Kwajalein marks POW/MIA Day

By Jim Bennett

Americans will go to work tomorrow morning, many driving by government buildings not even considering what the black flag flying from the pole means. But for veterans, former prisoners of war and families of POWs and those still missing in action, Friday means much more.

"They are our comrades," said Harry Bryson, post commander for American Legion Post 44 on Kwajalein. "We're thankful for the ones we got back, and we still wonder about a few that haven't come back."

Sept. 17 is POW/MIA Recognition Day, and will be celebrated in the states tomorrow with a variety of ceremonies.

At Post 44, members recognize POWs and MIAs during every monthly meeting. There, the POW/MIA flag is posted and an empty chair symbolically holds a place at the meeting for the POWs and MIAs.

"It has to be traumatic for the families," Bryson added. "Killed in action is one thing. There's a finality there. But POW or MIA, it can be months or years before it can be resolved."

Stateside, the day will be marked by the dedication of a new inscription on the Tomb of the Unknowns at Arlington National Cemetery. Air Force 1st Lt. Michael J. Blassie was identified last year as the Vietnam War

Police detectives recognized for three cases

Investigations included $250,000 embezzling scheme at laundry, theft of two five-ton dump trucks in January

By Peter Rejcek

A pair of Kwajalein Police Department investigators received U.S. Army kudos for their work on a string of recent cases, including an embezzlement scheme believed to have cost the government over $250,000.

Invs. Yoshi Jorji Kemem and Amanda Leigh Broadwater were given plaques of commendation from the U.S. Army Criminal Investigation Command during a brief ceremony last month in front of the Kwajalein Police Department. Police Chief Terry Hardy presented the awards, along with certificates from the former provost marshal, Maj. Derik Crotts.

"These are always the good moments — when you can recognize somebody like that," Hardy said.

The cases included:

- An embezzling scheme at the post Laundry Facility, which may have resulted in a loss to the government of more than $250,000 over the last 10 years.

"The individual involved was apparently stealing money," Hardy said. The chief credited not only his investigators, but also Raytheon auditors for uncovering the decade-long theft.

The identity of the individual has not been released, and the case is still under investigation.

"It's still an active investigation," said Hardy, explaining the suspect had been "skimming" money at the facility for years before the alleged crime was uncovered.

You're not in Kansas anymore

This picture taken from a recent celebration of Mani Day on South Loi is a sampling of what's in store for Kwajers next week when the annual festival celebrating Marshallese customs comes here. A host of activities are planned for Sept. 23-25. For a full listing of events and further information, stay tuned for Tuesday's Hourglass.

More than 50 island women filled the Kabua Room to hear featured speaker Gary K. McMillen, commander USAKA/KMR, and to learn about the Yokwe Yuk Women's Club's past contributions and plans for the upcoming year, Tuesday evening.

To begin the meeting, McMillen spoke to the group about the American partnership with the Marshallese people and the significant impact USAKA/KMR has on the Marshallese economy.

Starting with a brief summary of the history of the United State's association with the Republic of the Marshall Islands and the 1986 Compact of Free Association, which defines the special relationship between the two countries, McMillen described many of the contributions America makes to the Marshalls.

These include the land lease agreement with the RMI; Title X construction projects funded by the U.S. State Department; the Job Corps site, which has provided more than 1,300 Marshallese students with jobs and educational experience; the guest student program through which Marshallese students attend school on Kwajalein; the employment of 1,200 Marshallese workers in a wide range of positions; and payment of the Marshallese flat tax.

McMillen concluded with a description of the contributions of many volunteer organizations and individuals, and expressed his appreciation for the YYWC's part in these volunteer efforts.

"The women's club activities in Micronesia have an impact not just in Kwajalein, not just in the Marshalls, but throughout the Pacific area," he said.

The club is not just about work, however. In describing many of the club's activities from last year, McMillen noted this group knows how to have fun, while still accomplishing its goals as a social, cultural and service organization.

Gerri Jackson, YYWC president, then introduced members of the YYWC board for this year. Each board member described her committee's goals and plans and offered many opportunities for member participation.

