Writer describes what it takes to love a soldier

By Jamie Reese

Special to American Forces Press Service

FORT HOOD, Texas — She stands in line at the post office waiting to send a package to her husband, a U.S. Army soldier serving in Kuwait. Envelopes, pens, paper, stamps, sunscreen, eye-drops, gum, batteries, powdered Gatorade, baby wipes and Twizzlers.

He said he needed the sunscreen and baby wipes. She threw in the Twizzlers.

There's a common bond at the post office in this military town. People aren't just sending letters and packages; they are sending smiles, hope, love and just a touch of home. People look around at the others, sharing their concern, fear and pride. They take comfort knowing they are not alone.

This is a life that includes grocery shopping at a place called the Commissary. A life that has her venturing to the Post Exchange, referred to as the PX, instead of heading to Wal-Mart. This is where you come to learn, appreciate and respect the ceremonious traditions of Reveille and Retreat, and of course, the National Anthem from a completely different perspective.

At first glance, children growing up in this world of artillery, tanks and uniforms are the same as any other kids from any other town. They do the things that kids do. They play sports, go to school, and play with their friends. The difference is that their group of friends may change once a year, or more, due to a change of duty station.

They don't have any say in this. They could be two years old and not remember a thing about it, or they may be 16 years old getting ready for prom and having to up-root and move again. They're known as "military brats," a harsh misnomer for those who learn a lifestyle of sacrifice at such a young age. Yet, it makes them strong.

The little boys become the men of the house and the little girls become the ladies. They adapt to these different situations. They live with the reality that one, or even both parents, may not be around to celebrate birthdays and holidays. They know there will be times when they will look into the stands during Little League games and see only an empty space in the bleachers.

At the same time, these kids have a sense of overwhelming pride. They brag about their daddies and their mommies being the best of the best. They know their Mom's been through deployments, changes of duty stations, and the ever-changing schedules Army life brings. While Dad is away, she takes care of the house, the bills, the cars, the dogs and the baby.

To cope with it all, she learns military families communicate via the Internet so he doesn't miss out on what's happening back home. But he does miss out. He won't be there for the baby's first steps, and he may have to hear his son or daughter's first words through a time delay across a static-filled telephone line.

She remembers what it was like before he left, when everything seemed "normal." Normal except for the pressed uniform, the nightly ritual of shining boots, the thunder-like sound of the Apache helicopters flying overhead, and the artillery shells heard off in the distance. OK, relatively normal – when they occasionally went to the park, spent holidays together and even enjoyed four-day weekends when he could get a pass. But, the real challenge began with the phone call.

She relives the moments before she kissed him goodbye.

A phone ringing at 0400 hours is enough to make her heart end up in her throat. They've been expecting the call, but they weren't sure when it would come. She waits to hear the words, "Don't worry, it's just a practice run." But instead she hears, "Here we go."

So, off he goes to pack, though most of the packing is finished because as a soldier, he is "always ready to roll." She gets the baby, but leaves his pajamas on because it is just as well that he sleeps. She takes the dogs out, she gets dressed, all the while trying to catch glimpses of her husband. She wants to cherish his presence because she doesn't know when she'll see him again.

She knows that in other homes nearby, other families are enacting exactly the same scene.

Within 15 minutes, the family is in the car heading to the "rally point." As they pull up, they see soldiers everywhere, hugging their loved ones. While people love to see tearful, joyous homecomings, fearful, anxious, farewells are another story.

Too soon, with his gear over his shoulder, he walks away. She is left behind, straining to keep an eye on her soldier. As the camouflage starts to blend, only his walk distinguishes him from the others.

She takes one last look and takes a deep breath. She reminds herself she must stay strong. No tears. Or, as few tears as possible. Just words of encouragement to the children, to her friends and to herself. Then she turns, walks back to the car, and makes her way home to a house that is now eerily quiet.

Alone at night, she runs the next day's events over in her mind to make sure it will all get finished. She reviews her checklist of things to do, things to buy for his care package. Once again, she checks the calendar to count down the days. Before turning in, she checks to make sure the ringer is on for the late night phone call that might come in from overseas.

Before she falls asleep, a few tears hit the pillow. But even as the tears escape, strength enters her mind, body, spirit and soul. She remembers why she is here. She remembers the pride and the love that brought her here in the first place, and a sense of peace comes over her, replacing, if only for a second, the loneliness, the fear and the lingering heartache she feels while her soul mate is away.

