USAKA Headquarters is always busy. Serious people with briefcases and folders stride in and out of building 901 alongside travelers heading to and from Honolulu and other locations in the Pacific. But October has seen a huge surge in activity at headquarters. More people with briefcases have been spotted.

What is going on?

The Army Performance Improvement Criteria (APIC) Assessment Team have been putting in some long hours in the airport terminal. The team came together on Kwajalein earlier this month to conduct a self-assessment of the current state of the installation. Through interviews of key personnel and evaluations of the regulations and documentation supporting the mission, the team has been focusing on collecting data. Currently, a compilation of the data collected is taking place. The team will present its findings to the senior leaders on Oct. 26. Recommendations will be made and evaluated. Finally, opportunities for improvement, derived from the self-evaluation, will be implemented over a period of time.

What is APIC?

Christy Perkins, Resource Management and APIC coordinator, explained, "APIC is a common sense approach to assess and improve our or-

Schools networked for computer power

As the George Seitz Elementary School computer teacher, Masina McCollum uses computers and a network she never had as a kid attending Kwaj schools years ago.

The network, installed this summer by Information Management Division techs, connects the school computer labs, libraries and individual classrooms to the islandwide network, opening up new avenues for instruction and improving communication.

McCollum teaches students from kindergarten to sixth grade. Students learn how to work with computers; how to operate programs, including word processing, desktop publishing and presentation software; and, of course, how to surf the Internet.

Each elementary school class spends one hour a week with McCollum in the computer lab.

"We try to incorporate their classwork into the computer class," McCollum said. "They come in here and they're glued. They're high-fiving each other."

One class will use its clip-art and desktop presentation software to design a Halloween safety slide show. Younger kids are excited to write letters.

Click forward to the high school library. There, Derek Brower's science class researches El Niño and other atmospheric and oceanic trends.

"It'd be a lot harder without this (Internet)," said Danielle Bellknap, a junior researching waves at one of six computer stations in the high school library. "We'd be looking for books and magazines and we'd probably have to go to the (Grace Sherwood) public library."

"For the current up-to-date information on what's happening with the science world, it's all there on the Internet," Brower added. "The books are still being written, but the information is there on the Net."

Students not only have access to the Internet, but a printer, as well. Digital cam-ganization. [It] provides a working tool for strategic planning and a simple approach to performance assessment."

Who makes up the team?

The Assessment Team is composed of personnel from USAKA/KMR, RSE, IRE and CIS: Judy Kennamer, chief, Program Support Division, Kwajalein Support Directorate; Cynthia Brewer, Public Affairs; 1st Sgt. Ozell Robertson, Personnel; Rudy Gil, Command Safety; John Jorgensen, Information Management; Owen Egan, CIS; Rich Gordan, IRE; Bob Paradise, Contracting Division; Dick Lupton and Mike Paris, KLS; Paul Hester and Master Sgt. Ray Bell, Kwajalein Missile Range; Maj. Matt Reed, Jim Landgraff and Brad Morton, Installation Management; Maj. Paul Bezzak, Intelligence; and Perkins.

The SDMC support staff of Dana Hensley, Candy Holcomb and Nelson McKown oversee the team from the SDMC perspective.

Finally, the SDMC commander hired APEX, Inc. to be the consultants for the SDMC-wide self-assessment. John Hopkins, Luis Morales and Tom Huberty represent APEX at USAKA/KMR.

Why use APIC on Kwajalein?

Lt. Gen. John Costello, SMDC commander, is determined to implement APIC throughout the command, according to Lt. Col. Dave Stoddard, USAKA/KMR acting commander.

"APIC reinforces our command commitment to excellence in our group and personnel endeavors," Costello wrote in a letter. He added the program is intended to prioritize and organize mission work.

Stoddard noted that this is a unique opportunity for government and contractor personnel to partner together to bring about a positive change. There is no other Army installation doing this, he added.

What is APIC's goal?

"To improve the overall effectiveness and efficiency of Army organizations in delivering continuous value to customers, resulting in mission success," as stated in the Army Performance Improvement Criteria 1999 manual.

The HQDA, Office of the Chief of Staff, Army Management Directorate Strategic Management and Innovations Division is the Army proponent for APIC.

What is APIC's background?

"In 1995, the Army Communities of Excellence (ACOE) Program changed their standards and criteria. The Army adopted the Malcolm Baldrige National Quality Award Criteria and published a "greened" version: the Army Performance Improvement Criteria," Perkins explained. "In June 1997, the draft AR5-1, Army Management Philosophy was updated to incorporate APIC as the assessment tool for all Army organizations."

What are the benefits of APIC?

