Range opens doors to students

Some of them already have plans to pursue other fields, such as architecture or international relations, but a small group of high school students opted to get up early and stay late for a week to learn about Kwajalein Missile Range and careers in engineering. "The weeklong program has three objectives, each with equal weight, said Jeff Beckley, RSE Kwajalein Technical manager. "First, educate the students with regard to what we do here ... second, encourage students to pursue degrees and careers in engineering ... third, have fun."

Exercise tests Kwaj readiness

At 8:10 a.m. Tuesday, Nita Jarrell, the KMR commander's secretary, got a call no one looks for. A man claiming to be part of a terrorist organization called Against Mutual Assured Destruction told her his group had targeted Kwajalein to "shed American blood."

"It was very scary," Jarrell said. "I knew it was an exercise. It sounded real."

Jarrell used a phone threat checklist provided to her and other offices around the island by USAKA Provost Marshal Maj. Paul Bezzek, marking down specifics about the call.

"I always kept it by my desk," she said. "I didn't think I'd use it. I knew

Greenpeacers to spend week in jail

By Jim Bennett

Two Greenpeace protesters will spend a week in jail and pay a $100 fine each for trespassing on USAKA Monday, and future trespassers could get longer jail terms, according to John Young, assistant attorney general for the RMI.

Anne Marie Rasmussen, 21, of Denmark, and Mike Townsley, 37, of the United Kingdom, were arraigned Tuesday in the Republic of the Marshall Islands District Court, visiting on Ebeye this week. Both Rasmussen and Townsley pleaded guilty to a charge of trespassing, and each received $100 fines and 30 days in jail, with only seven days to serve, according to court documents. Furthermore, the two were allowed to secure air passage to Majuro, where they could finish

YYWC raises $40,000 for education

The eel traps and beautifully carved pelagics that sit on shelves at Kwajalein homes are more than mere decorations. For many students throughout Micronesia, they represent a ticket to a better education.

The Yokwe Yuk Women's Club announced this week that it raised $40,000 between sales at the Micronesian Handicraft Shop and the Bargain Bazaar. The money will be used next school year to assist education throughout Micronesia, from college scholarships to sports equipment for schools on Ebeye.

"It's more [money] than we've raised in a while," noted Dianne Tarnstrom, YYWC president.

The Mic Shop alone earned $30,000, with proceeds from Bargain Bazaar adding another $10,000. The Warning! This column not for the faint of heart: Read at own risk

As you know, I was TDY in the states for the entire month of April. The morning after I got home, I looked out over the oceanfront vista around me and this "thing" caught my eye. Our effort had materialized. The notorious water slide had been installed at the Family Pool.

Travel back in time with me if you will to July of last year. This command was awarded $75,000 in APIC prize money. We supplemented that with another $33,000, surveyed the Kwajalein and Roi-Namur communities, listened to your requests and tried to make as many of them happen as fiscally possible. This community wanted a water slide at Emon Beach.

When the Emon Beach option proved too costly, we opted for, and estimated and allocated, over $8,000 for the purchase and installation of a water slide at the Family Pool. Now it's here.

But, I have to tell you, I gazed in amazement at this thing. I had pictured small children conquering the long ascension to the top, standing on the summit, looking down through the long, dark tunnel before them, contemplating going through it, hitting the water at the bottom at 15 mph. What a thrill. What a personal best.

I wondered at the many, many little thrill-seekers who would challenge "The Water Slide," while parents bit their nails and took video of Little Johnny coming through the chute! Wrong. It ain't going to happen, folks. If you've seen this $8,100 piece of plastic, you must be wondering, "What's up with the colonel? What was he smoking when he let somebody spend $8,100 for THIS?"

For our $8,100, we got ten steps up and seven short feet down. Our kids can't even work up a good steam with that. They're not going to hit the water. They'll do well to plunk into the water. It's a major disappointment to me ... and I'm not even a kid.

When I finally stopped fuming about it, I realized that I had actually empowered someone to buy this thing and install it. If this is what I get from empowering people to do their jobs, we were all robbed. I probably could've done better with my Sears catalog and credit card!

This is not what "right looks like" to me. And, I would not be as disappointed if someone had ever stepped forward and said to me, "Look, Colonel, here's the thing ... we don't need to spend that much money on this purchase ... we can use the extra money we save to do this (great other thing) for the community ..." or words to that effect.

