U.S. forces strike Iraq: =====

Greater local awareness imperative

By KW Hillis
Associate Editor

The United States war with Iraq is raising awareness of terrorism and retaliation worldwide; locally, security officials are calling on the entire community to take responsibility for their part in the United States Army Kwajalein Atoll's security efforts.

"Awareness is not just a USAKA military responsibility, this is a personal responsibility," said Lt. Col. Mark Harmon, Provost Marshal. "There has to be more community awareness of packages and people that they don't know."

Anticipating a rise today in the Force Protection Condition from Bravo to Charlie or even Delta, Harmon outlined the major differences in security measures.

"As part of the community awareness, badges will be worn 100 percent of the time," he said. If someone is not wearing a badge, they will be stopped by the command staff, including himself, or other community members.

Centers for Disease Control issues Asia travel alert

By KW Hillis

Due to 200 to 300 cases worldwide of a severe acute respiratory syndrome, the Centers for Disease Control issued a travel advisory for China, Hong Kong, Hanoi and Vietnam on March 15. Canada, Indonesia, Philippines, Singapore and Thailand have also reported cases of SARS within the last two weeks.

"To date, we have not seen anyone with symptoms," said Dr. John Janikowski, Kwajalein Hospital acting Chief Medical officer. "However, the symptoms may start out looking like what people call the 'Kwaj Crud,' so they should keep in mind their recent travel history."

KMAR software top quality

One of top five U.S. projects recognized

By Jim Bennett
Editor

The recently completed Kwajalein Modernization and Remoting project has earned recognition as one of the U.S. government's top five quality software projects, according to CrossTalk, The Journal of Defense Software Engineering.

The program competed against 70 other entrants for the honor, according to the magazine.

"We're quite pleased with the kind of recognition this program is achieving," said Dr. John Szczepanski, MIT/LL associate site manager.

"It's been a great year," said Lt. Col. Clarence Johnson, RTS commander. "We had Tester of the Year [Paul Hester], and now this.

And last year was one of the busiest years since the 1950s," he added, noting the KMAR work flowed in alongside a busy schedule of three integrated flight tests for the Ground Based Midcourse Defense Segment, five Air Force ICBM tests, a Patriot-3 test and nearly two months of System Integration Test missions. And that doesn't count the daily space surveillance and tracking requirements, he added.

KMAR, completed in February, was a five-year program to modernize the radars, optics and telemetry sensors on the range, though planning for the project dates back to 1997.

Under the program, the Kwajalein Mission Control Center underwent a facelift in the summer of 2000, paving the way for the remoting projects to come. ALCOR became

With Saddam Hussein, history appears to repeat itself

By Dennis Ryan

Distributed by Army News Service

"Those who cannot remember the past are doomed to repeat it," philosopher George Santayana told the world in 1905.

Today we find ourselves at a possible turning point in history. Opponents of military action against Iraq have uttered statements to the effect that a war against Iraq will start another world war.

So let us go to history and see what happened or, better yet, what didn't happen before World War II. Hitler had taken over Germany in 1933 and proceeded to re-arm, violating the Versailles Treaty that ended World War I.

France and Great Britain did nothing. Germany in March of 1936 re-occupied the Rhineland with 20,000 troops.

This was the German territory on the West Bank of the Rhine River serving as a buffer zone between France and Germany. Once again France and Great Britain did nothing and allowed German troops to move in unopposed. This was another violation of the Versailles Treaty and a direct threat to the security of France.

The masses in Europe wanted peace at any cost and thought any provocation of Hitler would lead to war, but in hindsight, looking the other way led to war.

France was much stronger than Germany at the time, and joined by Great Britain's might, could have easily called Hitler's bluff and squashed his military adventure. The union with Austria and the occupation of the Sudetenland and the rest of Czechoslovakia would only be two years away.

Germany was much stronger militarily by then and even more powerful after digesting the Czech industrial and arms industry.

Hitler then signed a non-aggression pact with another ruthless dictator, Stalin, in 1939. This allowed the former corporal to invade Poland without fear of the Soviets. This was the final straw for the appeasers in the west.

France and Great Britain declared war on Germany, but hesitated for six months and refused to attack in the west.

Hitler thanked the French and British for being so considerate by defeating them in a six-week campaign in 1940.

Hitler then rewarded Stalin the following year by invading the Soviet Union and adding tens of millions more to the butcher's bill for the war.

Now we are faced with another dictator or two, Saddam Hussein in Iraq and Kim Jung II, in North Korea.

