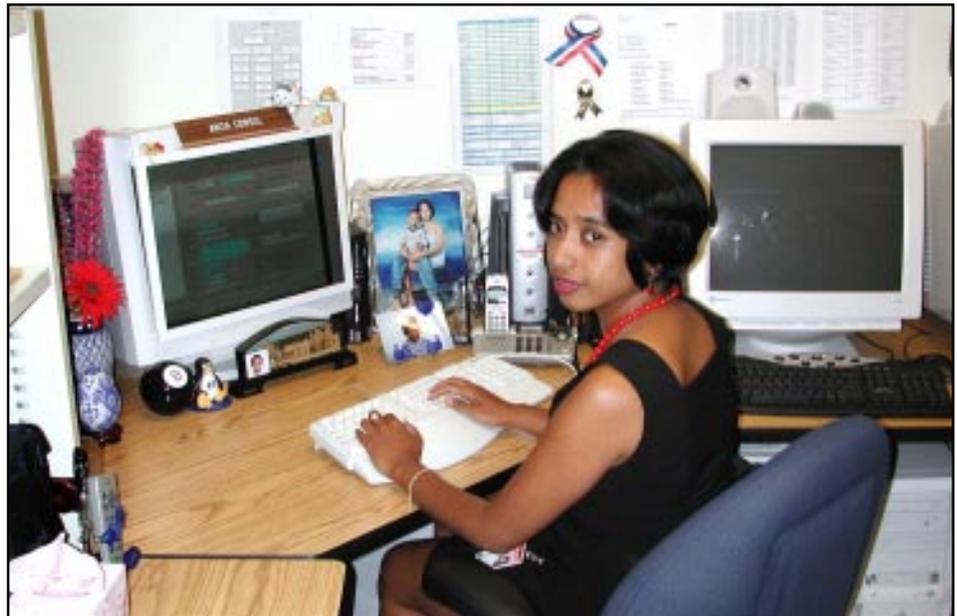

"They'll be able to move forward in their jobs," she said.

The first class started with the basics, she said, such as using a mouse, and even for those who are more advanced, it is important for them to learn the correct terminology in English, she said.

When the training department came up with the idea for the classes, the next step was to find a place to hold them, Alfred said.

"We got together with Kwajalein Atoll Local Government, and they said, 'If we can come up with the funding, they'll provide the facility,'" he said.

After identifying a potential facility at Queen of Peace School, they wrote up a grant request to the Work Investment Act board in Majuro, Alfred said, explaining that the U.S. allocates about $800,000 a year under the WIA to be geared toward human resources development. The RMI government administers the funds.

Initially, the WIA board approved $25,000, Alfred said, and representatives of Queen of Peace School, Kwajalein Atoll Local Government and RMI Training got together to work out the details. The grant covered the cost of the Compaq computers, a printer and other equipment they needed to set up the classroom. Queen of Peace offered classroom space recently vacated by their old library when a new one was built, but it needed ceiling and wall repair and electrical work, he said.

"So we went back and asked for more." And they got an additional $10,000, which was used to fix up the area and buy necessary electrical equipment.

"Whatever we can do to ensure the computers will be used for a long period of time," Alfred said.

Raytheon donated the furniture for the classroom from their proposal center in Honolulu, and Matson provided the shipping from Honolulu to Ebeye.

A board formed to administer the program on Ebeye is made up of Alfred and Taylor; Jelton Anjain and Mary Patrick from Queen of Peace; and Ebeye City Manager Abon Jeadrik.

The people who will take the classes, at least to begin with, are those who need a computer at work and are recommended by their supervisor, said Sandy Wells, RSE Training systems administrator.

"It's to enhance work skills," she said.

"This training offered in Ebeye is a stepping-stone for the Marshallese workforce to enhance their professional knowledge and to move forward to a better path, and I encourage other workers to attend more computer classes," Consul said.

In addition to the RSE-sponsored classes, others from the Ebeye community can use the facility as well.

"We encourage the community on Ebeye to set up training for their staffs," Alfred said, adding that a master schedule is being set up so the use of the computers is maximized.

Now that all the arrangements have been made and the class has begun, "We're really excited about it, to finally get it off the ground," Taylor said. "We put a lot of work into it."

The waiting list for the first class was long enough to run two more classes, and more classes are being organized, Alfred said. Employees should contact their supervisors if they are interested in attending these classes.