Do me a favor. Ride by the Family Pool and look at what we purchased with $8,100 of your prize money. Then, tell me ... is it ME, or do you also think we were robbed?

Write a letter to the editor and tell me what you think. Call 51098 — the Hotline — and tell me if you think your APIC prize money was gouged.

Military spouses earn their stripes

(Editor's Note: May 11 is Military Spouse Day.)

I can't speak for the husbands out there. They'll have to write their own story. But I will say for military and government-contractor wives everywhere — you are soldiers, airmen, sailors and Marines, too. You just don't get the uniforms or the promotions.

Ahh, these wives of our military, and our nomadic contractors and Department of Army civilians—drawn to the pomp and circumstance by the thrill of serving their country through their men, right?

Wrong. They each have their own war story, but chances are their military or GOCO (government-owned, contractor-operated) lives began with promises of exotic travel, or maybe even bribes.

He said, "So, do you want to go to Germany with me and pick up a cuckoo clock?"

She said, "I do ... and I'm packed."

So begins her life as an atta-girl.

An atta-girl is the woman who follows her big lug around the globe for at least 18 of his 20-plus years in uniform; unaccompanied tours and time at sea considered.

She memorized her husband's social security number when she learned she couldn't cash a check in the exchange or have a baby in the military hospital without it.

The woman has changed jobs so many times that asking her to keep her resume to the preferred two pages is about like asking her which of her kids she wants to keep.

Oh yeah, the kids, the little darlings ... mini family members. They're born everywhere between Spokane and Savannah, except the twins, who always seem to debut in a foreign country when there's no extended family to pull sleepless night shifts. Maybe there's a West Coast baby or an accidental East Coast baby. Often the kid is on solid food before Dad lays eyes on it for the first time, but that's another story.

The atta-girl is not just another shop-til-you-drop woman, although she can ask "how much?"

in a couple of languages.

She is strong and flexible. She has to be to survive that last-minute change of orders, sending her and her family to Walla Walla, Wash., when the household goods await them in Germany, and the family van is on a barge somewhere in between.

An atta-girl can spot the box with the wall hangings in it while it's still on the Mayflower moving van, tear it open with her teeth if she has to, and get the home-sweet-home needlepoint up on the wall before little East Coast baby can wail, "Mommy, where's the bathroom in this house!?"

She is forever prepared. She learned long ago to have some culinary creation ready to pop into the oven at a moment's notice for those battalion pot-lucks or an Aloha beach party. She can buy a low-cost, low-grade rump roast at the commissary, tenderize and pulverize it into something edible and entertain guests that night in her new government quarters.

She is a soldier, sailor, airman or Marine without the uniform. Nothing can stop her, and she doesn't ask for much. She sometimes fails, but usually succeeds. She knows the only constant is change. She gets lonely, but makes friends easily. She lives and learns, and all that is important to her is having her teenagers and husband on the same continent. If they're all speaking to each other, that's a perk.

They are atta-girls. Together they form neighborhoods, communities, and long lines at the commissary. They work and volunteer for charities, and together they laugh, cry and sometimes swear.

All this and a cuckoo clock, too. Who can ask for anything more?

Protesters could face stiffer penalties if they trespass again ...

out their sentence, provided they paid for the round trip for an Ebeye police officer who would accompany them.

The sentence is standard for a second offense, a first offense generally carrying just 30 days probated, Young said. But two other Greenpeace protesters were convicted of trespassing on Meck Island in July 2000, during the Integrated Flight Test, and consequently, Rasmussen and Townsley were treated as second-time offenders.

"Another [Greenpeace] incident and [jail time] will go up even more, and the cost of doing business for them goes up," Young said.

Arrested on Monday by Kwajalein police, the pair was held in the Ebeye jail Monday night. The District Court came to Ebeye Tuesday for their regularly scheduled monthly session. Under RMI law, accused must go before a magistrate judge within 24 hours. The court moved the Greenpeace case ahead on the docket and handled the matter Tuesday, Young said.

Jeramon non kom

"Jeramon non kom" is the Marshallese way to say, "Goodbye and good luck friends."

