Feline disease hits local cats

By KW Hillis
Associated Editor

Entering the Veterinary Clinic last week, the pungent smell of a feral cat was evident. Covered with sores, a huge pus pocket behind an ear, ear canals swollen from generations of ear mites and a distended belly full of worms; the mangy cat crouched in the corner of the animal trap.

"It's a hard life for these cats," said Margaret Morrison, Veterinary technician. "I bet when I test him, I'm sure he has feline AIDS because of the sores."

The feline immunodeficiency virus, or FIV, first appeared on-island in mid-March when an infected, domesticated boathouse cat was brought in by its owner. Since the disease can spread from cat to cat, Morrison is now testing each cat that is picked up. The Pest Management department, enforcing the USAKA pet regulation requiring pet cats to be kept inside, is placing humane animal traps all over the island to pick up stray cats.

When the cat from the boat house tested positive, "the owner said there are a lot of cats there that look kind of beat up," Morrison said. "We thought we should do research and test each cat. We don't really have a count of the number of FIV-infected cats yet, because we have just started to research the situation."

What Morrison has found is that diseased cats aren't located just on the industrial end of the island.

"What is alarming is ... now we're finding that strays in the housing area have feline AIDS as well," she said.

In a misguided attempt to save the feral cats, the traps have been tampered with, even destroyed, said Michael Nicholson, Pest Management lead. One person even sprang a trap,

Night Riders in the Sky

Despite cloudy skies, three re-entry vehicles lit up the evening sky over Roi Wednesday night. Leaving Vandenberg Air Force Base at 8:01 p.m., local time, the Minuteman RVs traveled over 5,000 miles, arriving here 28 minutes later.

Big turnover affects island

By Jim Bennett
Editor

From top down, the government and scientific advisor will see a heavy turnover this summer with a lot of institutional knowledge departing, but also a lot of new blood added to the mix.

"You lose good people but you gain good people; people with new perspectives and ideas. And that is what makes change healthy," said Col. Jerry Brown, USAKA commander.

He said the military accepts change and personnel transition as part of life.

Building 1010 workers gathered last week during a potluck lunch to honor and bid farewell to those leaving.

Among the departing are Lt. Col. Clarence Johnson, RTS commander, and Mohamed Abouzahra, MIT/LL site manager. Johnson will work for the assistant secretary of Acquisition, Logistics and Technology in the Pentagon, while Abouzahra returns to the Lincoln Laboratory in the Boston area. Lt. Col. Anne Daugherty will become the RTS commander July 24 and Dr. John Szczepanski will take over as MIT/LL site lead.

"He has honesty, integrity and correctness," Johnson said of Abouzahra. "He knows when to pull and when to pull back."

Chicago Cubs' Wrigley win wears out weary editor

Sunday, the sports world turned its collective eye to Chicago's Wrigley Field for the match-up between the Cubs and the evil New York Yankees and our friends at Armed Forces Network were good enough to carry the game.

For those of you who missed it at 5 a.m., let me recount the events surrounding what we'll call "the greatest game of the year."

The Cubs haven't played the Dark Forces since 1938, when the evil menace swept the Cubs in four games during the World Series. The Evil Ones went on to become the winningest franchise in baseball, led by He-Who-Should-Not-Be-Named Steinbrenner, while the Cubs returned to the series in 1945, but then nursed a 58-year slump perpetuated by fate, curses and management by a newspaper company.

Here's the set-up – Roger Clemens, 40 years old, is pitching for his 300th win wearing vile pinstripes after coming to the Wicked Ones from the Boston Red Sox, with a two-year stop in Toronto in between. The Depraved Ones-BoSox rivalry is historic and Clemens story would be akin to an Army hero leaving the military then re-enlisting in the Navy only to go on and win the Medal of Honor.

Meanwhile, the Cubs have put together a winning team with young pitching, fronted by fireballer Kerry Wood, who at 25, grew up admiring fellow-Texan pitcher Clemens. Wood is going for his 50th career win, another landmark.

Add in a corked-bat scandal surrounding MLB-loved Sammy Sosa, and you have the makings for a dramatic afternoon in Wrigley.

Scalper tickets run $1,100 a piece, but fortunately, AFN is free, if you're willing to get up at 5 a.m. I was.