OFL, MoFo draw first blood in Series

By KW Hillis
Feature Writer

Tuesday night saw the 2002 Softball Alpha League's second place team Old, Fat and Lazy beat first place Criminals by 15 to 5 in the first game of a three-game World Series.

"OFL got on top of the ball and hit really well," said Scott Pratt, Community Activities Adult Athletics supervisor. "The Criminal defense had some errors that cost them some runs. Both teams were very well matched, so game two will be good."

As for the Beta League's first playoff game, MoFo, coming into the game at second place and behind the first four innings, overcame first-ranked HB Monin I.

"HB [Monin I] dropped their guard and MoFo came back in the fifth inning and scored enough runs to take the lead," Pratt said. "Then they added onto the score to become victorious at 24 to 15."

Alpha League's game two is scheduled tonight at 6:45 p.m., while Beta League will duke it out Thursday at 6:45 p.m.

The Gamma and Omega leagues will begin their individual three-game series tomorrow at 5:15 p.m. and 6:45 p.m. All games will be played on Brandon Field.

"Gummos and Barnacles [Gamma League] are going into the World Series both tied 8-2," Pratt said. "Those two teams are very well matched."

Omega played the last games of their regular season last night to determine who would take second place in the league. With a score of 21 to 14 over KPD, HB Monin III became the contender against the first place, undefeated team, Da Bomb, in the World Series.

The Women's League's World Series takes place on Oct. 19.

The winner in each league will be determined by a "best of three" games competition, Pratt said.

The first place team chooses whether they want to be "Home" or "Visitor" in the first game. The other team has the choice for the second game, he said. If there is a third game, a coin toss decides which team has the choice.

The World Series games each last one hour and 15 minutes.

All games adhere to the 2002 Fall Softball handout rules, Pratt said.

IFT mission set for Tuesday

From the Missile Defense Agency

Tuesday's test will involve the launch of a target missile from Vandenberg Air Force Base, Calif. The target, a modified Minuteman II intercontinental ballistic missile, will carry a mock warhead and decoys. About 20 minutes after the target missile is launched, and about 4,800 miles away, a ground-based interceptor carrying a prototype exoatmospheric kill vehicle will launch. About 10 minutes later the intercept is planned to take place at approximately 140 miles above the central Pacific Ocean during the midcourse phase of the warhead's flight.

This will be an integrated system test, with all representative system elements participating: space-based missile warning sensor; ground-based early warning radar, the prototype X-Band radar and the Ground-based Midcourse Defense battle management, command, control and communications system located at Kwajalein Atoll and the Joint National Integration Facility in Colorado Springs, Colo. Since the system is in its research and development phase, these elements serve as either prototypes or surrogates for system elements which are in the developmental stage and have not yet been produced for actual operational use.

This will be the seventh intercept test of the Ground-Based Midcourse Defense element research and development program. Four of the previous six tests, including the last three, achieved a successful intercept, the most recent on March 15.

Corridor closed, caution times set

From the Command Safety Office

A range operation is scheduled for Tuesday, Oct. 15. Caution times are 12:01 p.m. through 8:30 p.m.

The mid-atoll corridor will be closed effective 7 a.m., Sunday, until further notice. This includes oceanside East reef, north of Bigej, to Gagan's oceanside East, out to the 12-mile territorial limit. The West reef and everywhere else oceanside is not affected.

In conjunction with this operation, a caution area exists in and around Kwajalein Atoll. See the Oct. 8 Hourglass for maps.

Police clearance measures will begin at approximately 7:30 a.m. tomorrow, and continue until evacuation has been accomplished. Egress of all air and sea craft will be required when requested by authorized clearance personnel. Subsequent to lagoon clearance, the hazard area will be in effect until mission completion.

In conjunction with this operation, a Kwajalein met rocket is scheduled as soon as possible after the launch from Meck Island on Tuesday, Oct. 15. For caution areas, see maps in the Oct. 8 Hourglass.

In the event of a mission slip, the caution times and areas will be in effect for the following days:

- 12:01 p.m. to 8:30 p.m. Wednesday.
- 12:01 p.m. to 8:30 p.m. Thursday.

Questions regarding the above safety requirements for this mission should be directed to the Command Safety Office, range safety officer, 51910.