This is what it means to love a soldier. She wouldn't have it any other way.

CYS asks students 'Whose line is it anyway?'

By Krystle McAllister

Television shows, even ones that we no longer get on Kwaj, can have a significant impact on teen's lives.

Heather Schantz, assistant youth director, came up with the idea to do a Kwaj-teen rendition of the popular television show, "Whose Line Is It Anyway?" last Saturday.

"We just wanted to do something fun for Valentine's Day, something active that everyone can get involved in," Schantz said.

A small group of teens, grades 7-12 participated in the event at the youth center. Like the TV show, kids played various comedic-games and even the adult facilitators Schantz, Ann McCoy, Child Youth Services coordinator, and Karen Posey, CYS training specialist, joined in one of the games.

Student's names were chosen randomly by the host to decide who would play the game. Drew Carey's host position was given on a first-come, first-serve volunteer basis.

Macy's West donated two water bottles, two bungee chords, a water jug and a skateboard for door prizes.

"We all made fools of ourselves, but we had an awesome time," said David Waddell, a sophomore at Kwajalein Jr./Sr. High School.

gether some sort of mother-daughter and father-son activity.

"We try to have events here on a regular basis," McCoy said.

A student facilitates each CYS meeting.

Now, organizers hope to increase the attendance in all CYS activities, said Cordi Woods, sophomore at Kwajalein Jr./Sr. High School.

Schantz said, "I want more ideas on what [youth] want."

Another goal is to "have the kids actually run the council, making the decisions in it,"

McCoy said. "The more initiative the youth take the sooner we'll reach the goal."

The next CYS meeting is tonight, 7 p.m. at the Youth Center.

All youth are encouraged to join, Schantz said.

Leaving the island for awhile? Notify Post Office

By KW Hillis
Assistant Editor

Thursday afternoon 10,569 pounds of mail arrived on-island and the Post Office staff worked through today to get all the mail distributed. But mailboxes stuffed full of mail because the resident is either TDY or on vacation slows the process when those people might have notified the Post Office.

"We wait until it absolutely gets totally crammed full before we remove [the mail] and put it on the shelf and put a package slip in, because our thought is they have left the combination with a friend to pick up their mail," said Karla Long, Post Office manager. "We can't legally block their box without a vacation slip."

This causes problems for the Post Office since mail or even a mail slip that is over a week old sitting in a mailbox can get a negative evaluation from the Post Office evaluator, she said, explaining that the staff calls Human Resources, Housing and the resident's home to find out if the mailbox owner has left the island.

"Out of 10 people I just called about whose boxes were overflowing with mail, I was told six of them were off-island on vacation," she said.

Leaving for more than a week without filling out a vacation slip could pose a problem for the resident too. Unlike a state-side Post Office, as a Department of Defense

Post Office, the regulations require that mail left over ?? days must be returned to sender, Long said.

"Residents don't understand the difference," she said.

Vacation slips are available inside the Post Office or at the package pickup window, she said. Residents can also call the Post Office, 53424 and request that the slip be put in their mailbox.

"They can pick it up at their convenience, fill it out and drop it in the mail slot," she said.

If a person does leave the island and realizes that they forgot to notify the Post Office or find out they are going to be gone longer than expected, they can even notify Long by e-mail at karla.long@kls.usaka.smdc.army.mil.

Liz Collier prepares a mock bomb for a training exercise, Wednesday.

By Jim Bennett

Liz Collier looks at the pieces of the broken clock and says, "I need that [part]. I've got to build an IED (improvised explosive device)."

From anyone else but her partner, Tom Eisele, the statement might warrant a call to the Kwajalein Police Department. But for the two explosive ordnance disposal, or EOD, technicians, it's all in a day's work.

Wednesday, the pair tested clay and copper shells, that when fired from a Royal Arms Disrupter, rip apart suspicious packages. Tomorrow, they'll walk a section of reef looking for unexploded ordnance left over from World War II. Next Wednesday, they'll travel to Illegini and use C-4 plastic explosive to destroy everything from a 155mm howitzer shell, left from the battle, to 81mm mortar rounds, to coral-encrusted grenades, to left-over fireworks from the Fourth of July – all collected over the past year.

Kwajalein's EOD team answered 96 calls in 2002, ranging from investigating suspicious packages to handling unexploded ordnance.