Saddam has invaded two of his neighbors, broken treaties and continues to evade sanctions against weapons of mass destruction. Yet peace demonstrators fear a war will bring greater conflict, while forgetting the lessons of the appeasement of Hitler.

Yes, there are differences between Saddam and Hitler. Saddam is bigger and has a better mustache.

Does any rational person really believe Saddam Hussein would not use a nuclear bomb if he had one, or that he would not continue to cause havoc with his neighbors and brutalize his own people?

But it is America that's chastised as being a warmonger, only hungry for oil. We must continue to be strong and do what is right in Iraq, no matter how unpopular it may be in the court of European public opinion.

It is time the tyrant is disposed.

That brings us to the other megalomaniac making news today in North Korea. Kim presides over an even more repressive regime than Saddam.

The younger generation that grew up healthy and prosperous in South Korea blames the United States for the rise in tensions, forgetting the sacrifice made by their elders and so many Americans to repel the communists and keep them at bay for over half a century.

Some forget or ignore the bloody past. That is why we as Americans must never forget.

We must never forget the lessons history provides about how to deal with such dictators. And we must never forget to do the right thing.

Kwajalein School Advisory Council

Parents' request sends language arts curriculum back for rework

By Gwyne Copeland

Guest Writer

Parents asked for a more rigorous proposal in the high school language arts curriculum, sending the plan back for modifications, at the Kwajalein School Advisory Council meeting Wednesday night.

Parents want language arts classes grouped by ability rather than grade level with progression leading towards AP English, said Ann Cohen, SAC MIT/LL representative.

The requested changes in the curriculum may mean a delay in implementing the plan this fall despite offers from some of the parents present at the meeting to help with the modifications to speed up the process.

"I would rather delay several months and get it right," said Karen Ammann, school superintendent. "If we have to wait until the fall, we will. We might not want to implement a new plan next fall."

The high school language arts curriculum will go back to committee on March 28

The elementary school language arts curriculum for the 2003-2004 school year will be brought to the SAC for the first reading in April.

Staffing

Six new teachers are hired for the 2003-2004 school year and KRS is still looking for others, Ammann said.

A high school science teacher with extensive marine science experience will be joined by a special education teacher, an English as Second Language teacher, a youth activities director and two elementary school teachers, she said.

The school system still needs English and Social Studies teachers as well as early childhood education specialists for the upcoming school year, Ammann said.

Substitute teachers are needed immediately, she added.

Vision, mission and philosophy

Emphasis on creating students who are life-long learners, effective problem solvers, responsible citizens and caring contributors with the help and support of the entire community is part of the school system's vision, mission and philosophy statement, read for the first time at the SAC meeting. After a second reading next month, the council will vote on adopting the statement. Final adoption, however, rests with the commander.

Copies of the statement are available in the school offices.

E-mail hoaxes target Kwaj addresses

By Jim Bennett

Editor

A man writes a pitiful story. He's a foreigner, needing to move lots of money and he needs an American's bank account number to move it to. Can you help?

Not if you want to keep your money.

The scenario could be part of an online scam where grifters get a hold of victim's bank account information and then drain the account, according to a staff member at Kwajalein Resident Office/Counterintelligence Detachment.

Apparently, someone got a hold of a number of local e-mail addresses, as the number of reported unsolicited e-mails has increased recently.

This e-mail, containing the bogus request for help, is a new variation of an old scam and should be deleted from in-boxes.

Since this particular e-mail has already been reported, it should just be deleted.

Any other unsolicited e-mails should be reported to KRO/Counter-intelligence Detachment, 53576.

countries in question or just returning, people should use common sense, he said.

"Anyone planning travel to the risk areas should keep updated with CDC and WHO [World Health Organization] reports and be prepared to alter travel if recommended," Janikowski said. "If people have recently traveled to risk areas, watch for symptoms and be sure to inform their doctor of the travel if they need to seek medical treatment for any illness."

SARS is not spreading as rapidly as other viral infections such as the flu, although there have been almost 15 deaths, he said.

The factors which indicate an illness is SARS include a fever of over 100.4 degrees and signs of respiratory illness — shortness of breath or respiratory distress — showing up within seven days of travel to the at risk areas. The fever and respiratory distress can be accompanied with other symptoms, including headache, loss of appetite and diarrhea.

Even if no personal travel is involved, the CDC Web site warns that close personal contact with body secretions of someone with recent respiratory distress and fever may put one at risk for SARS.

"Hence, the majority of the cases are health care workers and family members," Janikowski said.

The jury is still out on the close contact connection, because WHO has just tracked what they think are seven initial cases to a specific hotel in Hong Kong, Janikowski said.

