Chili cook-off scores major success; censorship stinks

The week that was:

The Roi Rats rolled out the red carpet Sunday for the Roi Chili Cook-off and hats off to the organizers.

I boarded the catamaran with the wife, kid 1 and 179 other Kwajers. Fortunately, we'd packed breakfast sandwiches and camped out at the Dock Security Checkpoint from 7:45 a.m. till the boarding time. A lot of folks didn't make the boat, but I guess Aviation flew an additional plane up to help out.

In defense of the organizers, they'd only sent four planes two years ago, so who would've guessed this year's event would double, or nearly triple in attendance?

And what an event. Arriving on Roi-Namur, busses waited to transport folks to the event which resembled a carnival more than anything, complete with vendors, games for the kids and an all-too-welcome pool to cool things off. The RC car races entertained leading up to the chili judging.

By now, many of you probably have read the oft-sent e-mail journal written by some Yankee who judged a Texas chili contest, and I won't repeat the same holy-cow-this-stuff-is-hot jokes. But I think it's no irony, today's Marshallese Word of the Day is bwil, or hot.

Truth be told, I only encountered about three chilis that burned my tongue, singed my nose hairs and essentially caused me to drool like a Nazgul horse from The Lord of the Rings movies. Fellow judges will remember Number 15 if for no other reason than the recurring reminders the rest of the weekend.

What struck me was the variety presented. I had one chili that actually had bits of corn in it, which added a very nice sweet flavor. I found another chili that had yellow bits that looked like corn, but turned out to be Thai peppers. That would be one of the three mentioned above, and I'm not too proud to say, I wept.

Other judges and I debated the merits of chopped steak or brisket versus traditional ground-beef-type meat.

Even the two-year-old, kid 1, got into the act, dancing the hot dance and reaching for daddy's beer after tasting a particularly spicy cup. We redirected her to her Gatorade.

From there, we joined the crowd at the dunking booth, watching Cowboy Galloway throw a record five consecutive dunk balls against Joe Marshall, with a $10 donation riding on one pitched ball. Galloway pitches for my ball team the Barnacles, and I've played with him for the last five years. Needless to say, I wasn't surprised. The guy, when he's on, places the ball like Greg Maddux.

Galloway took his turn in the booth, allowing Marshall to return the favor and dunk him.

What followed next is a blur of a giant pool party with pies in faces, some fetching more than $2,000 in donations one pie — an amazing display of comradery and generosity.

And now for the bad news...

Seems we've seen some Letters to the Editor lately, which is great. Some thanked deserving co-workers, others questioned commentaries and stories and another backed a commentary.

Frankly, I was glad to see some letter action. It represents folks taking advantage of the open forum we have here, which incidentally, is supported by the command and, higher up, the Office of the Chief of Public Affairs at the Pentagon.

But perhaps the most telling letter is a letter that never ran.

The writer questioned police practices, which is fine. I didn't necessarily agree with every point, though some made me think. We're all subject to scrutiny, and if he can make a point without calling folks names, then I'm all for the discussion. But the writer wrote me back the next business day asking to pull the letter because he'd been advised, by whom I don't know, that publishing the missive would be detrimental to his time on Kwajalein.

Honestly, I don't doubt that, though I'm saddened by it.

When we can no longer discuss community issues in an open forum — whether it's this forum, public events, whatever — that forum ceases to be an effective tool. I'm not talking about complaints about loud neighbors and trite queries about getting ESPN added to our TV lineup. I'm talking about issues that affect all of us — how our island community lives, thrives and survives.

Whether censorship comes from public pressure, a boss, friend or co-worker, the message is the same, "shut up and play ball, or face the consequences."

But then I guess we can't talk about that ...

If you still want to write a letter to the editor, the rules are simple: 300 words or less, must be signed, keep all comments to the issue; no name calling and limit yourself to one letter every 30 days. We will edit for AP style, and if necessary, space.

Send all letters to: P.O. Box 23, Local; or jbennett@kls.usaka.smdc.army.mil.

The Hourglass is named for the insignia of the U.S. Army 7th Infantry Division, which liberated the island from the forces of Imperial Japan on Feb 4, 1944.

The Kwajalein Hourglass is an authorized publication for military personnel, federal employees, contractor workers and their families assigned to USAKA. Contents of the Hourglass are not necessarily official views of, or endorsed by, the U.S. Government, Department of Defense, Department of the Army or USAKA. It is published Tuesdays and Fridays in accordance with Army Regulation 360-1 and using a network printer by Kwajalein Range Services editorial staff, P.O. Box 23, APO AP 96555.