5 a.m. – Alarm goes off. Quick, out of bed. Don't wake the wife. Dang it's dark. So this is what 5 a.m. looks like, huh. Now where's the $#@% remote?

5:10 a.m. – They should list when the coverage begins and when the game begins. How'd we get the Fox broadcast? Where are Chip Caray and Steve Stone? Sometimes, I hate corporate America.

5:30 a.m. – First inning, no runs, no hits, no errors. Wood and Clemens are en fuego. I guess if I want coffee, I've got to get up and make it.

6:00 a.m. – Some folks don't like a pitcher's duel. Not enough action, they say. I'm sorry, Wood just fired a 95mph fastball past Alfonso Soriano, one of the game's current great hitters, making him look like a chump. Maybe I'll make some coffee.

6:30 a.m. – It's the fourth inning and rookie first-baseman Hee Seeop Choi collides with Wood going for an infield fly. Choi smacks his head against the baseline and is out cold. We've got doctors and an ambulance on the field. The Korean kid is 24; 6-foot, 5-inches tall; and weighs 240 pounds. Very scary stuff.

Wood is OK, but obviously shaken. (Choi was treated for a serious concussion, and will be all right. He is, however, on the 15-day DL.) Hey, is that light from behind the curtains?

7:00 a.m. – Wood gives up a one-run homer by Japanese slugger Hideki Matsui. Matsui is riding pine on my fantasy ball team, so this does me no good, and gives Devil's Spawn a 1-0 lead. What's worse it came after umpire Laz Diaz missed what should have been Matusi's third strike. I used to think umpiring mistakes evened out in a game. Never again. Diaz should be shot. I should make some coffee, and maybe, breakfast for the wife and kid. Have it ready when they get up.

7:10 a.m. – Broadcaster Kevin Kennedy, former BoSox manager, is interviewing Debbie Clemens, the knave pitcher's wife. Oh brother, let's get back to the game. Can someone please get a hit off this guy?

7:15 a.m. – Seventh inning, Is the evil team's manager Joe Torre a Cubs fan? He's pulling Clemens with two on, one out and Eric Karros coming to the plate. Karros replaced Choi. Torre is putting in Juan "My ERA is higher than my IRA" Acevedo.

7:16 a.m. – Karros sent Acevedo's first pitch into the bleachers. I'm punching the futon in silent exultation. Don't want to wake the wife and kid. Ow, the frame hurts, but I don't care. Clemens won't get win 300 in Wrigley. To heck with him and the villainous ones.

7:18 a.m. – Maybe I should make some coffee, and maybe, breakfast for the wife and kid. Have it ready when they get up.

7:30 a.m. – The Dark Forces have loaded the bases and slugger Jason Giambi is up. Wood is out of gas. We're bringing in set-up man Mike Remlinger ... Giambi's got a 3-2 count ... inside change-up, Giambi strikes out! Ow, #$$^ futon frame.

7:45 a.m. – Pour it on guys, two more runs score. Dare I say, "I smell victory?"

8 a.m. – Oh God, (Cubs closer) Borowski gave up a solo homer to start the evening. Evil guys are on first and third and the tying run is at the plate.

8:05 a.m. – Borowski gets 'em. The wicked team of the East has fallen. Wood gets number 50! Cubs Win! I need a new futon! Maybe I should make some coffee, and maybe, breakfast for the wife and kid. Have it ready when they get up. Too late, they're up.

Cubs win! Cubs win!
I'm exhausted. I need to go back to bed.

Alcohol: The good, the bad and the ugly side

By KW Hillis
Associate Editor

The good news is that some people may benefit from alcohol; the bad news is that even moderate use can result in short-term or long-term health problems for some people. The ugly news about alcohol misuse on Kwajalein is that it accounts for many accidents and worse.

"I would say as much as a third of our after-hours, nighttime emergency visits, one way or another has some relationship with alcohol," said Dr. Eric Lindborg, Kwajalein Hospital Chief Medical officer. Besides falls and road rashes from people riding bikes under the influence, a few people have been brought in semi-comatose from excess drinking who fortunately recovered.

"But probably some of the significant accidents and occasional deaths in the moderate alcohol intake," Lindborg said, explaining that moderate is defined as two or less drinks a day. "Alcohol is a lot like other medications when appropriately dosed it can be of benefit, but even at appropriate doses there are some people who will have bad problem."

