CMI Gugeegue campus to close for a year

President: Hiatus to help fix infrastructure, recruit full-time staff

The College of the Marshall Islands on Gugeegue will close its doors — but only temporarily.

All academic programs will be suspended from the end of spring semester 2002 to the beginning of fall semester 2003, according to a CMI Board of Regents announcement this week in Majuro.

“The board has made this decision, following my recommendation, because the Gugeegue campus is not currently up to U.S. accreditation standards,” said Dr. John Tuthill, CMI interim president, in an e-mail to the Hourglass. “For us to continue to offer academic programs under these circumstances would, I believe, be unfair to our students and potentially jeopardize our accreditation and our right to administer U.S. federal student financial aid programs, such as the Pell Grant.”

Recognizing that the temporary closure will cause “a real hardship for the many students who have come to rely on us there,” Tuthill said that the college is coming up with plans to help the students including “accommodating as many Gugeegue students as possible on the Majuro campus.” Other plans to help undergraduates continue their education should be ready by graduation, he added.

Although graduating students say they are glad that the problems will be fixed, some undergraduates are worried, said Jonathon Cassel, CMI teacher since 1997. “One student said, ‘All I’ve done here. Is it out the window?’

“That is not the case,” Cassel said. “Every credit that they have ever earned can never be taken away from them.

Earth Day time to reflect on planet

By Barbara Johnson
Feature Writer

Monday may be the perfect day to send a friend an electronic card. Although the Earth deserves attention every day, April 22, Earth Day, is its special day — a day for people to reflect on what they can do to make it healthier, including reduce the use of paper.

Flu hits teens hard

By Peter Rejcek
Associate Editor

About a quarter of high school students missed classes this week thanks to a flu-like bug that is rapidly making its way through the student population.

“There appears to be an increase in flu-like symptoms in the teenage population,” confirmed Dr. Jill Horner, physician at Kwajalein Hospital.

Symptoms include sore throat, high fever, vomiting and headaches, she said. Blood tests on the children who have come to the hospital for treatment show a viral infection. There is no evidence of strep throat, she added.

The virus has hit the high school particularly hard, where an average of 35 to 40 students were out sick Wednesday and Thursday, according to Steve Howell, high school principal. As many as 50 missed school Tuesday for flu symptoms, he said.

“That’s unusually high,” he said, adding that absenteeism for illnesses normally runs about five percent.

The large number of missing students does stress the system, but teachers and administrators are coping, Howell said.

“It taxes the teachers as far as getting assign-

What's good for the bachelors is good for the families as well

In regards to a letter printed under the editorial column of the Hourglass April 12, I would like to respond to a few comments made by a concerned parent complaining of the downfall of the Richardson Theater.

I feel highly offended by Mrs. DeMaio's comment about minors "going to a dark, secluded movie theater surrounded by BQs." I do not know if she was intentionally making a subtle attempt to say that the unaccompanied personnel here on island are less than desirable, but that is sure how it sounded to me and many others [to whom] I have spoken.

I am pleased to hear that her children are not going to be in my living area. This knowledge makes my life a lot more pleasant. Personally, I feel that this island revolves around the children way too much already. Parents should be grateful that they can have their children educated and catered here for free. This is the only military base I know of that civilian workers are able to educate their children as a gratuity. In my eyes, parents should be thankful for what they have already.

The Richardson Theater is a dinosaur — archaic and obsolete. Something had to be done about it, and with what limited budget we do have out here I feel that we are currently heading in the right direction.

However, I must return to the letter in concern. Mrs. DeMaio goes on to say that the Yuk Theater is uncomfortable, and the viewing is sometimes impeded by the six-foot-plus crowd. The unaccompanied personnel have been dealing with sitting on a pillow and craning their necks occasionally by attending the Yuk Theater. No big deal. It could be worse.

Once again, I would like to propose a new name for this installation ... Ronald Reagan National Babysitting Range.

Thank you for your time,
Chris Robbins

Kwajalein should act like a community

I am in total agreement that if the Richardson Theater is shut down, it will be a tremendous loss to the entire Kwajalein community. It is great to watch a movie under the stars and be able to spread out and enjoy the space. My concern in last week's article is giving an impression that the BQ area is unsafe for teens and pre-teens.

I live in a BQ. Teachers, network engineers, trades people and administrators live in my building. Many of us are parents. I would hate to think a child would be afraid to walk by my "house."