Correction

In the Sept. 16 issue, The Hourglass misidentified the Air Command Headquarters on Roi-Namur by the common, but incorrect name of the Japanese or Commander's Headquarters. The Hourglass also implied archaeologist Leslie Mead discovered 120 historical structures by stating she located them. They were, in fact, first found by other researchers, Mead said.

Schools prep for accreditation review

By Jan Waddell
Reporter

The school system will get marks of its own, soon.

The North Central Association committee for accreditation of the Kwajalein schools will visit in February 2004.

NCA last visited during the 1997-98 school year, and set four educational goals for the school system and for students.

The NCA covers 17 Midwest schools as well as the Department of Defense schools and some private schools.

Kwajalein schools have been accredited since the 1960's, according to Barbara Bicanich, NCA chairperson for Kwajalein schools.

"It [NCA] gives us a guideline to work from," Bicanich said.

Over the years, the NCA has broadened the scope of input for the education guidelines. It used to be only teachers who had input into the NCA process. About seven years ago the NCA included students' education goals and parents concerns to help improve schools, Bicanich said.

The four goals picked, during the last accreditation, were Responsible Learners, Life-Long Learners, Technology and Effective Communicators.

The first goal implemented by the Kwaj school system was Technology. Teachers first trained on computers and computer programs, then computers and the use of them were "integrated in to the curriculum," Bicanich said.

Students were taught the use of e-mails and the Internet along with programs such as Word, Excel, PowerPoint and Webpage building. They were then taught to apply these programs in the classroom such as Internet search engines and spread sheets.

The guideline implemented next was the Responsible Learner and Life-Long Learner goals. These two goals were combined into one.

Students were taught to be responsible for their class attendance, preparation for class, follow through on assignments and compliance with due dates. They were also held accountable for completed assignments, even though they might be on vacation.

They learned how to acquire information, organize, evaluate and use their time and sources efficiently.

Effective Communicator is the final goal which the Kwajalein school system is still working with students on.

This goal was broken into two parts, one being writing and the other being oral.

In the writing part of the education goal, students are required to use writing skills in all classes. Correct use of punctuation, sentence structure and proper English is applied to all classes even math and physical education, where the students are required to write different reports, Bicanich said.

Since the last evaluation, two writing samples per student, per year were filed for the accreditation committee's review.

In the oral portion of Effective Communicator the students are also required to give two speeches per class each year.

This helps students to learn the elements of speech and how to give speeches, since there isn't a formal speech team here, Bicanich said.

The committee will be on Kwajalein for four to five days reviewing the progress of the goals from the last accreditation.

They will talk to teachers and students and review the survey that was sent last April to each Kwajalein school system parent, Bicanich said. They will also review the progress of the goals set from the last accreditation.

The committee will brief the Kwajalein community on their findings before they leave, Bicanich said.

They will set another group of goals for the Kwajalein school system to implement into the school program, she added.

At the elementary school level technology will continue to be an educational goal, and in the junior/senior high school writing will be stressed along with the new guidelines.

Kwaj students earn scholarship bids

Two Kwaj high school seniors received notification from the National Merit Scholarship program and National Principal's Leadership Award Program that they were being considered for scholarships.

David Barbella received a letter stating he was a semifinalist in the 2004 National Merit Scholarship Program.

Barbella is among the 16,000 semifinalist nationwide chosen to compete in the finals for some 8,000 Merit Scholarships worth $2,500 each.

In order for a student to qualify for the program the student must achieve a PSAT score in the top one-half percent of all other student in the school. The cut off at Kwajalein Jr./Sr. High is 222, according to Bob Amman Kwajalein Jr./Sr. High School counselor. The most a student can score on the PSAT is 240.

The student must also submit an essay along with the application. Finalists are announced early next spring.

Tanya Corder received a nomination for the National Principal's Leadership Award Scholarship.

Nominees are selected based on leadership skills, participation in service organizations and clubs, achievements in the arts and sciences and their academic record.

Corder is in competition for one of the 150 national scholarships. The winners of the scholarship will receive $1,000 and will be announced next spring.

Some MMR restrictions lifted

From Staff Reports

Deputy Garrison Commander Les Jones approved lifting a requirement to show proof of MMR immunization for intra-atoll travel, this week.