Lesley Gandy, first vice president, previewed future meetings, including a muumuu-making demonstration and potluck dinner in October; a bunco game in November; and the holiday cultural exchange and tour of homes in December.

Elaine Holland, second vice president, described some of the new fund-raising and social events her committee anticipates this year, including an unaccompanied women's Thanksgiving dinner; a swap meet in January; and a Valentine's sweetheart ball.

Other new officers are Donna Howell, secretary; Elaine McMahon, treasurer; and Pam McMillen, member-at-large.

The executive board also includes these committee chairwomen: Penny Stoddard, Micronesian Handicraft Shop; Roxanna González-Ball and Nancy Bradshaw, Bargain Bazaar; Debbie Goodwin, Education and Assistance; Evenruth Malolo, Cultural Exchange; Grace Fogarty, Christmas Drop; Elaine McMahon, Holiday Cultural Exchange; and Brigitte Kennedy, Hospitality/Membership.

The YYWC is one of the oldest organizations on island, having served the community since the early 1950s. The club's mission statement is, in part:

"The purpose of the YYWC is to stimulate a vital sense of cooperative community living; to support activities that promote good morale and contribute to the general welfare of both Kwajalein Atoll and Micronesia; to foster friendships among the women of Kwajalein Atoll; and to promote cultural enrichment experiences."

Last year, the YYWC donated more than $28,000 for educational and assistance projects throughout Micronesia. The club also awards scholarships to graduating seniors from Kwajalein High School, makes donations to the Grace Sherwood Library, and helps prepare Christmas gift bags each year to deliver to the outer islands.

Additionally, the club contributed to the funds that established the Marshallese Cultural Center and sponsors a number of cultural exchange events with Marshallese women.

All Kwaj and Roi women are eligible for membership in the YYWC; it is not necessary to be invited by a member. Prospective members are welcome to attend a meeting or two before joining. Meetings are held the second Tuesday of each month, September through May, usually in the evening. An annual membership fee of $10 is due this month for new and returning members.

Jackson concluded the meeting by encouraging new and returning members to sign up for one of the many committees or activities described.

"This is not a one-person mission. We can't reach out to the Micronesians and each other without the energy and dynamism of each of you here, along with some people who aren't here," she said.

For more information, contact Jackson at 54430, or Kennedy at 52641.

Butterworth takes the helm at Job Corps, looks for community support

When Ruby Butterworth and her husband, Mark, each heard separately about jobs in Kwajalein within the same week, they knew a move to Kwaj was meant to be.

Butterworth, new site manager of Kwajalein's Job Corps Center, arrived recently from the Job Corps site at Bellingham, Wash., where she was a reading teacher and then academic manager for the past seven years. Her husband, a skipper, will join her in a month or so.

Butterworth has worked both in education and industry. She taught in public schools for several years, was a sailmaker, and worked for a sign company in design and production in Bellingham.

"The whole purpose of Job Corps is to get students jobs," said Butterworth, explaining a background in industry and hiring helps to understand and then communicate to the students what employers are looking for and how to succeed at a job interview.

"Communication skills and speaking up are critical," she added.

The Job Corps program is an education and training program for low-income young adults who need job skills. Students stay in the Kwaj program three to four months, with the primary goal of getting English and reading skills up to a level to go to the program in Hawaii.

Last Friday, 10 students graduated from the Kwaj program. They left by plane the next day for Hawaii, where the program lasts up to two years — three if the student is in the college program.

It's a big event in their lives, leaving their families and going on to Hawaii, according to Butterworth.

The Kwajalein Job Corps site is unique in several ways within the program.

It's the smallest Job Corps program in the world: It currently has 16 students, with the maximum of 36 expected within a month. Also, it is the only center outside of the United States and the only one to which students commute by boat.

Since it opened in the late 1980s, Job Corps has provided more than 1,300 young men and women with job and educational experience.

Among the goals outlined by Butterworth were improving and updating the ESL (English as a Second Language) curriculum. New research and materials have recently become available, she explained. Second, Butterworth said she would like to continue expanding community contacts.