I agree the Yuk Theatre is uncomfortable. However, I believe it is not just families who find it uncomfortable. People who live in the BQs think it is extremely uncomfortable, also.

We are one community. Kwajalein becomes a better place when we work to become "we" instead of "us" and "them."

Fire can occur here any time, any place

First of all, congratulations to [Editor Jim Bennett] for your first place in the Keith L. Ware competition. Keep up the good work.

I would like to comment on The Kwaja- lein Hourglass April 12 publication, "AL-TAIR" electrical malfunction, by Barbara Johnson.

No doubt the article illustrates the importance of having a fire alarm detection/suppression system. I would like to expand on that thought.

The fire alarm systems installed in such facilities are designed to shut down all power to the building. As an example, the air conditioning duct systems have detectors. Once activated, the detectors notify the fire alarm panel, thus cutting power to air movement. The procedure decreases the toxic fume spread dramatically, centralizes the problem area and gives immediate notice to the occupants and the Fire Department.

As we all know, nothing is perfect. Do not take anything for granted. As an added measure, call 911.

The more information, the better response and service we can provide to the public.

Remember: Fire can happen any time, any place, any where.

Respectfully,
M.L. Kearney,
Assistant Chief,
Fire Prevention

Community Activities provides great support

We are very fortunate to have such a young, energetic and dedicated team of people working at [Community Activities].

They go beyond the "call of duty" when it comes to providing services for our community, they bring us entertainment, news, books, organize our sports programs, keep our boats available, manage pools and beaches that are clean and safe, organize activities and maintain a facility for our kids and keep our courses, courts and fields in great condition.

Their work is often unrecognized until we find something we don't like, but not this time.

This letter is to say thank you to all of you at [Community Activities] for hosting Chad Carvin, the Olympic swimmer who recently visited island. His presence was an inspiration to all of us, and we are grateful that you were so willing to take on one more task in your already hectic schedules.

Keep up the good work!

Kwaj kids 'living on the edge' in chapel musical

By C.J. Johnson
Hourglass Intern

A large group of Kwaj kids are "living on the edge." That's the name of the chapel's first teenage musical, which premieres this weekend.

"[The chapel] did one [show] just about every year with the adults, so we wanted one for teens," said Kathy Dorr, who directs the show.

Twenty-eight Kwaj kids are involved in the musical including Camilla Morrison, 16, who plays A.J. McAffrey, one of the main characters in the musical.

"She is a Christian girl who is helping her friends get through one week of living like Jesus, which they call 'living on the edge,'" the tenth-grader said.

"Living on the Edge" also centers around a teenage boy named Oliver, played by David Barbella, 16.

"He's sort of a geek person," Barbella said.

Oliver and his friends try to live a week making decisions like Jesus. But problems arise when a bully picks on Oliver obsessively, making Oliver's life miserable. Oliver must find a way to deal with the problem and still make decisions like Jesus.

Many of the Kwaj kids who joined the musical thought it would be a great opportunity to show their talents.

"I did it because I like to sing and act and it sounded like fun," said Michelle Warga, 16, who also performs in the musical.

But Warga is not the only person who wants to show off her talents.

Added Morrison, "I loved the idea of a musical, and I've never been in one before, so that was exciting. Also, later in life, I'd like to do more things like this with singing, dancing and acting. To be in a Broadway show one day is my dream."

Rebeka Ladd takes center stage at CAC Room 6 on April 7 during a rehearsal for the chapel-sponsored production of "Living on the Edge." The musical will be shown tonight, Saturday and Sunday.

The Kwaj kids say they are enjoying preparing for the musical, and their parents have lent a hand by providing lunch at practices.

"I really liked just hanging out with everybody and all the lunches," Warga said.

Even with all the fun, there are many rehearsals and choreographic scenes that the Kwaj kids had to do to prepare for their upcoming performances.

"It's a lot of fun and somewhat challenging because of the practices, all the time," Warga said.

Karen Brady is the choreographer, teaching the teens new and inventive dance routines.

"Choreography's hard; it's very interesting, but very challenging. I haven't done anything like this before so I'm a little worried, but not too much," Barbella said.

Barbella's not the only person who thought the choreography was difficult.

Said Morrison, "Well, the hardest thing is probably learning the dances, and remembering to sing at the same time. As soon as you learn the song, it's easy to just go and sing it while you're doing whatever, but it's still challenging.

"Scheduling practices were also troublesome," she added. "We could hardly find times where everyone could come at the same time; that's why we ended up going mostly Sundays."