The two also support range missions with their expertise and make public awareness appearances to inform people about the dangers of unexploded ordnance.

Fire in the hole

Wednesday, the pair traveled to the KPD small arms range to test fire the new shells. Eisele, wearing a T-shirt that says, "If You See Me Running, You'd Better Catch Up," set up a heavy metal tripod with a round vice to hold a metal barrel. Loading the wired shell in the barrel, Collier aimed the weapon at the end of a "suspicious brief case." Collier attached the wire leads to a long wire, rolling it back to a safe distance where she and Eisele yell, "fire in the hole, three, two, one," before "completing the circuit" and firing off the round.

The highly compressed powder explodes from the shell at a high velocity then rips through the briefcase sending it flying through the air.

Moments later, the pair noted the clay powder residue around the damaged "battery pack" attached to the "bomb" within the briefcase.

They next targeted a metal ammunition container and later a fake pipe bomb, all achieving similar results.

Finally, using a laser sight, they targeted an improvised clock-bomb to test the range of the new shells.

"We take so many precautions. Even if it's an easy one, it's not. We follow the same procedures."

— Liz Collier
EOD Technician

All dressed up

In reality, any work near a suspicious package would involve a technician dressing out in a 70-pound bomb suit and making "the long walk" back and forth from a safe distance to the package, armed with the various tools of the trade. Tools might include the heavy tripod, disrupter cannon, a portable X-ray machine or rope and pulley devices that when attached to anything handy – an overhead beam, nearby wall, whatever – can remotely yank apart or open bags, boxes or any other package.

"I will not touch the package," Eisele said, explaining the need to work remotely, whether it's blasting open a package or attaching a hook to a zipper on a suspicious bag and using the rope and pulleys to open it from afar.

"Distance is our best friend," Collier said.

Meanwhile, the suit features an air fan, mostly to defog the visor rather than cool the occupant. In Kwajalein's sun it feels intensely hot under the lead and Kevlar shielding, especially during the slow, awkward and stiff movements the suit allows. Oddly enough, the suit does not feature protective gloves.

“You have to be able to work with your hands,” Collier said.

Lessons learned

To become an EOD technician, one must study in the military. Collier served in the Air Force; Eisele in the Army, but all four services attend the Naval School at Eglin Air Force Base and go through the same rigorous training, while only 30 percent of every class graduate the year-long course, they said.

During their course-work, they study everything from pipe bombs to land mines to nuclear weapons, and they learn to think like bomb-makers.

“They have to train us in all the ways to set up an IED,” Collier said.

“Our field adapts to new technology,” she added, pointing out the many ways to create bombs and set them off with new electrical devices that have replaced the alarm clocks of old.

The two Kwaj technicians have gone beyond the Naval School, achieving master status and Eisele, for example, plans to attend training in the Ukraine, where he hopes to compare notes with his foreign counterparts.

Unfortunately, a number of the latest EOD lessons come out of the war in Iraq where nearly everyone in the EOD community, including the two Kwaj technicians, knows someone who has been killed. Eisele said, in the last two weeks the U.S. has lost three EOD technicians. Collier added that the list includes one of her friends.

“The tough thing is they’re targeting the EOD technicians,” Eisele said, explaining the technicians address the primary IED, only to be hit by a secondary, more hidden bomb.

The job outside a combat zone presents less hazards, they say.

“We take so many precautions,” Collier said. “Even if it’s an easy one, it’s not. We follow the same procedures.”

And on Wednesday, those procedures and training led Collier to collect the pieces of a clock and battery debris from which she’ll build a dummy IED and give it to Eisele to figure out. He’ll return the favor, building some other device for her to examine.

Then the next call will come, and they’ll head out to the field.

Said Collier, “I love my job.”

Liz Collier, right, demonstrates the difficulty of movement for the writer, in the suit, using positions that an EOD technician might take during a bomb disposal while wearing the 70-pound EOD 8 bomb suit.

Kwajalein schools make the grade with review

By Jan Waddell
Reporter

Kwajalein schools received a passing marks after six members of the North Central Association for accreditation reviewed the school system during the week of Feb. 9, according to school officials during Wednesday's School Advisory Council meeting.

The NCA review topped a list of agenda items.

The NCA covers 17 Midwest Schools as well as the Department of Defense schools.

The four goals set from the last accreditation review were Responsible Learners, Life-Long Learners, Technology and Effective Communication.