Although two of the people involved did have close contact, according to the WHO report, the connection of the other five is still tenuous. "If a person hasn't traveled to the risk areas or had close contact with someone who has, there appears to be no need for worry at present," he added.

KMAR software may be template for Pan-Pacific testbed sites ...

the first radar remoted to KMCC in October 2000, followed by MMW in 2001, ALTAIR in June 2002, and TRADEX in February 2003.

The project upgraded optics and moved telemetry assets from outer islands to Roi-Namur and Kwajalein, bringing four fixed antennas to Roi-Namur, three fixed antennas to Kwajalein's Mount Olympus, or what is now known as Telemetry Hill.

"This is open architecture done the way it's supposed to be done," Johnson said. The key to making it work is keeping up with what we call COTS, or commercial-off-the-shelf, technology. When technology changes, you can go in and change certain components."

It's been compared to a home entertainment system. Rather than invest heavily in a single system, KMAR allows the range to replace single components the same as one might replace a VCR with a new DVD, knowing the new player will still work with the existing audio system and television. Because components are somewhat interchangeable and commercially available, spare parts are as close as the radar next door, or at least available for order.

Of course range components are more involved and far more expensive, but the concept is the same, Johnson said.

"We took a computer system approach to building a radar, as opposed to a hardware custom design that has been used historically," Szczepanski said. "It was a fundamentally new way to design a radar."

Using the open architecture for hardware, engineers used similar "object-oriented software practices," that provide the range sensors with "much more flexibility," Szczepanski said.

"We can modify our open systems more easily which puts us in a very good position to satisfy our customer requirements," he said.

With KMAR upgrades, engineers use the same data format for each radar and the same off-the-shelf tools to analyze the data, regardless of the source. Display screens will offer engineers point-and-click ease as they monitor and track objects. Furthermore, the same people can analyze data from any source, because they're all trained on the format and tools.

The open architecture aspect of the project and other standardized measures could take hold at other ranges,

Community is key to security ...

"Supervisors and directors should be doing the same thing," he said. "If they are not [stopping people] and it is one of their people, I will go to that director or supervisor and ask them why."

Rules for children less than 17 years old remain the same, he said. Those 13 to 17 years of age do not need to wear a badge, but they are required to have it with them. Children under 12 years of age are not issued badges.

Everyone in the community, no matter who they work for, needs to wear a badge, said Steve Morris, KRS Security Manager.

"If we don't have everybody comply, it defeats the whole purpose," he said. "The purpose is to identify people who are out of place in our community."

Increased individual surveillance of surroundings is also required, Morris said. Everyone needs to make sure vehicles are parked away from buildings and be aware of and report suspicious packages

If a suspicious package is discovered, it should not be touched, but be reported to Kwajalein Police Department, indicating time, location and any pertinent observations, he added.

Besides the increased emphasis on awareness, two other key areas — building access and island access programs — directly and visibly affect the community if the FPCON level increases, he said. Access to all retail facilities, mission essential vulnerable areas or MEVAs, and high risk targets or HRTs, are reduced to one point of entry.

"The point of entry will be manned by individuals who run the facility," he said.

A Building Force Protection manager is assigned to each building on island and is responsible for building security including restricting entry and briefing co-workers about security measures, Morris said.

Heightened FPCON levels will restrict Marshallese access to USAKA, said Maj. Brett Barraclough, USAKA Plans, Training and Security director.

"Some access programs we have right now would be suspended during Charlie, and all would be suspended at Delta," Harmon said. "Only C and D badge holders would be allowed to come on island."

Information affecting the Marshallese community and badged workers will be available through the Hourglass, Kwajalein-AFN radio and television and the RMI Liaison office and ombudsman as quickly as possible, he said.

USAKA does have some leeway on how FPCON measures are implemented, since the Department of Defense measures are guidelines.

"We will use a common sense approach," Barraclough said. "We will take a look at the actions we need to take to make a secure community ... to protect and maintain quality of life."

Supplies

Residents should not be concerned about the war's effect on the local supply link, according to Mark VerStraten, USAKA Logistics Management specialist.

"As it stands right now, I see no effect with the barge and with the AMC flights," he said. "If regular AMC flights are diverted for higher priorities, AMC can access other assets to fill the gap."

"Twelve years ago C-130s were used when some of our regularly scheduled service was disrupted," he added.

War, terrorism and violence may stress children

By KW Hillis

Associate Editor

All children, even toddlers, can react stressfully to violent world events.

Children pick up on their parents' feelings about war and violence, said Marion Ruffing, psychologist. "If they don't know why their parents are anxious or preoccupied, they may think it is their fault. Children tend to personalize situations and may worry about a relative in the military.