But everyone involved in the musical said they are ready and excited to perform.

"I think it's going together well," Dorr said. "I realized the teenagers were going strong, so we gave them a chance."

Performances are scheduled for 7 p.m. tonight, Saturday and Sunday at CAC Room 6.

Wrenn leads Pipes and Drums Corps through streets of Ebeye ...

Corps through Ebeye. The band played in a variety show sponsored by the Queen of Peace High School senior class to raise money for graduation.

Wrenn, dressed in the full plaid kilts and clean white shirts of the band, played the part of the group's drum major, barking orders and twirling the baton.

Wrenn said there were two leisure things he wanted to do while at Kwaj before he left. Besides joining the Pipes and Drums for a performance, he wanted to DJ a jazz show on the radio. He fulfilled that wish earlier this year.

The variety show, held in the Head Start school courtyard, reportedly raised about $1,800 to help defray graduation costs for the senior class. The show featured hula and modern dance, as well as one of Ebeye's most popular musical groups, the Sunrise Band.

"[The students] did it all themselves," said Dave Bramlett, a teacher at Queen of Peace.

USAKA considering microwave wireless cable proposal

From staff reports

USAKA continues to explore the options for cable television, the latest move involving a feasibility study for a microwave wireless system this past weekend.

"We came to see if it was something we could feasibly operate, and it is," said Joe Turner, president and CEO of Universal Electronics Inc. of Nashville, Tenn., during a command briefing on the proposal Tuesday.

The proposal includes options for multiple channels seen on stateside cable programming, channels such as CNN, Turner Classic Movies, Cartoon Network, TNT, Turner Broadcast Network, American Forces Network, a local channel and a scheduled programming channel.

In addition, the system provides for up to five movie channels, optional to residents for a fee of around $20 in the proposal. Movie channels might include a new-release channel, action channel, drama channel and comedy channel.

"You guys will have to tell us what movies you like and we'll get them," Turner said.

Uniquely enough, the movie channels could be purchased on a month-to-month basis by simply calling the Nashville office toll-free and putting the monthly fee on the resident's credit card. Going on vacation or TDY next month? Don't call and buy the service. Like the movie selection coming up? Call in and order the service with no start-up fees.

TDY residents could call in for a day or week of service and be billed accordingly.

Also, for every movie service subscription, the command would make a percentage to offset the initial set-up costs for the cable service.

There would be an up-front set-up cost, the total of which is uncertain at this point, said Don Hornbrook, chief, USAKA Information Management.

Furthermore, USAKA may acquire excessed microwave television equipment from Johnston Atoll, available in 2003 when the base is closed. That equipment would allow American Forces Network-Kwajalein to transmit the microwave signal to the receiving antennae at the residences. Obtaining the excessed equipment would save the command an estimated $500,000.

"This is not a done deal," Hornbrook added. "We're researching it."

The project is not a first for Universal Electronics Inc., which provides pay-per-view programs at several overseas Air Forces bases, mostly designed for TDY lodging. But it is a first for a community such as Kwajalein, Turner said.

"It is not our intention to change the culture of the island or the way things are done," he said. "But I believe in quality programming and I think this program could be beneficial to you and us."

Earth Day roots go back to days of Beatles and Kent State ...

This year marks the 32nd Earth Day celebration since its beginnings in 1970. Each year the Army chooses its own Earth Day theme, and for 2002 it's "Protecting Our Freedom ... Preserving the Environment."

At Kwajalein, students will decorate bags with pictures of the earth and environmental messages, according to Elizabeth Tevault, RSE environmental engineer, who set up the program. The bags will be given to customers at Surfway and Ten Ten on Monday.

RSE Safety will distribute to residents a flyer about natural substitutions for damaging chemicals in household products, "Recipes for a Healthy Environment," and an updated residential recycling guide, Tevault said.

She also gives two environmental reminders to Kwaj residents:

- To dispose of left-over hazardous household products such as paints, aerosols, pesticides and cleaners, call RSE Environmental at 51135 and they will pick them up.

- Remember storm drains empty directly to the lagoon. "Don't let anything go down those drains that you wouldn't pour directly into the lagoon," Tevault said.

According to the Earth Day Network Web site, the advent of Earth Day in 1970 was the "birth of the modern environmental movement."