A standard drink or appropriate dose, according to Employee Assistance provider Marion Ruffing, is equal to one 12-ounce bottle of beer or wine cooler, one five-ounce glass of wine or 1.5 ounces of 80-proof liquor. All of those equal 12 grams of pure alcohol.

"It is the same chemical substance," Lindborg said. "It will have the same impact on your body regardless of the medium by which it is taken in ...When you move into higher doses you end up increasing risks for both short-term and long-term side effects."

The information about the benefits should not be taken as a prescription "to start drinking because there are also some problems," he said. "People who have a history of alcohol problems or even a family history of alcoholism would perhaps be best to just stay away from alcohol altogether."

People with diabetes should stay away from alcohol because it is a carbohydrate which affects blood sugar, said Valerie Janikowski, Out-Patient Department nurse manager. Filling up on alcohol instead of eating properly reduces proper nutrition.

"For those with diabetes, blood sugar cannot be maintained without a proper diet," she said.

One major caveat to any possible health benefits from one or two drinks a day is for people under 18 to 20 years old, Lindborg said.

"Just as other medicines will have a different impact on kids, alcohol is the same story," he said. "There is far more possibility for long-term damage and short-term problems as well if someone is under 18 to 20 years old."

Adolescents who abuse alcohol can even delay puberty and slow bone growth, Ruffing said.

Bleeding ulcers or gastritis and liver problems are the two biggest medical conditions seen on Kwajalein associated with excessive alcohol.

The bleeding ulcers or gastritis can be the result of chronic intake or infrequent binge drinking, he said. Even a person who only drinks once a month, if they drink to excess they can have health problems.

While drinking in moderation may be good for some people, for others, including teens, it can lead to health problems.

"I've seen liver problems that ultimately can move into liver failure or cirrhosis," he said. Since the liver's function is to remove toxins, excess drinking can overwhelm the liver so it can't perform its work in metabolizing normal nutrients.

A handful of esophageal and gastric cancers associated with too much alcohol were discovered here in the past 20 years, he said. Long-term abuse can result in many diseases and even problems with the brain. Cat scans and MRIs on chronic alcoholics show they have less brain mass because it has atrophied.

Alcohol can affect more than health, it can affect work performance.

People don't show up at work, show up late or show up with alcohol on their breath, he said. With the last, even if the alcohol doesn't affect your performance, "it leaves your performance questionable."

Impaired judgment from too much alcohol is a prime impact resulting in many automobile accidents in the states, he said.

"Out here it may result in saying the wrong thing to the wrong person at the wrong time," Lindborg added.

For those who question if they have a problem with alcohol can take the Cage questionnaire (see box at left).

For confidential help call Ruffing, 55362; Kwajalein Hospital, 52224; or Alcoholics Anonymous, 51143.

past on Kwajalein are directly attributable to alcohol," he said.

The misuse of alcohol is also seen here in long-term and short-term health problems like bleeding ulcers or gastritis and liver problems, he said. Although recent medical literature has pointed to health benefits for some people who imbibe a moderate amount of alcohol, the key words are "moderate" and "some," Lindborg pointed out.

"If you look at the medical literature, although it doesn't please some clinicians, there actually is some evidence that some people may live longer and or have fewer cardiovascular problems with

KRS awards scholarship to former graduate

By Jim Bennett
Editor

A day after Kwajalein Junior/Senior High School students walked across the stage to accept their diplomas, KRS President Carmen Spencer handed out another $10,000 company scholarship to employee Pauline Alfred.

Alfred, a 2001 Kwajalein Junior/Senior High School graduate, attended Hawaii Pacific University for a year and a half, but ran out of money. She returned to the island and currently works at the range's technical library.

"The best thing you can do is go out and get your education. Then after you graduate return here and there will be a job for you," Spencer said. "We want you to come home."

Spencer has put a priority on educating and employing Marshallese workers in an effort to improve opportunities, devoting $30,000 in scholarships to Marshallese students and children of employees. Besides two $10,000 scholarships to any stateside university, the company gave out four $2,500 scholarships to the College of the Marshall Islands.

"We're very grateful to KRS for the support," said Helbert Alfred, Pauline's father.

"It's a really good opportunity," Alfred said of her scholarship.

Alfred will pair the scholarship with a year-long public affairs internship with USAKA, which she starts this month. With that experience and saved money, Alfred hopes to complete her degree in public affairs.