The restriction for international travel, however, stands and anyone under 40 leaving Kwajalein Atoll must show a proof of immunization before boarding an aircraft at Bucholz Army Airfield.

Army's catamaran makes a splash in deployment

By Staff Sgt. Nate Orme, USA

Special to American Forces Press Service

CAMP ARIFJAN, Kuwait — Sliding out of port on the Army's experimental heavy-lift catamaran, the U.S. Army Vessel Spearhead, peering out the window is almost the only way to get a sense of motion.

Hardly the sail-driven skateboard-on-water of popular imagination, this diesel-engine catamaran always keeps both keels in the water while hauling heavy payloads of equipment, personnel and vehicles.

The Spearhead, hull number TSV-1X, which stands for "Theater Support Vessel - 1st Experimental, still bears a few reminders of its nine-year civilian past as a high-speed ferry between the Australian mainland and Tasmania. Most notably, there's the blue-and-rainbow-speckled carpet and passenger seating in the main-deck cabin. The large blue sunroof doesn't exactly shout "military" either. But standing in front of the docked craft, one could hardly mistake it for a civilian cruise ship.

The vessel's exterior is a glimmering silver, its aluminum skin left unpainted to save 9 tons of weight in paint. In fact, nearly the entire frame is aluminum, a material chosen over steel for its lightweight and rust resistance. The vessel's military-civilian hybrid appearance is a result of remodeling that was put on hold because the craft was needed in the Persian Gulf in preparation for Operation Iraqi Freedom.

The Spearhead is the latest catamaran with which the military has been experimenting for the last two years after seeing similar craft operated by the Australian navy during the East Timor crisis in 1999 and 2000.

The high-speed vessel HSV-X1 Joint Venture, built by Incat Ltd. in Australia — as was the Spearhead — is being leased from the company by the Navy and Army in a joint venture. Until recently, U.S. Central Command also used it in Operation Iraqi Freedom.

The HSV-X1 visited Kwajalein in July 2002 during a return from duty in Operation Enduring Freedom.

Future catamarans for the military are planned to be built by Bollinger-Incat USA in New Orleans. The Army plans to deploy up to 17

TSVs around the world by 2011.

The Spearhead is an all-Army endeavor, operated by the 469th Transportation Detachment, Fort Eustis, Va. Last fall, a crew of Army sailors went to Hobart, Tasmania, to train on the vessel before sailing it to the Persian Gulf. One initial training crew member was Sgt. Victor Rondon III, a watercraft engineer.

Rondon said Army engineers have to be versatile.

"We maintain the engine, hydraulics, electrical system — whatever it is, you name it, we fix it.

It keeps us busy. It's a lot of work, but we learn a lot," Rondon said. "We even make our own water, using reverse osmosis. We can make about 15 gallons per minute converting sea water to fresh water," he added.

The four-engine, 98-meter TSV has significantly more advanced engines and generators compared to the HSV, said Anthony Dasig, a TSV engineer. Dasig said the TSV is faster and holds more cargo than the HSV.

Compared to the longtime Army workhorse vessel — the LSV, or Logistical Support Vessel, the TSV is four times faster at over 40 knots and can carry a more voluminous, though less heavy load, Dasig said.

After training in Hobart, the 31-member crew sailed the vessel to the Persian Gulf in December. Except for one month for maintenance, it has been in continuous service, logging more than 50,000 nautical miles (57,500 statute miles).

TSV missions have included hauling two Patriot missile battalions from Qatar to the Kuwaiti naval base in a joint effort with the LSVs in theater.

The TSV also moved the 101st Airborne Division military police from Djibouti to Kuwait, making the 2,000-mile trip in two and a half days. The LSV would have needed 10 days to make the voyage and could only hold equipment, requiring the troops to fly separately, said Chief Warrant Officer Bill Slusher, the TSV navigation officer. The TSV also carried 500 tons of ammunition from Jordan's Aqaba Port to Kuwait.

Since the vessel is experimental, the Army wants to know how it has performed in theater. Both enlisted and officer crew members meet regularly to conduct after-action reviews of the vessel's performance.

"We're basically the crew to say whether to keep it or scrap it," said Rondon. "We get together with the officers and come up with solutions instead of just saying something doesn't work."

Slusher said, "Operationally, the boat the Army ultimately wants will be bigger. The goal is to carry two Stryker units. This one (the Spearhead) carries only one."