The committee reviewed the Kwajalein's schools to see if the past goals had been met, studied writing samples from the Kwajalein students and reviewed the parent's survey, which was sent out last April, along with special meetings with students, parents and the school faculty.

According to Stephen Howell, Kwajalein Jr./Sr. High School principal, the written report on their findings and recommendations will be available in a month or two, but he added the NCA has recommended accreditation of the Kwajalein schools, he added.

"It was very positive in nature," Howell said.

Curricula

The proposed Social Studies and Visual Arts curriculum for Kindergarten through 10 grades is available at the Superintendents office, for review. Also, officials will hold an informational meeting, open to the public to make comments or voice concerns about the proposed curricula, Feb. 26 at 7 p.m. high school library.

Driver's Education

The Driver's Education program currently has 16 students enrolled in the program and 13 have passed the class which consists of 30 hours class room teaching and six hours behind the wheel driving experience.

"The others will be done very soon," Howell said.

The last class is Monday and the Driver Education teacher will be leaving Kwajalein on Feb. 28.

Open Agenda Items

One resident raised a concern about the high rate of teacher turn over in the school system particularly the high school English Department.

Some ideas offered to lessen this issue, were to distribute the class load equally between all 7-12 grade English teachers. According to a concerned audience member, two teachers have five different classes each and one teacher has only two classes. Also, each person resigning should be given a confidential exit interview to determine the reason for leaving.

CYS

Ann McCoy, Child and Youth Services coordinator, answered the question of how many students actually attend Power Hour saying the study program received 168 visits last month.

Members of the audience expressed concern of how many kids had actually registered for the CYS program and why registration is required. McCoy stated there are currently 150-160 registered kids with about half being new registrations.

According to SAC Chairman Jud McCrary, military regulations state kids cannot be involved in CYS unless they are registered. This is done for the safety of the kids, KRS and USAKA, he added.

Unless they are registered "[the kids] will be turned away," McCoy said.

Other Agenda Items

- There will be no school March 25 and 26, but April 30 will be a school day, because of a teacher in-service training.

- The council approved the 2004-2005 school calendar. McCrary stated that next year some of the concerns about ending the semester before Christmas break and the Thanksgiving holiday will be examined. The approved calendar can be picked up at the Superintendent's office or the high school office.

- Superintendent Karen Ammann is currently off island, in Iowa, recruiting new teachers to fill vacancies for the 2004-2005 school year.

- The Elementary School Science Fair is scheduled for Feb. 24 and 25 in the MP room. It is open to the public Tuesday, from 6:30-8:30 p.m., with awards to go out at 7 p.m.

- The National Honor Society Variety Show is set for Feb. 28 at 7 p.m. in the MP room.

- Community Education's spring class registration starts tomorrow with classes beginning March 9 through April 24. For more information contact Anthony, 51078 or the Community Education office.

- The high school Parent Teacher Student Organization meeting is set for March 3.

- The elementary school Parent Teacher Organization meeting will be held on Feb. 25.

- The next SAC meeting is planned for March 17 at 7 p.m.

Residents forming theater club find life a stage

By Jon Cassel
Contributing Writer

Although not officially a club yet, Kwajalein will soon see a community theater. The fledgling organization, headed by Judy Hoffman, tentatively meets once a week and is planning their first production.

"We came up with the idea to start a community theater, but we really wanted to watch it grow artistically," Hoffman commented. "We want to aim toward family viewing, but would like to keep the cast as mostly adults."

Once the procedures are met to become established as a club, they plan to organize a production for the community. Several ideas include a dinner theater, a murder mystery or a group of several one-act plays.

At the moment, the group is still looking for plays and scripts and is open for suggestions. Once the group has decided on a play, they plan to hold auditions, which will be open to anyone, and then start rehearsing as needed.

"We're really enthusiastic about having a community theater and we hope to see this perpetuate," Hoffman concluded.

Young and young at heart run Sweetheart Relay

By KW Hillis

Assistant Editor

A mixed-team called Perry Greenmann, a mixed-team made up of Sharon and Charles Greenbaum, Nick Perry and Laurie Mann, took first place in Monday's Sweetheart Relay, completing the four-mile race with a total net time of 20 minutes, 10 seconds, despite starting 12th.

Six-year-old David Sholar, of the Kinderwinner team of 5- and 6-year-old kindergarteners, led off the race, the first of 62 runners to leave the starting line for the Sweetheart Relay in front of the Bowling Alley.