Staff Sgt. Mario Gutierrez, Karla Gutierrez-Cetina, Luis "Alex" Gutierrez-Cetina and Mario Jose Gutierrez-Cetina depart May 17 on ATI. They are headed for Harrisonburg, Va., after a two-year tour at Kwajalein. Gutierrez is operations supervisor at the post office.

In farewell they say, "We're glad to have met everyone. This has been a learning experience for all of us. Viva los vatos."

Kom ruwainene

"Kom ruwainene" is the Marshallese way to say, "Welcome."

Deborah L. Jones is the new USAKA protocol officer. She arrived from Garmisch, Germany, where she was protocol officer at the Marshall Center.

Deborah was at Kwaj 12 years ago for a two-hour layover on the way to Wake Island.

She says, "I think it will be a great assignment."

YYWC hands out 27 scholarships ...

latter is spent solely on Ebeye schools, according to Tarnstrom.

This year, a total of about $20,000 is being doled out, with a good portion of the money going to scholarships for graduating high school seniors. Tarnstrom said the YYWC Education and Assistance Committee received 27 applications from students throughout the islands, from Yap to Majuro. She said all of those who applied will receive assistance.

"We're going to do them all this year," she said.

Tuesday night, during a YYWC volunteer appreciation dinner at Emon Beach, the organization also approved a pair of $1,500 grants to Ebeye schools — Seventh Day Adventists and Queen of Peace. Queen of Peace is using the money to buy a copier, while SDA has budgeted the money for a variety of purchases, from sports equipment to basic school supplies, Tarnstrom said.

Money raised also goes to educational programs like the one sponsored by the YYWC in April, when a group of student teachers came from Majuro to visit Kwajalein classrooms. Funds also went to the College of the Marshall Islands campus on Gugegue to purchase 20 English/Marshallese dictionaries.

Tarnstrom said next year the club is going to focus on balancing its efforts between individual scholarships and schools. "It depends on who sends us proposals," she said.

Locally, the club also hands out scholarships for graduating seniors from Kwajalein High School. The money comes from fundraisers held throughout the year. Scholarships are given to the school's valedictorian, salutatorian and for the student with the most outstanding community service.

There are about 100 women in the YYWC. Many volunteer to work at the Mic Shop, Tarnstrom said. The Bargain Bazaar is kept running by a smaller core group of six to 10 volunteers.

"They do a great job," she said. "They're amazing."

Exercise prepares for the unexpected ...

about the exercise, but I didn't think I'd be directly involved, not in this way."

Jarrell's phone call kicked off a three-day anti-terrorism exercise that saw the Emergency Operations Center go to stand-by status and took Kwajalein to Threatcon Bravo.

"We're going through the procedures so that we can learn what works," said Capt. Richard Scrivner, deputy assistant chief of staff, Operations. "We want to bring about community awareness and protect personnel and equipment."

The exercise directly involved Kwajalein Police Department and USAKA staff, but indirectly included the entire island in a number of ways often not considered. For example, secondary doors to offices were locked; people were required to visibly wear their badges at all public facilities on-island; and vehicles were parked well away from buildings, to name a few.

The scenario described AMAD as a group of about 1,000 committed members who use homemade bombs packaged in backpacks and briefcases on high-tech and aircraft targets. Scrivner said he and Bezzek made up the group while throwing around abbreviations during a meeting one day before the exercise.

The group called Jarrell again on Wednesday morning, adding that Kwajalein security was weak and that their group would ensure the U.S. didn't fire another missile from the range.

In an added note, off-island phone lines went down Wednesday, due to a severed cable in California, which was not part of the exercise. But playing along with circumstances, drill officials threw in a bombing of a Burger King at Vandenberg Air Force Base, adding that details were sketchy because phone lines were down. Later, AMAD claimed credit for the bombing, which killed three people and injured 11.

In a meeting at the Emergency Operations Center, officials representing various base organizations discussed ramifications of the threats, both real and potential. Officials talked about lessons learned such as how to better patrol the island, items to move and remove and buildings to secure better.

Bezzek reiterated the need for the community to control access to buildings, locking unnecessary entrances and ensuring that authorized people only were admitted, and searching around offices and buildings for suspicious items such as unattended backpacks and briefcases.

"I think it's a good thing. There's no other way to get us prepared for the real thing," Jarrell said. "I hope I never get a real call, but if I do, I would have to handle it the same way."