Hopkins said, "The benefits of using the criteria are several. First, the criteria provides a systematic assessment tool ... It also serves as a set of criteria that provides diagnostic, goal-oriented method to evaluate specific processes and practices within the organization. And then, finally, the criteria helps different organizations communicate about what they do and how they do it by reference to the criteria items."

"APIC raises performance expectations and standards, integrates key mission requirements into results and, finally, APIC is the foundation for integrated organizational change," Perkins added.

Is there a scoring system?

"Yes, but even though we'll receive a score, we aren't doing this for competition. We're doing it to assess our organization so that we can improve," Perkins explained.

When asked what his assessment was of this command and Kwajalein in general, Hopkins said, "Our assessment is that USAKA and Kwajalein Missile Range are high-performing organizations already. [There is] great evidence of teamwork, a true partnership between contractors and government here."

The Kwajalein Hourglass is an authorized Army newspaper published by the Commander, USAKA/KMR, under provisions of AR360-81. It is prepared by a Raytheon Range Systems Engineering editorial staff under contract DASG60-94-C-0067, printed on a Xerox DocuTech printer and distributed Tuesdays and Fridays to a circulation of 2,500 military personnel, federal employees, contractor workers, and their families assigned to the command. eras and scanners may soon be made available too for multi-media projects.

"For the students... in college these days, not all courses are research papers, mid-terms and finals," said Cris Laytham, school librarian. "There's a lot of emphasis on public speaking and presentations. And the ability to research and synthesize the information is beneficial, too."

The network has given teachers more to work with, as well.

"There are a lot of small things that make life a little easier for the teachers," Laytham said. "To communicate with other teachers. It's real helpful for the teachers like myself that go back and forth between schools."

"We don't have any other real means of communicating with colleagues in the states either," Brower said of e-mail's many uses.

In fact, e-mail has taken the place of memos left in teacher mailboxes, too.

"It's more convenient all around," said high school Principal Stephen Howell.

Convenience aside, technology, particularly computers, has become a goal for the North Central Association, which accredits Kwaj schools.

Classes are being offered on software, to be followed by scanners, digital cameras and spread sheets.

"I'm hoping it will drift into the classroom and the curriculum," Howell said. "We're trying to blend it into the curriculum practically."

Installation information

So what's it take to network a school? Computer techs from IMD completed the task this summer with:

- More than 25,000 feet of copper cable installed in 120 drops in 55 locations
- 80-plus custom patch cables constructed
- Five single-mode fiber optic connections installed utilizing 10 separate transceivers
- Eight hubs and four network switches
- Five ISDN remote network configurations installed or modified
- 132 computers reloaded with new software and checked for maintenance
- Clean-up/reorganization of three computer labs — more than 60 computers
- 55 user and e-mail accounts created for teachers and staff
- Group training given to teachers and staff on network, e-mail and World Wide Web.

Columbus Day tourney nets 251.5-pound marlin

By Trudee Butler

The 1999 Columbus Day Celebration Fishing Tournament netted some big fish.

Eighteen boats from Kwajalein, Roi-Namur, Ebeye and Third Island participated in the tournament.

The billfish category was awarded to Capt. Sam Bellu of Ebeye for his marlin, which weighed in at 251.5 pounds.

The ahi category went to Capt. Randy Makabe of Roi-Namur for his ahi, which tipped the scales at 24.4 pounds.

The total aggregate weight category was awarded to Capt. Terry Brown, with about 186 pounds of fish.

Capt. Gordon Oyamot captured three categories for his 27.5-pound wahoo, a barracuda weighing in at 26.5 pounds and a 15-pound dogtooth tuna.

The Columbus Day Fishing Tournament is one of two major competitions held by the Kwajalein Fishing Club every year.

The crew of Boat 510 from Kwajalein pose with one of the fish they caught to win the total aggregate category. The fishermen hauled in some 186 pounds of fish. The crew includes, from left to right, Robert Amadore, Capt. Terry Brown and Mark McCollum.

Solutions do exist to drinking problems

By Gwyne Copeland

One drink turns into two. Two become four. How can you tell if your drinking is out of control?

Raytheon psychologist Theo Riley suggests people ask themselves five questions.

1. Have I tried to cut down and it's not working?
2. Do I feel guilty about drinking?
3. Am I amazed when people talk to me about my drinking?
4. Do I drink early in the day to get myself going?
5. Am I experiencing problems in my life because of alcohol?

An affirmative answer to these questions may indicate it's time to get some help, according to Riley.

There are two levels of substance disorders. The first is substance abuse. Riley defines that as one or two isolated incidents when alcohol interferes with your life. Examples of this behavior include fighting with a spouse after drinking or a teenager being caught with alcohol.

Alcohol dependence includes the added dimension of an increased tolerance for alcohol.