PCSing residents stay connected to Kwajalein ...

"He would find the most eloquent and diplomatic ways to tell me I'm doing something braindead," added Brown.

Johnson presented Abouzahra with a framed collage of the RTS photos and a framed MIT/LL guidon, teasing the site manager with a reference to his status as MIT/LL "commander." Brown went one step further, authorizing the naming of the telemetry building on Telemetry Hill after Abouzahra.

Abouzahra said he's worked with three USAKA commanders and two range commanders this tour.

"It's been a great tour," he said. "We've accomplished a lot," he added referring to the Kwajalein Modernization and Remoting project completed over the past five years.

Abouzahra went on to present Johnson with a plaque.

But MIT/LL also loses three others in Robert Kennedy, Scott Coutts and Kevin Cohen, who worked on the KMAR program, Kwajalein Mission Control Center upgrades and visualization programs.

"When we used to follow a mission, all we'd see were little dots," Johnson said. "It's the 21st century and I can go get a PlayStation and get better graphics than that. I gave MIT the challenge and they rose to meet it."

On the Army side of the range, Maj. Diana Hansen and Paul Hester will leave.

Hansen, the range executive officer, will head to SMDC headquarters in Huntsville. She previously worked on Theater Missile Defense missions, particularly an attempt to garner THAAD for the range, which did not work out.

"We did a lot of good, though we lost the program," Hansen said. "We changed the mindset of a lot of folks at [Missile Defense Agency]. Now MDA is looking at us for other programs."

More recently, she worked on communications projects such as high speed internet and expanded television service.

"She's a quiet leader," Johnson said. "And she's tenacious, which makes her tough."

Hester, a mission tester, earned "Tester of the Year" honors by the National Defense Industrial Association and spoke of how Johnson and Barraclough picked him up when he was down, mentoring him to that success.

"I worked the hardest of my life, and had to," he said. "I couldn't do anything less working with people like you."

Meanwhile, Dianne Atchley will move from managing the range's finances to managing the USAKA budget.

Leaving USAKA are Lt. Col. Brett Barraclough, Directorate of Plans, Training and Operations chief, along with Maj. Matt Reed, CW4 Brent Hohbach and CW3 Ron Kurth, all from the Directorate of Logistics and Community Activities.

Barraclough served at the range before moving over to the command.

"He took the [Ground-based Midcourse Defense] program to another level," Johnson said.

Reed has served on the island for four years as chief of the directorate, while Hohbach and Kurth served as evaluators for aviation and marine departments, respectively.

Brown said he's proud of USAKA soldiers' and civilian employees' contributions to the USAKA and KRS team.

"All of our departing personnel, military and civilian, leave here with a special connection to Kwajalein and we will always have a special connection to them," Brown said. "We will miss these four outstanding soldiers in both the workplace and in the community. I know they will make a positive impact in their gaining organizations and Kwajalein is better because of their time served here."

Disease emphasizes need to keep cats inside ...

put a beer can in it and left a note supposedly written by the cat.

Residents who tamper with the traps, don't report stray cats, feed them or let their own cats roam outside may want to think about if they are hurting or helping.

After sedating the cat which was caught by building 1008, Morrison gently removed the cat from the cage to examine it. The telltale FIV signs of unhealed, long-term wounds covered the head and side of the young cat's body.

"They get bit and they can't heal up from the wounds. They suffer terribly," she said.

If a FIV test is positive, there is no cure and it is a terrible way to die, Morrison said. Feral animals and those with diseases must be put down, according to USAKA's pet regulation, which is designed to keep local pets healthy.

"This has got to be hurting him," she said looking at the cat's swollen, scratched hairless patch two inches in diameter below his ear. "I hate to put him down, but I feel so sorry. He is in so much pain."

Nicholson said when a stray is found, he and Morrison look at domestic cat photos, which Morrison keeps on each pet cat on-island, just in case it doesn't have FIV and can be given back to the owner.

"We pull the list out and look at each one in the book," he said. "I have even called owners myself to see if it is their cat."

Since the beginning of the year, 20 cats, many with FIV, have been put down including the domestic cat that alerted the island to the problem.

The boat house area seems to be a hot bed for the disease, since three cats have been trapped in that area and all three had FIV, Nicholson said.