Students encouraged to 'move down the road' ...

"What I wanted to do is to continue to provide the community an opportunity [to see] why we're out here, [and give] the high school kids a chance for a hands-on experience ... to talk to engineers actually working. [Each day] there is a lecture, and then they go to the site and see it in operation."

Sixteen students responded to an invitation from high school science teachers Derek Brower and Brian Brewster to be a part of the program.

Starting Tuesday, the junior and senior science students attended briefings before school. After school, they toured portions of KMR, including a visit to KREMS on Roi-Namur.

The program began with an overview briefing about KMR by Beckley. An afternoon tour of the Kwajalein Missile Control Center followed Tuesday. Wednesday, the students visited ALTAIR, ALCOR, MMW and TRADEX. Optics, Communications, Telemetry briefings and tours, and a KMCC mission playback, with students manning the controls, rounded out the week.

The program has already met the three objectives, according to a few of the students who arrived early Thursday morning for the Optics overview given by Cal Powell, Optics engineering leader.

"I think they did very well," said senior Jacob Olson, who will be attending the University of Massachusetts — Dartmouth next fall. Olson is planning to go into electrical engineering.

Although familiar with the engineering field through his father, uncle and school counselor, Olson said that he found out additional information during Kevin Hartnett's briefing at TRADEX on Wednesday. Employment on Kwajalein may be in Olson's future.

"I was planning on going to school and then getting a job back here," Olson said, adding that this program may help undecided students make up their minds what they want to do.

Different engineering career paths is one of the focuses of the program because of the fewer number of students entering engineering, Hill said. "[Students] steer away because of the heavy emphasis on science and math."

Many of the students in the weeklong program are not considering engineering, but they decided to attend anyway, Brower said.

"This is the opportunity to see what [a specific] job entails. That has been a real benefit because it is something the kids are interested in," he explained. "And a lot of these kids are dealing with what they want to do in their life ... what a great opportunity and, hopefully, motivation for some of these students to do the extra work."

Junior Niki Powell said, "I've had a good time doing this. I've learned about what goes on ... what actually happens here."

Although she's thinking of going into a career in biology, Powell was very interested in the KMR information. Powell said she was most impressed by how the ALTAIR radar was moved during the KREMS tour on Wednesday.

The speakers, who focused their briefings on the mission and their engineering specialties, got high marks from the listeners.

For example, Dr. John Szczepanski, a MIT/LL Mission Support and Data Products leader, illustrated a discussion about radars using a radio and talking about how radio stations broadcast music.

"Dr. Szczepanski did a great job," Powell said. "We were able to understand almost all his speech."

Junior Sean Cummings has not decided what he's going to do after high school, though he's leaning toward architecture, cognitive science or computer engineering. This week has been an influence, he said.

Cummings said he is particularly interested in "how the range was developed ... the history of things." He brought some questions to ask from his previous tours of the facilities.

"I was hoping to get [information on] all the radars as possible and get some questions answered, [such as] what modernization entails," he said.

Every year the high school students take a field trip to see some aspect of the range. This year, however the program is more formal, Brower said.

"We do this [program] every couple of years," said RSE Roi-Namur technical manager Jeff DeLong, adding that although it takes a lot of effort and time to put on the program, it would be "a shame not to do this for the kids."

On the way to ALTAIR, DeLong told the busload of students what it will take if any are interested in going into engineering and coming to work at KMR.

"It's at least one college degree," DeLong said. "Second, experience in radars ... Third, a desire to be on a team that's the best ... last, the desire to keep wanting to learn."

"You don't have the degrees yet and the experience takes time, but if you can fill in those four bubbles, that's what we do here regularly," DeLong said.

On Saturday evening during a picnic between the students and KMR staff at Camp Hamilton, Jones will present certificates to each participating student, recognizing that they have completed the orientation course.

"I would like to see this as an annual event," Jones said. "I'm getting a lot of great feedback ... [the students] are on the edge of their seats."

Whether students pick engineering or another field to focus on, Szczepanski recommended that they find something they like to do and pursue it.

"I think the luckiest thing you can do in your life is to find some work that you like to do," Szczepanski said. "You'll do it better, you'll do more of it and you'll be more satisfied."