"It's a staggered start," said Bob Sholar, Kwajalein Running Club president, explaining that the race has been held annually on Kwajalein for over 20 years although the race originally went under the name "Karnival Relay" — held in conjunction with the discontinued annual Kwajalein Karnival, he said.

Members of 15 teams of four runners and one team of two — Brian and Chris Berlind calling themselves The Bounding Berlinds — ran four, one-mile legs. Based on a 25-year-old handicapping system gleaned from the pages of Runner's World magazine, each member of each team was given a handicap based on age and gen-

The Kinderwinner team rated the greatest handicap of 15:32, he said. The team, consisting of Butler, David Sholar, RJ Sieja and Audrey Corbett, took eleventh place with a net time of 28:48.

Team Green — Mark Harmon, Shannon Burdine, Travis Tikka and Robert Guidi — with a handicap of only 2 minutes, 7 seconds waited 13 minutes and 25 seconds from the time David Sholar took off to try to catch all the other teams that had already started running, Sholar said.

Team Green came in second with a time of 22:39, passing all but the Perry Greenmann team.

"Many of the kids took off like they were running just 200 yards and they slowed down a lot by the time they passed the Laundry," Sholar said, explaining that the course was a loop bounded by Lagoon Road, 6th Street, Ocean Road and 9th Street.

The fastest net time for one mile for the women was 3:50 by Sharon Greenbaum and 4:36 by Lee Chewey for the men.

Team names like The Chewey Sweet Tarts, Dome Dames and Ferocious 4th Graders were the order of the day, Sholar said.

"It was especially fun for me," Sholar said. "When I lined up the 16 teams, I announced the handicaps and named the first runner to run. I first called up David Sholar [from the first team]. Then the second team's first runner was John Sholar.

"It was just the way the handicaps worked out," said the father of both John and David.

Holmberg and Roi Fairways rated for handicaps

By Jan Waddell

Reporter

Members from the Hawaii State Golf Association and the Hawaii State Women's Golf Association recently visited Holmberg Golf Course and Roi-Namur Fairways to rate the courses and establish an up-to-date United States Golf Authority standardized handicap rating score.

The rating team visited and played on the Kwajalein and Roi-Namur golf courses and rated them for water traps, sand traps, out of bounds, fairways, rough-depth, amount of trees, roll in the fairway, elevation change on the course, wind and size of greens.

It gives golfers a fair match on any course under the United States Golf Association handicap system.

"No matter what and where," said rating team member Gary Haynie.

According to Haynie, the members of the team play on the different courses and they also measure different aspects of the course and then the team members get together and debate their findings.

The rating system is 80-90 percent formula driven, but there is also an element of personal opinion from each team member.

Each golf course has a slope rating, which means when a golfer is golfing on that course, he can use the slope rating to determine his handicap for that course.

"The best method [slope rating] to allow all golfers to compete fairly on any course" said Bob Butz, golf course superintendent. "Our handicap will be up-to-date and more accurate."

The members of the team attend seminars that give them the training to conduct the rating evaluation.

"[I do it] for the love of the game," said Jim Femia, HSGA team member and a 30-year golfer.

The team is certified by the State of Hawaii and rates golf courses through out the Hawaiian Islands, the Pacific, Japan, Guam and Okinawa.

Femia remarked that Kwajalein and Roi are two very unique courses and the people are phenomenal.

"[Butz] was a gracious host to us," agreed team member Zeke Schmus.

Lupton's team claims Sadie Hawkins crown

By KW Hillis
Assistant Editor

With a net score of 25, Betty Lupton's team, which included Dick Lupton, Ed Paget, Lloyd Jordan and Bill Weaver, took first place at the Kwajalein Golf Association's Sadie Hawkins Day fun tournament.

"It's a scramble ... and the team name is the name of the woman on the five-person team," said Bob Nast, KGA fun tournament chairman. "A scramble is each person [on the team] hits a shot. The team chooses the best shot and everyone hits from that position."

Twelve teams competed during the annual 9-hole tournament on Monday at Holmberg Fairways for the top three places and for closest to the pin on the fourth and sixth holes.

Kim Parker, along with teammates, Bob Allard, James Barrs, Kenny Leines and Steve Martinez, edged out Yvonne Duarte's team by one point for second place with a net score of 27. Parker's team also won closest to the pin at the sixth hole.