The size of the feral population on island is difficult to judge since they are all black and white and two people on opposite sides of the island reporting a stray cat may be reporting the same cat, Morrison said.

"They roam hunting for food, and that's why people shouldn't feed their cats anything outside because the stray cats are looking for food," she said.

Pet cats trying to fight the intruder can get bitten because the stray cat is

Veterinary technician Margaret Morrison examines a sedated feral cat for signs of feline immunodeficiency virus or FIV including wounds that won't heal. The cat, caught near building 1008, was tested and turned out to have the disease which is spread cat to cat. Alerted to the disease, cat owners are reminded to keep their cats inside.

starving, she said. Stray cats also get bit by dogs when they go into fenced yards containing dogs.

A resident recently call Morrison about a stray cat that she found on her front porch.

"Her first instinct was to feed it, until she realized it had been bit by a dog," Morrison said. "The ones you can get close to are terribly sick. If they bite you, you could have a problem since 80 percent of cat bites become infected."

"The natural instinct is for someone to feed a stray cat," said CW3 Wiley Blanton, USAKA Medical evaluator. "But animals are supposed to be in the house or in a fenced yard or on a leash. It's up to the owner to make sure the pet doesn't get out of the yard."

Which is a good idea because Pest Management has traps out all over the island, she said.

As to people who think their cats just sit outside on the porch, Morrison said that isn't the case.

"No cat just sits on the porch," she said. Proving her point, she said that she has been getting complaints from neighbors of cat owners saying the cats are defecating in their yards.

"People have to pick up after their dogs, so they need to make sure the cats go in the house. Also, cats are healthier if they are kept inside."

Domestic cat owners and residents who pet or feed stray cats need to know that just because a cat looks healthy doesn't mean it is, she said.

"It is only in advanced stages they look sick. I've had cats come in the cages that don't look sick but have FIV," she said.

Stray cats not only live a hard, short painful life, they also are the only animals on island "that sustain fleas in the wild," Nicholson said. He added that no fleas have been found on captured rats.

A final fact to consider is that a resident, at the discretion of the commander, can be barred for destroying government property such as the traps or face penalties for not following the regulation about animals, Blanton said.

Of the cat brought in last week, "the cat tested positive," Morrison said the next day.

Summer Fun soccer is high energy fun

By Kim Parker

Contributing Writer

Summer Fun soccer kicked off this week, fielding five teams in fast-paced, non-stop action with rolling substitutions and two 25-minute halves which make for exciting, typically high scoring games sessions.

Though many basic soccer fundamentals remain the same, pull over the Volvo because "speed soccer" isn't exactly your Mom's game, according to Scott Pratt, Community Activities Adult Athletics Supervisor.

Calvary United, Da Kine Kids, Give & Go, Ignint Sucka Chumps and Viva Las Vegas round out the league, playing Tuesday and Thursday evenings in the month-long session.

Five players per side use the walls, other players, and anything else possible to negotiate the soft fuzzy ball around the small space inside the CRC gym, which serves as the soccer pitch.

"Our indoor soccer is different than other indoor leagues," Pratt said. "We try to always keep the ball below the shoulders."

It's not just a suggestion, it's a rule, and repeatedly breaking it can land a player in the penalty box and give the opposing team a power play, he said.

In addition to the shoulder height limit, offsides don't exist in this league, tiny goals are used, and no goalkeepers are allowed.

Spectators are allowed inside the CRC, but are asked not to sit on the bleachers, according to Pratt.

Award

Kyle D. Benoit, attending Camden Military Academy in South Carolina, was promoted to corporal and given the Gold Star Award for average grades of 90 or higher in the last semester.

Benoit, son of Steve and Diane Morris of Kwajalein, finished his seventh grade year as number one in a class of 20 students.

Join in the fun under the lights Ultimate frisbee launched

From staff reports

Flying saucers take over Brandon Field on Friday night at 7:30 p.m. as Ultimate Frisbee starts under the lights.

"Everyone is more than welcome to come early and practice throwing the Frisbee around," said Scott Pratt, Community Activities Adult Athletics supervisor. "It was a hit last year when we played every other Friday as part of summer fun."

Ultimate Frisbee is a team game combining elements of football, basketball and soccer. Scoring a goal by passing the Frisbee to a teammate in the opponent's end zone is the object of the game. Game rules will be discussed at 7:15 p.m. under the tent at Brandon Field.