"Keep in the back of your mind that very few decisions in life are irreversible," he added. "Make a choice what you want today and move down the road."

Basketball season enters homestretch

By Bruce Sinkula
Sports Writer

As basketball season heads into the homestretch, some teams are jockeying for play-off spots while others are playing out the few games that remain on their schedule.

In the Men's A division, Spartans I Boys (8-2) have the inside track on the top seed with the Earth Pigs (7-3) close behind in second place. Primetime (3-6) and the Mavericks (1-8) are in third and fourth place, respectively. These teams will play a total of 12 games before all four teams head into a single-elimination tournament.

Kaurur JaJa (8-1) and Blood Brothers (6-1) have separated themselves from the rest of the Men's B division teams. The top four teams will square off before the championship game.

The Men's C division is arguably the most balanced and competitive basketball league, with every team tasting victory — and defeat — at least once. This eight-team league will split into two four-team divisions.

Group 4 (6-1), CMI Boys (5-2), HB Monnin (4-3) and Nameless (4-3) will play each other one more time in the C+ sub-division. The two teams with the best overall records will play each other in the championship game.

The C- sub-division promises to be very competitive with Supply System (3-4), Calvary Boys (2-4), Navigators (2-5) and the Stubbies (1-5) rounding out a balanced field. Similar to the C+ sub-division, these teams will play each other one more time. The two teams with the best overall records advance to the Men's C- championship game.

Rusty Family is Monday

Kwajalein Running Club's annual Rusty Family mini-triathlon is Monday. The race consists of a 500-yard swim, 10-mile bike ride and two-mile run.

Mandatory pre-registration deadline is Thursday. Forms are available at the mini-mall porch bulletin board. For more information or to volunteer to help, call Bob or Jane Sholar at 51815.

Golf course holes 6-9 will close at 4:45 p.m. Monday for the biking portion of the race.

In the Men's D division, Spartans II Blue (6-2), Mosey (5-3) and Queen of Peace Men's II (4-2) are battling for the two spots available in this league's championship game. The Queen of Peace team will be busy, playing four games in eight days, with an important match-up against Spartans II Blue on Monday.

Nameless's Sweeney Lojka pulls up for a short jump-shot during Wednesday night basketball action. Nameless secured a spot in the C+ sub-division with an easy 77-43 victory over the Navigators.

Island Girls (5-2) and Spartans II Girls (4-3) round out the Women's A division. Although these teams must face each other one more time, WD 40 and Spartans I Girls have the inside track to slots in the Women's A division championship game.

Spartans III Girls (2-5), Fikima (2-5) and Wind-Ed (1-6) make up the Women's B division. The top two teams with the best overall records will square off in the championship game.

Field of Dreams (PG)

"Build it and they will come." That's the ethereal message that inspires Iowa farmer Ray Kinsella to construct a baseball diamond in middle of his cornfield. The ballfield is ordained to give a second chance to people who have sacrificed certain valuable aspects of their lives. (Kevin Costner, Ray Liotta, James Earl Jones) (106 minutes) Time is approximate. Movie follows the game between the Dyersville Ghost Players and Kwaj All-Stars.

A/C motor fire empties Reef BQ

By Peter Rejcek
Associate Editor

An early Thursday morning fire in the third floor mechanical room of the newly renovated Reef BQ emptied the building but did not cause any significant damage. No one was injured.

"It was fairly smoked up," said Assistant Fire Chief Ken Riley of the situation when the Fire Department arrived on the scene around 2 a.m. "Just about every fire detector on the third floor was going off."

The heavy smoke initially hampered efforts to find the source of the fire. At one point, firefighters had to break down new resident Scott Wentworth's BQ door as they searched the smoke-filled hallways.

The source of the fire was an indoor fan motor in the third floor air conditioning air handler

Kevin Bottomley, San Juan Construction project superintendent, said the reason for the motor's failure is under investigation. A representative from American Controls could be here as early as today to investigate the fire and check the other units of the building, Bottomley said.

A San Juan crew was working Thursday to install a new air conditioning motor to restore air flow to the third floor.

This is the second air conditioning motor at the Reef BQ to fail, said Ed Black, FOM mechanical/electrical superintendent. The first unit, located on a different floor, malfunctioned about a week before the building was turned over to USAKA, he said.