Their look back at the world of 1970 is a reminder that things have changed since then: Along with Apollo 13, the Beatles' last album, the Kent State shootings and the advent of fiber optics, among other things, the Web site states, "At the time Americans were slurping leaded gas through massive V8 sedans. Industry belched out smoke and sludge with little fear of legal consequences or bad press. Air pollution was commonly accepted as the smell of prosperity."

It was also in 1970 that Gaylord Nelson, then a U.S.

Senator from Wisconsin, proposed the first nationwide environmental protest to "shake up the political establishment and force this issue onto the national agenda."

On April 22, 20 million Americans from coast to coast demonstrated for a healthy, sustainable environment. The movement enlisted support from "Republicans and Democrats, rich and poor, city slickers and farmers, tycoons and labor leaders."

It also led to the creation of the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency and the passage of the Clean Air, Clean Water and Endangered Species acts.

In 1990 Earth Day raised the status of environmental issues to the world arena, with 200 million people in 141 countries mobilized for recycling efforts. In 2000, Hayes led another campaign, focusing on global warming and clean energy. With the help of the Internet to link people around the world, 5,000 groups in a record 184 countries participated.

Earth-shattering Facts

- At present rates of extinction, as much as 20 percent of the world's species could be gone in the next 30 years.

- Although at least 125 countries and territories are involved in international trade of sharks and shark products, only four currently have specific management plans for shark fisheries.

College closure called 'blessing in disguise' ...

It's always in their records, and it's only a temporary closing anyway. We're looking into other avenues for these students."

Before the board's official announcement Monday, students in a Pacific literature class discussed how the rumored closing would affect them.

Lucille Hitchfield and Veronica Bolkeim, both teaching program students in their mid-20s, said that they worried about completing their associate degrees. Graduating student Scott Calep said the closure was a good idea if it fixes the problems.

The school faces three major hurdles before it can meet Western Association of Schools and Colleges accreditation standards, Tuthill said. The problems: deteriorating facilities, lack of full-time faculty and lack of an institutional policy manual.

"The main classroom and office building [were] already old when the campus opened in 1996, and it has deteriorated further with heavy use over the years," he said. "In the spring of 2001, we had six full-time instructors ... in the spring of 2002, we have only one. That isn't enough to provide sufficient continuity in our instructional programs."

An institutional policy manual is required "to regulate relations between the Gugeegue and Majuro campuses," he said. "Majuro does not always receive the data it needs from Gugeegue on a timely basis; Gugeegue does not always receive the information and support it needs from Majuro on a timely basis. Gugeegue is not adequately represented."

From the end of classes this semester to the reopening of the school in August 2003, the plan is to "devote all of our energy and effort into rebuilding the campus," he said.

Financing from the Asian Development Bank will fund construction of four new classrooms and two new faculty residences. The current maintenance facility will be renovated to include three new classrooms along with administrative and faculty offices. The bathroom facilities will be upgraded, and the partially completed Greg Sammer Memorial Library will be finished, Tuthill said.

The time will also be used to recruit full-time faculty, "most of whom we anticipate will live on the Gugeegue campus itself," he said. And both Majuro and Gugeegue representatives will create the an institutional policy manual "so that administrators at both campuses will know exactly what information or documentation needs to be sent to the other campus and when."

Once the problems are handled, the college will request that WASC Accrediting Commission for Community and Junior Colleges perform an on-site inspection to certify the school, Tuthill said.

"I see it as a blessing in disguise," Cassel said. "It became apparent to ensure the longevity of this campus to stop it for two semesters to get it up to speed."

Part-time teacher Kim Parker agreed, "I think the change needs to happen... I think it's the only way it's going to happen with this drastic measure."

Part of the goal is to find out what programs should be offered, Cassel said. "We're looking at what we can fix [and] where we can go in the future with the institution ... There is potential for vocational training."

When school opened in 1996, the plan was to offer associate degrees in architectural engineering, business studies, nursing, automotive technology, liberal arts and teacher education.

"Some things we can do here much better than Majuro can do, like our advanced computer training," Cassel said, explaining that the Gugeegue campus doesn't have to duplicate the programs offered by Majuro. "We have a pool of personnel to pull from that Majuro doesn't have."

Other programs, such as the nursing program, may be duplicated.

"There is still a very huge community need in Ebeye [for nurses]," he said. "They can't find Marshallese nurses now — all their nurses are from the Philippines."

Besides determining the degree programs, Cassel said the administrative staff will be very busy overseeing rebuilding, recruiting and working on the mission statement.

"The work we are undertaking on Gugeegue is a reaffirmation of CMI's commitment to the entire Kwajalein community," Tuthill said.