Friday night the game will last until "fatigue kicks in," Pratt said.

Ultimate Frisbee will be played on Friday nights throughout the summer if there is interest, he said.

Other summer fun sports

Other more traditional sports will be available to weekend warriors and sports enthusiasts throughout the summer.

Marshalls Billfish Club's 22nd annual tournament Big-game fishing contest on tap

Majuro-tourney offers $10,000-plus in prizes

From staff reports

The 22nd annual Marshalls Billfish Club's July Fishing Tournament is scheduled for July 4-5.

The contest features two categories — trolling for marlin, tuna, wahoo, among other fish and bottom fishing for snappers, groupers and other bottom dwellers — awards cash and prizes for total pounds caught.

The tournament is held in conjunction with the Republic of the Marshall Islands National Fisherman's Day holiday, a day to honor all the Marshallese fisherman, according to the Marshall Islands Visitors Authority.

"They will be summer fun leagues — really relaxed," Pratt said.

Softball and indoor volleyball are on the board this summer through Community Activities.

fied leagues," Pratt said. "They are monthly leagues with the winning team declared at the end of each month.

Even residents who are off-island during part of the summer can participate.

"I don't have to have a roster," he said. "People can be picked up at the courts."

Men's and coed softball tournaments are June 22 - 23. Indoor volleyball starts July 2. See the roller and today's Hourglass ad for more information.

In 2001, a 719 pound Pacific Blue Marlin was caught during the tournament and it still holds the tournament marlin record.

The club offers a $10,000 prize for the tournament record marlin, MIVA said.

Marshalls Billfish Club is the biggest proponent of sports fishing in Micronesia and the Marshall Islands, which encompasses 700,000 square miles of ocean.

The club holds an average of 10 tournaments a year. The largest tournaments are the Annual July Fishing Tournament and the Mobil All-Micronesian Fishing Tournament held in August.

For more information on the tournament or on the Marshall Islands Billfish Club, e-mail billfish@ntamar.com.

Richardson down for repairs

By Loren Lindborg
Reporter

An overheated projector finally cancelled the Richardson Theater's showing of "Catch Me If You Can" midway through the movie after the audience experienced a variety of problems that plagued the movie screen.

"There are three problems," said Simone Smead, Community Activities manager. "Number one is lines criss-crossing the screen, two is the projector overheating, and three is a tracking issue."

The Rich, as it's more commonly known, was reopened in February after it was shut down about a year ago when a required upgrade of the projector and sound system proved too costly. Since then it has been upgraded with a new system and digital projection at a lesser cost than was first estimated.

"We're having the installation tech come take a look at Barco [the projector brand]," Smead said. "He will be working with the manufacturer."

The Richardson is closed this weekend and will remain closed until the problems are fixed.

Community Activities will get the problems solved as soon as possible, Smead said.

Join the team supporting America's troops

By Denise Brown
American Forces Press Service

WASHINGTON — "Uncle Sam Wants You" is a familiar recruiting slogan to generations of Americans. But in this case, it's an invitation for all Americans to sign up for a different kind of military operation.

Operation Tribute to Freedom, a Defense Department initiative, is a way for Americans to show their continuing support for the nation's military men and women and share with the Defense Department the different ways in which individuals and communities are expressing this support.

"We receive calls and emails all the time asking, 'What can I do to support the troops?'" said Allison Barber, special assistant to the assistant secretary of defense for public affairs. "People want to know what they can do to help."

Americans across the country are already involved in activities showing support for the men and women in uniform,

Barber said. "If you're flying the flag, going to a parade, writing an e-mail to the troops or visiting the DefendAmerica.mil Web site to send a thank you to the troops, all of these activities are part of Operation Tribute to Freedom."

Many individual groups have started their own grassroots campaigns or outreach campaigns for the troops, she said. Operation Tribute to Freedom is a way to bring these individuals, groups and companies together as part of one team.

"You're already doing the activities, so join the team and keep supporting the troops," Barber said, adding that joining the team is an ideal way for Americans to stay connected with men and women in uniform.

"To join the team, just go to our Operation Tribute to Freedom Web site on www.DefendAmerica.mil, select 'Join the Team,' fill in your name, and tell us what you're doing to pay tribute to the men and women of the military."