Other members of Duarte's third-place team were Howard Duarte, John Brown, Bob Kunz and Chopper Sugibayashi.

Pam Frase's team — Pam and Andy Frase, Jeff Tucker, Ralph Gary and Vernon Adcock — took closest to the pin on the fourth hole.

But 60 golfers didn't just come out for the golf, Nast said, explaining that they stayed for the spaghetti dinner cooked up by Ray Demaio and Linda Schuett.

"The food is something that has made our tournaments really good and Ray has been responsible for that," Nast said.

"Ray doesn't win at golf, but he deserves recognition for the food," Nast said with a laugh.

Cycling across U.S., Dad supports son and troops

By K.L. Vantran

American Forces Press Service

WASHINGTON — One of Dan Forant's favorite photos is of his young son wearing an Army helmet. And, one of the duo's favorite pastimes is cycling.

Today, Spc. Dan Forant III sports his own Army gear as an infantryman in Iraq. And his bike is safely stored in the garage at home — awaiting his return.

"He always wanted to be in the Army," said the elder Forant, who will soon bicycle from New York to California in support of his son and others serving in the war on terror.

Forant plans to leave his home in Cohoes, N.Y., near Albany, March 1 and head toward New York City and the site of the Sept. 11, 2001, terrorist attack on the World Trade Center towers. That same day, in Iraq, his son is slated to pin on sergeant's stripes.

Although he's been to the WTC site several times, the 39-year-old said there are several reasons the hallowed ground is one of his first stops.

"It's a nerve center, a focal point," said Forant, who was evacuated from a Pennsylvania airport after the tragic events of Sept. 11 unfolded. "How can I go through New York and not go there?"

In preparation for the 3,000-mile journey, Forant said he has been cycling three hours a day on a stationary bike at a 15 mph pace six days a week. He plans to ride between 60 and 70 miles each day, resting every three hours. From Illinois to California, he will travel along historic Route 66.

Anyone may join Forant on the ride. "Hopefully, we'll pick up people along the way," he said, adding he plans to stop at Fort Leonard Wood, Mo., and will be close to Fort Sill, Okla.

Forant, who served in the Army, said he's just an "average guy" trying to show support for the troops, especially his son. He said he's confident he'll be able to complete the journey in about 45 days.

Forant admitted cycling in New York in March may be chilly, but he said he'd rather hit the Midwest in April, when the temperature will be "bearable."

"I don't like the heat," he added. "I'd rather ride in 10 degrees than 95." He said he'll just make up any time he loses to bad weather.

"Failure is not an option," he said.

For more information on Forant's bicycle journey, call 1-800-207-5054. All money raised from the cross-country trek, said Forant, will go to families of the fallen — "those who gave their lives in defense of this great nation," he said.

Retiree donates 'Support Our Troops' wooden nickels

By Donna Miles

American Forces Press Service

WASHINGTON — As a show of support for the men and women in uniform, a San Antonio businessman is giving away free wooden nickels imprinted with the words, "Support Our Troops" and "The Price of Freedom is NOT Free!"

Herb Hornung, a retired Air Force master sergeant who now runs the Old Time Wooden Nickel Co., has a long history of passing out wooden nickels with slogans supporting America's veterans.

So when the United States started deploying service members to Iraq, Hornung decided to print up wooden nickels urging people to support the troops. Initially he carried pockets full of them around town and handed them out when he noticed men and women in uniform. Then he got the brainstorm to broaden his effort and promote the giveaway on his company Web site.

Hornung estimates that since he started his cyber-effort he's given away about 50,000 "Support the Troops" nickels.

The first wooden nickels were issued during the Depression when two Washington state banks failed, leaving their communities with a money shortage. Later, wooden coins became popular for use at state fairs and centennials. The old saying, "Don't take any wooden nickels" cautioned people not to accept wooden money during the last days of a fair, in case they didn't get to cash them in before the event ended.

Likewise, while Hornung's "Support the Troops" coins can't be used as legal tender, he's hopeful the coins he gives away have a significant although less tangible, value. "I figured that this is something I can do to show support for the troops and to let them know that we're behind them," he said.

To request four free wooden nickels, send a self-addressed business-size envelope with two first-class stamps to: Support Our Troops, Wooden Nickel Building, 345 Austin Road, San Antonio, TX 78209.