The Stryker is a new eight-wheeled, 20-ton armored troop carrier designed to replace older tracked vehicles.

Slusher said minor modifications would be made to the TSV crew berthing. And, of course, the rainbow carpet would have to go.

The TSV is more like an aircraft than an LSV when calculating for cargo, said Chief Warrant Officer Patrick May, the TSV commander, known as the vessel master. "When we carry more fuel for longer distances, we have to carry less cargo.

Sept. 26, 2003

TSV takes transport to next level ...

With an LSV, it's not necessary to take that into account."

Another difference from the LSV is docking. With a shallow draft of 3.4 meters, the TSV can get into ports an LSV cannot. It also can unload its cargo from directly astern or at up to a 45-degree angle off its rear corner if necessary.

May, who skipped an LSV for much of his 19-year military career, explained how the TSV is docked compared to an LSV.

"On an LSV, when docking and undocking, a sailor yells commands to the helmsman. With the TSV, we lose sight of the pier within 25 meters, so we have docking cameras and spotters on the stern and bow. I use a joystick to dock the vessel. It is a very maneuverable craft, once you get used to it."

The vessel has cameras in the engine rooms, as well as 900 sensors continuously monitoring the vessel's systems. The TSV has about twice as many sensors as an LSV, yet with the same size crew.

Shifts on the TSV are four hours on, eight off, said 1st Sgt. Michael Kelly, a senior navigator with the 469th. Since the ship was originally designed for fairly short trips in a much cooler climate than Kuwait, where summer temperatures often are in the 120s, maintenance has been high, according to Kelly.

"There is always a roving engineer on duty down below deck. We have an alarm about every other day. Usually it's a sensor tripped because of the heat, but we're required to check it out," Kelly said.

"Heat has taken its toll here, especially on the air-conditioning system and refrigerators."

Kelly explained the 469th is a self-contained unit, as is the crew of the TSV. "All the administration functions a regular unit would have, we do as well," he said. "We have e-mail, fax and phone capabilities onboard."

Kelly, with 21 years as an Army sailor, has nearly completed traveling around the world in Army watercraft. He will complete the last leg of his circumnavigation when the TSV returns to Hobart in November for further modifications.

Center plans Mani Day celebration

By Jim Bennett
Editor

Kwajalein residents will recognize the Marshallese culture on Mani Day, Monday.

An official Republic of the Marshall Islands holiday, the day is set aside annually as "a celebration of Marshallese culture," said Cris Lindborg, director of exhibits at the Marshallese Cultural Center. "It's a chance to meet some of our neighbors and see how they live, or how they used to live."

Official events kicked off this week with school groups visiting the cultural center Tuesday and Thursday.

The main festivities, however, will kick off Monday.

Early in the morning, Marshallese women will gather at the center and begin weaving. Men will follow shortly afterwards and use the weaved panels to reconstruct the traditional Marshallese house at the center, which recently fell into disrepair by time and weather.

At 2 p.m., a variety of demonstrations and displays will open and remain open until 6 p.m. Marshallese will show how to make rope with coconut, start a fire with sticks, traditional fishing and navigation methods and making flower decorations, to name a few events.

At 7 p.m., at the Richardson Theater, dancers from Ebeye and Kwajalein will perform Marshallese dances, followed by a slide show of highlights from the Leonard DeBrum collection.

In recognition of the evening events, the Marine Department has adjusted the ferry schedule for the day with ferries departing Kwajalein at 8 p.m., 9 p.m., 10 p.m. and 12:30 a.m.

For new residents, the event offers a glimpse into the host nation, Lindborg said.

"Some people never get off Kwajalein to Ebeye, much less one of the outer islands," Lindborg said. "They never get to experience what the life of the Marshallese was or is like."

Roi Chili event cooks for kids

Event raises more than $10,000 for Enniburr Children's Christmas Fund

By KW Hillis
Assistant Editor

The Roi 4th Annual Chili cook-off drew a record 268 Kwajalein residents, thanks to both the Marine and Aviation departments, said Damon Brown, Enniburr Children's Christmas Fund vice-president.

"We hadn't anticipated that number of people. We figured 50 or 60 people on the boat," Brown said, explaining that at the last cook-off two years ago only 70 Kwajalein people made the trip by plane. Two additional planes were added Sunday for a total of four planes.

"Even with that number, people got left," he said. "It was a shame anyone got left out."