Stressful children can act differently in school than they do at home and it's a good idea for parents to be in touch with the school, she said.

If unusual and or negative changes suddenly develop and last in any of the 2 ½ - to 5-year-old children at the Kwajalein Child Development Center, then the parent is contacted, said Trina Tiffany, KCDC director.

Parents can help dispel their children's stress by talking to them in terms of fears, gearing their conversations to the age of the child, she said. Toddlers need a lot of reassurance and older children need to talk about their fears. All children need calm parents and a predictable daily schedule.

"Talking about violent acts of war and terrorism won't increase a child's fear if it is done in a healthy way," Ruffing said. "Parents can use the opportunity to teach children about tolerance ... about not stereotyping a group of people or a country."

Watching TV news as a family can give parents an opening to talk about violence and war with their children, she said. But be sure to be realistic when talking with children.

"Parents do want to be reassuring to the child, but they should be careful about making unrealistic promises," Ruffing said. "Parents shouldn't promise their children that no one is going to get hurt."

Software program may have unrealized applications and potential ...

particularly, within the Pan-Pacific test bed, currently under development by the Missile Defense Agency and tying together Kwajalein, Vandenberg Air Force Base in California, Pacific Missile Range Facility in Kauai, and bases in Alaska.

In fact, RTS members of a Pacific range support team are meeting with Missile Defense Agency officials in Washington D.C. this week on standardization, among other issues, and "this effort definitely has applicability. Other programs are looking at the KMAR effort here," Szczepanski said, adding that when engineers designed the program for Kwajalein, "we hoped it would have broad applications.

"We're still probably not realizing the full potential," he said. "But these are good signs from the beginning."

Podunkers win over Criminals in first A Division playoff game

By Kim Parker
Guest Writer

Forget March Madness sports fans, the Kwajalein Softball World Series is underway and it's in your own backyard.

The battle for the Men's A division championship began last night with the Podunkers easily defeating the Criminals 7-0 in the first of the best of three series.

"The teams are very well matched up," said Scott Pratt, Adult Athletics superintendent, who also empered the game.

"The Podunkers [bring] to the plate a lot of World Series experience," along with the confidence that comes with success, he said.

"The Criminals have always been to the show," Pratt said, referring to the team's previous presence in division playoffs.

"But (so far) they have failed to show their A game," he said, explaining that the Criminals have never defeated the Podunkers in post-season play.

"It will be a battle to the end," he said. "It should be a great series to watch."

Tarlang claimed the Men's Gamma Division championship last week with a 12-1 victory over Da Bomb.

Though Tarlang dominated the league all season with a record of 9-1, it was Da Bomb who drew first blood in postseason play. The loss was a wake-up call for Tarlang, who regrouped and easily won the next two games to secure the title.

Auto racing: Winston Cup Finals —

Debris, $10 part, slows military cars

From Army News Service

WASHINGTON — A broken part and a piece of debris on the track ruined what started out as a good race for the Army and National Guard Winston Cup racing teams March 16 in Darlington, S.C.

Jerry Nadeau, driving U.S. Army No. 1, and Todd Bodine, driving National Guard No. 54, both did well in qualifying for the Carolina Dodge Dealers 400 at Darlington Raceway, but both had disappointing finishes.

Nadeau qualified third and was consistently one of the front-runners in the early stages of the race. That changed suddenly when the Army car started smoking, forcing Nadeau to make a pit stop.

The U.S. Army pit crew quickly determined that the problem was a broken oil pressure fitting, stated Nadeau's official Web site. The part only costs $10, but the repairs cost the team time, eight laps worth of time.

"That put us out of the race," said Nadeau. "It was really unfortunate because we had one great racecar this weekend."

The U.S. Army team ended the race

in 35th place out of 43.

Bodine, driving the National Guard car, qualified 10th for the race. This was his career best start, according to Bodine's official Web site. Unfortunately, he was only able to finish 22 of the race's 293 laps.

In turn four of the 23rd lap, Bodine crashed after running over a piece of debris and flattening his front-right tire, stated Bodine's Web site. The National Guard car was so badly damaged it could not continue the race and ended up in last place.

"It's just racing," Bodine said. "It's a shame because we were coming off such a good qualifying run here and we were looking to back it up with a similar end result."

Ricky Craven won the race, beating Kurt Busch by two-thousandths of a second.

The U.S. Army car and the National Guard car are entered in the next Winston Cup race, the Food City 500 at the Bristol Motor Speedway, Bristol, Tenn., March 23.