As for immediate projects, Butterworth said she recently helped plant 50 new plants around the Job Corps building, and wants to renew the turtle feeding program at the nearby turtle pond.

Butterworth said she really likes Kwaj, especially the lack of traffic and commuting stress, but is anxious for her husband to join her.

Boating was one of the couple's favorite pastimes in Washington, where they took their cruiser through the intercoastal waters, and Butterworth said they plan to do a lot of sailing after he arrives.

IMPORTANT INFORMATION ABOUT YOUR DRINKING WATER Elevated Lead Levels on Meck Island

All U.S. Army drinking water systems on Kwajalein Atoll are regularly tested for lead at various locations in the distribution system. Drinking water may pick up lead from lead and brass pipes and plumbing fixtures as it travels from the treatment plant to the point of use. At the treatment plant, the water does not contain lead, but it may pick up lead as it travels through piping and fixtures within buildings. Thirteen samples were taken on Meck Island during July, and three contained lead in excess of 15 micrograms per liter (μL), which is above the EPA "Action Level" for drinking water. This does not mean the water is unfit for drinking, the EPA sets its Action Level based on chronic (lifetime) consumption of water containing trace amounts of lead. As a result of this Action Level, the Utilities Department has initiated corrosion control measures on Meck Island. These measures help prevent lead in the pipes from dissolving into the water.

You can take the following steps to reduce your exposure to lead:

- Flush your water faucet for 15–30 seconds before using it for drinking or cooking, particularly after the water has been standing in the pipes for more than eight hours, such as overnight. This flushes any standing lead from the pipes.
- Don't use hot tap water for cooking; instead, heat cold tap water on a stove. Lead dissolves more easily in hot water.

Infants and children who drink water containing lead in excess of the Action Level could experience delays in their physical or mental development. Children could show slight deficits in attention span and learning abilities. Adults who drink water containing lead levels above the Action Level over the period of many years could develop kidney problems, high blood pressure, or may be at an increased risk of getting cancer.

This is not an emergency. If it had been, you would have been notified immediately. This notice does not apply to the water systems on Kwajalein, Roi-Namur, and Ennylabegan. For more information, contact the Meck Water Treatment Plant, 57251; the Kwajalein Water Treatment Plant, 52155; or the RSE Environmental Office, 53225.

Members of Barbara Bicanich's Kwajalein High School French class visited the Coliseum in Rome, Italy, during their recent European tour. It's more than pizza and french fries for these Kwajalein High School French students

By Bob Fore

For six young ladies from Barbara Bicanich's Kwajalein High School French class, the opportunity to experience a new culture came in the form of a nine-day tour this summer in Italy and France.

Bicanich met up with students Jaime Yelvington, Kylie Main, Katie Gibson, Heather Cornell, Tracy Keyser and Katie DeLong in Boston on June 29 for the flight to Rome.

On arrival, they joined with other traveling companions who would share their tour, including another group of students from a high school in South Carolina and a women's group from upstate New York. A Boston-based travel agency arranged the tour for the 38 people in the group.

"The Kwaj kids are good travelers," said Bicanich. "In fact they were better at it than some of the adults. They are so used to traveling that they would take it all in stride if there was a delay."

Rome was the first stop. The students had the opportunity to visit a number of historic locations. At the Coliseum they were able to see the ruins of the ancient amphitheater, which was the setting for combating gladiators and numerous other blood sports for which the Roman Empire was well known.

Members of the group broke up into smaller groups to visit other sites of note, including the Sistine Chapel, whose ceiling frescoes were painted by Michelangelo, as well as the catacombs — the burial vaults and galleries that served as the seat of the ancient Christian religion.

"I really liked the catacombs," said Cornell. "My hope is to be an archaeologist. Someday I would like to live and work in Rome, and, oh the ice cream. I am only 15 and am experiencing so much at an early age."

In Florence, the group viewed the downtown area as well as the museum where Michelangelo's famous "David" is located.

Other cities visited included Pisa, as well as the French cities of Eze and Nice and the principality of Monaco.