Next year, some type of reservation system for transportation will be worked out, Brown added.

The Kwaj arrivals — some carefully toting boxed chili, others radio-controlled vehicles, some children, and others just sunscreen and cameras — joined over 100 Roi residents for a full day of fun, games and food, raising a total of $10,450 from ticket, T-shirt and food sales and pledges for the dunking booth and pie toss, Brown said. As of Thursday morning, $2,350 in pledges from the total has not been turned in yet.

While the children enjoyed the blue slip and slide or the pool, adults prepared for the chili cook-off by buying T-shirts or cold beverages and chili made by Darren Wilburn. RC race car fans attended a rally.

Seven entries, many from Kwajalein, competed on a temporary race track built by Roi residents Ozzy Velez and Tom Drabek. Boy Scout Troop 135 members, in bright red shirts, manned the track's twists, jumps and turns; righting flipped cars.

The qualifying heats pitted father and son, teens and adults all against each other.

"It was really a good day," said RC car rally first place winner Wade Hogan. Hogan faced Matt Hatfield and Velez in the final.

"It was pretty close. They wrecked or vapor locked," Hogan said. "I was two laps ahead of Matt."

All three winners, Hogan, second place winner Hatfield and third place Velez donated their prize money back to the ECCF.

The chili contest didn't start exactly on time since a few of the entries were on a plane from Kwajalein, which was added at the last minute.

Two of those who got left on Kwajalein were chili entrants, so there were 26 chilies entered, Brown said.

"Last time 45 judged," he said. "This time close to 104 judges [who bought tickets], but only 76 judged. It was hard to stretch the chili out. Some were down to the bottom of the bowl."

As they went down the long line of chili dished out by volunteers, each judge's pizza tray filled with small cups of chili with names like Burning Ring of Fire and Cordon Bubba's Chili. The judges savored, winced, coughed and drank vast quantities of liquid to pick the first, second and third place choices for best chili.

"I understand one was really, really hot," Brown said, who admitted to tasting just the first and second place winners. "Maybe next year we'll have more categories."

Entry 21, "Young Hot Stuff" by Kerry Young, won first place by one vote over entry number 17, "No Name Chili" made by Jim Crouch III. Third place went to entry number 25, "Texas, Burn Down the House" entered by Milton Barnett.

A long-time chili entrant and frequent winner in the Kwajalein Yacht Club chili cook-off since 1987, Crouch said that this was the first time he had entered the Roi contest.

"The reason I was able to do this was because of the boat," he said. Because the boat was full, he gave his chili to some friends on the boat and called Base Ops. "They put on another plane and I got manifested."

"It was really stiff competition," he said. "The commentator said it was closest ever between first and second place."

The dunking booth, with volunteers sitting on a precarious seat over a tank of water as friends, paying $1 a ball tried to hit an orange target and dunk the volunteer, was in full swing as the chili cook-off selections were totaled up.

"When Joe [Marshall] said he'd pledge $50 to see me up there, I couldn't say no," said Karen Campbell, a very wet dunking booth volunteer. "It's for a good cause."

Ironically, during the dunking booth part of the day, a brief rain shower wet everyone who wasn't under one of the red and white striped tents.

The last event of the day, the pie toss, is more accurately named the pie squash because each of the volunteers had pies made of whipped cream or shaving cream squashed in their faces and then stuffed in their shirts.

One by one, volunteers including Jeff Delong, Lewis Smith, Kevin Dykema and Joe Marshall, to name a few, sat in a chair as the amount of money pledged to see them hit in the face with a pie rose.

Jeff Delong commanded the highest pledge, at $2,100, Brown said.

"Most of the money of the day

Halton Paul puts a pie in Darren Wilburn's face. The pie throwing portion, traditionally the biggest fund-raiser of the event, raised a record more than $5,000 for the Ennibur Children's Christmas Fund.

comes from the pie toss and this one was not exception," he said. "Usually the total is about $3,000, but [on Sunday] it was over $5,000."

"It was very well-organized," said Sue Van Enger, chili cook-off volunteer who was surprised that there were so many people. "They even sold out of food at the food booth. There were more people because it was well-publicized, there wasn't one last year and there are a lot of new people."

The ECCF committee —president Stephania Cousins, vice-president Brown, treasurer Eric Rogers and secretary Glenn Studevart planned the event, Brown said, But "everyone came out of the woodwork" to help especially when Cousins left on emergency leave.