"We are not pulling out by any means; we are attempting to do everything we can to provide the level of education that our students and our nation deserve," he added.

Doctor says kids need rest, fluids ...

ments for parents to pick up," Howell explained. The administrative arm of the school is also staying busy keeping track of who's out.

Karen Ammann, elementary school principal and school superintendent, said about seven to 10 of the younger kids have been out each day this week because of flu-like symptoms.

"It hasn't been too bad at the elementary school," she said. There are 234 children enrolled in the elementary school.

Horner said there is no explanation why the virus is targeting mostly teens. Last year, she explained, a flu-like bug attacked mainly adult males. She said the latest strain likely made its way here via students returning from spring break. She estimated it would take another two to three weeks for it to run its course through the student population.

Added Howell, "There's usually problems after Christmas and spring break."

What to do

In the meantime, Horner said there is little the hospital can do, as antibiotics will do more harm than good. She said parents need to keep their children at home, give them plenty of fluids and rest and fight the fever with Tylenol or Motrin. Symptoms are lasting upwards of a week, she added.

Horner said the hospital does need to see a child if he or she experiences vomiting for more than 24 hours or has a fever higher than 105 degrees. In some extreme cases, she said, secondary pneumonia can develop. Symptoms of pneumonia include a patient being short of breath and coughing.

Horner said the virus is extremely infectious, and recommends people who are experiencing symptoms stay at home until they are better. Hand-washing and covering one's mouth when coughing are two ways to help stop the spread of the virus, she said.

Carvin teaches swimmers to keep heads above water when pursuing their dreams

By Peter Rejcek
Associate Editor

Dreams — particularly Olympic-size ones — require a commitment and perseverance that is both herculean and obsessive.

Chad Carvin knows all about pursuing such dreams — even when they turn to nightmares.

The Olympic swimmer stopped at Kwajalein this week on a tour through Micronesia, promoting his sport and hoping to inspire the next generation of athletes.

Carvin, 28, was the No. 2 swimmer in the world back in 1996, poised to make his mark on the Olympic games in Atlanta. But shortly before the games began, Carvin was diagnosed with a virus that attacks the heart muscle. Not only were his Olympic dreams shattered, but it appeared his entire athletic career was sinking away.

"It was desperate times for me," he told a crowd of young swimmers who had gathered at the family pool Wednesday evening. "I always figured my career would end at the '96 games."

Over time, Carvin recovered. Saying he never wanted to look back on his life with any regrets, he began training for the 2000 Olympics in Sydney, trying to return to form. That battle lasted three years, with a daunting training regime.

Carvin said he did 10 swimming workouts each week, beginning at 6 a.m. He logged about 60,000 meters a week. In the year preceding the 2000 games, he turned it up yet another notch, swimming as many as 100,000 meters a week.

The work paid off in 2000, with a silver medal in the 800-meter freestyle team relay and a sixth-place finish in his best individual event, the 400-meter freestyle, just milliseconds from a medal.

Carvin's message is a simple, but poignant one: "The skills and attitudes that you learn in swimming can apply to anything in life."

Carvin said he is not through with the Olympics yet, with his sights set on the 2004 games in Athens. In the two years leading up to the games, he'll put a plan together, training as many as 30 hours per week.

"It's like a full-time job," he noted.

When not competing, Carvin competes at international competitions — he's currently ranked sixth in the world in the 400-meter freestyle — and substitute teaches.

Wherever he goes, it seems, he's trying to teach, "I'm just sharing my Olympic experiences. Hopefully, that will get people excited about swimming and the sport."

See you at the movies!

Saturday

Peter Pan (1953, G)

Disney's animated feature about the spritely Peter Pan who transports Wendy, Michael and John Darling to Neverland to help him battle the evil Captain Hook.

Richardson Theater, 7:30 p.m.

Not Another Teen Movie (2001, R)

Parody of the romantic teen movie genre. The story is populated with all the stereotypes, from the beautiful-girl-under-the-glasses to the handsome jock who bets his buddies he can turn her into a prom queen.

Yokwe Yuk Theater, 8 p.m.

Mickey Blue Eyes (1999, PG-13)

Hugh Grant and James Caan team up in this Mafia spoof. Grant plays Michael Felgate, an auctioneer who falls in love with the daughter of a mobster. Eventually, he takes on his own Mafioso persona.

Tradewinds Theater, 7:30 p.m.