"On a regular basis you need more alcohol to feel normal," Riley said. Also, drinking becomes a less positive experience, and there is physical withdrawal.

At Monday's Health Fair, Riley will have a short self-screening test for island residents to take.

If you have a problem, Riley said

Medical Minutes

One in a series
National Health Month

all the tools to overcome substance abuse are right here on Kwajalein.

She is available for counseling. Counseling can often help alcohol abusers learn healthier ways to deal with the stress in their lives.

The hospital has physicians, including a psychiatrist, who can prescribe medications that might help break alcohol dependency. Kwajalein, as well as Roi-Namur, has an Alcoholics Anonymous group.

The only resource not available on island is in-patient substance abuse treatment. But, according to Riley, those programs are available in Honolulu.

Riley and Amy Prince, M.D., will be available at the Health Fair, Oct. 25 to answer mental health questions. They'll have more information about substance abuse, depression, self-esteem and family communication.

Kwajalein Hospital to provide insurance forms

By Cindy Barrs

Kwajalein Hospital

Kwajalein Hospital will provide patients with visit charges on a HCFA-1500 universal insurance claim form in conjunction with National Health Awareness Month.

The HCFA-1500 was developed by the Health Care Finance Administration in an effort to standardize health care claims processing for Medicare. Now it is the preferred method for submitting claims to third party insurance carriers like United HealthCare, Cigna and Mail Handlers.

These forms will speed processing of a claim with the insurance company. These forms are scanned by their computer systems and processed electronically. Turnaround time for most claims is six weeks from the time an insurance company receives the claim.

Patients will then receive an Explanation of Benefits from the insurance company explaining how the charges were applied to the policy — either to the deductible or, once that is met, to the contracted level (80 percent in most cases).

By filing a claim on a HCFA-1500, there is no need to fill out additional paperwork. Just mail the form to the insurance company. The address will be printed on the top right-hand corner of the HCFA-1500.

Hospital officials ask patients bring their insurance card to the clinic when they come. A copy will be made for the patient's medical record, and the necessary insurance carrier information will be entered into the hospital billing system.

Tips for filing:

- Patients will receive two forms during their visit: A balance invoice for their records and an HCFA-1500.

- Patients should follow up on claims if they have not heard from the insurance company within six weeks. Like socks in the dryer, paperwork gets lost. Call the claims processing office (the number is usually printed on the back of the insurance card) and inquire as to the status of a claim.

- File a claim for all visits regularly. Charges are applied to the deductible. Once the deductible is met, patients are reimbursed for 80 percent of the total charges, in most cases. Individual insurance coverage is subject to an employer's benefit package.

- Review the Explanation of Benefits to determine:

- How the charges were applied (deductible or reimbursed).

- If the charges were reimbursed at the contracted level. This is usually 80 percent of the total charges after the deductible is met.

- Re-file if necessary.

- Call the cashier's office at the hospital if there are any questions or if the insurance company denies the reimbursement.

Hours added for shots

Kwajalein Hospital will be offering extended immunization hours for the flu vaccine.

Additional times include:

- Oct. 23, 1 p.m. to 6 p.m.

The flu vaccine is free of charge. Questions? Call the hospital at 52223 or 52224.

Caring for kids

At left, Shriner Ed Marx holds Mthunzi Thair Thabiti, left, and Rako Joni Kabua, right, before the two children left Kwajalein for Honolulu. Both were admitted to the Shrine Hospital in Honolulu. Right, Jessie Lucky, center, received serious burns when he apparently dropped a lighted match into a container filled with gasoline fumes. He and his mother, Sandy Lucky, were sent to the Shriners Hospital Unit in California for treatment of his burns.

The club has sent increasingly larger numbers of children to the United States for treatment of various medical conditions. From 12 children in 1997, the number of children sent climbed to 19 in 1998 and 31 in 1999.

C-130 makes safe emergency landing

By Jim Bennett

Maj. Tom Fister and the crew of an Air Force C-130 didn't mean to wake the island late Wednesday night, but they had a malfunctioning engine.

The crew landed safely at Bucholz Army Airfield with only one major result of the in-flight emergency — a late night minute-long siren blast that alerted local emergency officials around 10 p.m.

"It was pretty uneventful," Fister said. "That's the way we like it."

"It was fairly routine," said Aviation Manager Steve Wallace.

Fister said the plane, based out of Keesler Air Force Base in Gulfport, Miss., was enroute to Kwajalein from Guam. They intended to stay the night before flying on to Hickam Air Force Base in Honolulu.

The crew, however, is expected to stay a few days as they wait for a part to arrive to repair the engine.

Air crews routinely practice three-engine landings.

"The only difference is you're coming into a strange airport and it's dark," Fister said. "Otherwise the procedures are the same."