This money goes into the ECCF fund for the Christmas program for Third Island with some in reserve for other events, including a duck race held a couple weeks ago that raised $800, he said.

Said Brown, "We'll start working on [the Christmas program] ASAP, ordering Christmas gifts."

KRC plans holiday half and quarter marathon

From Staff Reports

Those who wish to run a quarter- or half-marathon can do so when Kwajalein Running Club hosts its 26th Annual Columbus Day Run—about at 6 a.m., Oct. 14.

Registration forms with race information are available at the Mini Mall Bulletin Board, according to Bob Sholar, KRC president. The club requires pre-registration by Oct. 11 to avoid a late registration fee.

Registered participants will receive custom commemorative T-shirts.

The course traverses the paved road perimeter of Kwajalein Island, starting and ending at Namo Weto Youth Center. One loop is 6.52 miles and two loops make 13.04 miles, Sholar said.

The majority of records date back a number of years, Sholar added.

Sholar holds the men's half-marathon record at 1:22:06, which he set in 1993. The second fastest men's time, 1:23:26 was set by Men's master's runner Dennis Fitzgerald in 1980. David Rehman clocked a 1:40:43 in 2000 for the 13-21-year-old group, and Kenny Jourdan set the under 13 record at 1:52:50 in 1983.

Local resident Sarah Greenbaum set the bar for women running in the open category at 1:37:24 in 2001. Laura Clark still holds the master's record of 1:43:03, set in 1991, while Cindy Ward set the under 21 record at 2:04:05 in 1981.

For the quarter mile, 1983 was a good year, with Scott Davis, running the 13-21 group, setting the all-groups record of 36:53. The same year, Sholar set the open division record at 39:10. Larry Moore still holds the master's record of 43:12, set in 1980, and Daniel Radcliffe holds the under 13 record of 45:16, set in 1984.

The women's quarter marathon belonged to the Homans in the 1980s with Jennifer Homan setting the under 13 record of 50:40 in 1983, followed by the 13-21 record of 52:54 in 1985. Carolyn Homan set the master's record of 51:02 in 1985. Brigid Shank set the open record of 43:33 in 1991.

For more information contact Sholar at 51815.

Playing cards remain an essential soldiers' rucksack item

By Pfc. Chris Jones

Special to American Forces Press Service

MOSUL, Iraq — Not everyone likes playing cards. Heck, why play a simple game of blackjack when you can cruise the streets in a tank in a popular video game?

“Well, you can’t pack a (video game system) in your ruck,” answered Spc. Virginia Brickner, Company C, 8th Battalion, 101st Aviation Regiment. “You can take cards anywhere, anytime. At night, all you need is a flashlight to keep playing,” she said, adding that she’s not good at video games anyway.

Smaller than an average wallet, a deck of cards is a truly convenient and portable form of entertainment.

“It doesn’t take batteries, doesn’t take time to set up, (it) fits anywhere, and it’s been around for so long that everyone knows at least one game,” said Sgt. Steve Magness, an engineer with Company A, 326th Engineers Battalion. “Cards bring people to a common ground.”

However, the secret to the success of playing cards may not be their simplicity; it may be in the versatility of a single deck.

“There’s no end to how much you can do with cards,” said Pfc. Joe Green, an engineer in Magness’ squad. “You can do anything with them. You can put them in a hat, plaster them to your head, do magic tricks. Cards are one of the most versatile things ever -- kind of like cheese.”

To some players, each card has a life of its own. Spc. Kieran Moore, a Combat Camera photographer with 982nd Signal Company, said if all 52 cards came to life, the joker would be the most popular.

“The king is stuck-up, the queen is scandalous, the jack is irritating,” Moore said. “Yeah, the jack would be ... the power-hungry, stab-you-in-the-back type. But the joker, he’s the life of the party -- the one who shows everyone a good time. He starts something on the sidelines, then walks away and leaves everyone laughing.”

Moore said the world of playing cards is a treacherous one. “When I see cards, I see chaos, randomness and luck,” Moore said. “I see the fake assumption of control and estimation.” Nevertheless, this world is one Moore cannot seem to keep out of.

The question remains: After all the technological advancements already surfacing in the early 21st century, can the card industry survive? Spc. Dave Stage, a cameraman in Moore’s unit, said he has no doubt about the fortitude of the industry.

“Cards will always be here,” Stage said. “We need them for self-survival and sanity.”