The group ended up in Paris where they visited the Eiffel Tower, the Louvre and Notre Dame, as well as doing some shopping and checking out the sidewalk cafes.

"We picked really good places; I liked Nice and Rome," said DeLong. "Nice had a great atmosphere, while Rome was more historical in content."

"It is important for kids to see other cultures and practice their language skills," said Bicanich. "Some even picked up simple phrases in Italian. This has been an experience that will last a lifetime."

UNACCOMPANIED PERSONNEL: ARE YOU REPRESENTED?

Each BQ should have a designated representative for the Bachelor/Bachelorette Advisory Councils to look after the interests of all occupants; two representatives for BQs housing over 100 personnel. Make sure you know who your representative is! If you don't have one, get together with the other occupants and vote. You should be represented! An alternate representative for each BQ is recommended. New representatives call Chris Ouder Kirk, 53400 and identify yourselves.

Fishing tourney brings in the big fun and fish

By Jim Bennett

With 15 minutes to go in the Kwajalein Sportfishing Club Labor Day tournament, Jim Peay and crew hooked the big one — a 209½-pound black marlin. They had to report back to the Small Boat Marina or take a disqualification.

"We thought about it and it was better to take the DQ and bring it in," Peay said. "We have a habit of doing this."

In fact, in Peay's last tournament he hooked a 135-pound blue marlin shortly before the return time. They called in their catch over the radio and reported in time for that tournament. This tournament didn't allow for call-ins at the last minute, so Peay and crew — Kelly Anderson, Terry Yearly, and Flynn Gideon — brought in the big fish.

It was the largest unofficial catch of the tournament, which featured eight fish categories and awards for both the smallest and largest fish in each as well as total aggregate weight, said Lamar Hina, who organized the event.

Two crews tied for top honors among the 15 boats and crews. Roger Wellsandt led the crew of Christine Fox, George Kaiwi, Gabby Ellamar, and John Jurgenson. Danny Vinluan captained the crew of Susan Sasano, Herb Lee, John Sergave, and Danny Kaiminaauo.

Six crews received "skunk awards" having caught nothing.

The tournament was capped by a pot-luck supper and awards ceremony. Awards included everything from candles to gift certificates, to multi-purpose tools, lures, clocks, watches and a bicycle.

"The main thing is everyone had a good time," Hina said.

Kwaj to enjoy show to 'write home about'

By Peter Rejcek

Kwajalein is headed to the front. Better yet, the front lines are moving to Kwaj with a three-day showing of Letters from the Front: WWII, a Broadway-style production that tells the story of the home front in 1945 through actual war correspondence.

The show stars Della Cole as Katharine Hartgrove, "the flinty but big-hearted Pulitzer Prize winning author" and Neal Matthews, who plays Johnny Chastain, the "rascally but charming sitcom star who is the man in her life."

Performances are scheduled nightly at 7 p.m., Oct. 1-3, at the Richardson Theater.

With some three tons of equipment in tow, Letters is probably one of the biggest Department of Defense shows to come to the island, according to Steve Snider, superintendent of entertainment services.

"This is a big show for Kwaj, for what Kwaj can offer in terms of an arena," Snider said. "Generally, the USO shows are comedians."

Originally set in the Desert Storm milieu in 1990, the production headed to Kwaj time travels back to World War II. For the revamped edition, new sets and props were created, with all the costumes being made from scratch.

"The folks in your areas who have been hungering for a truly remarkable theater experience will be quite filled by this production," said Art Conn, entertainment coordinator for the Army in Korea.

"The set is cleverly designed and looks great on the stage," he added.

The 1999 Pacific Tour is the production's third international tour. Besides Kwajalein Atoll, the show will play in Korea, Japan, Singapore, Guam, Okinawa, Diego Garcia and Johnston Atoll.

By the completion of this tour, the production will have visited over 150 military installations in 38 states across America, and 10 different countries since 1992.

"It obvious from the way the audience responds to us, this play makes them feel terrific," said producer Marsha Roberts.

The show is for families, but is not recommended for young children.

Letters from the Front: WWII will show at the Richardson Theater Oct. 1-3.
