Web site, Intranet, electronify island life

I've been asked to inform you that the latest customer satisfaction surveys are now available at the SMDC Web site, and among other things, you can now rate the Hourglass right there, online.

You can find the survey at www.awesomepaper.mil.

OK, maybe not, but it was worth a try.

The actual Web site is www.smhc.army.mil/RTS.html, and there you can rate everything from the Hourglass to AFN to the schools, hospitals, retail outlets and even Aviation. I particularly like question 3 on the Aviation survey:

"We did not make an unexpected landing on water – Strongly Agree, Agree, Disagree, Strongly Disagree."

The beauty of this system is that it allows anonymity or at least the best Kwajalein attempt at the concept. This also means I can give the Hourglass extremely high marks and glowing comments, like, 23 times in a given hour, or so I've heard.

They even leave a space for comments. Please, be sure and tell them you heard about the site from the Hourglass.

After that shameless plug, let me now observe that in the past six years, the survey serves as another example of how much of our lives, even out here on Kwajalein, has gone electronic.

The Intranet serves as another example, and I fully expect in some far off day when 99.5 percent of the population we serve has a computer, the Intranet will encompass, include or facilitate every survey on island, the Hourglass, the Roller, KRS Newline, the "on the next barge" list, menu specials, my wife's fifth grade class homework schedule, the Barnacles softball team roster and Ike Richardson's grocery list, to name a few items.

The upshot is that electrons are fairly cheap, and assuming everyone has a computer, you reach people where they're most likely to read the product. That's good communication strategy, and if they'll just add a link to the ESPN baseball page, I'll never go anywhere else.

But try as they might, the Intranet can not replace the meeting. Some are necessary, and others not so much, but meetings form the very backbone of our work-culture here, and no computer can change that.

Now, I'm the first guy to decry e-mail conversations where a face-to-face talk would work better. You pick up a lot from a person that doesn't come through electronically.

For example, last week, when my boss, Lloyd Jordan, sent me an e-mail, I naturally replied positively. But what Lloyd couldn't see or hear, as I hit the send icon with my right hand on the mouse, was me swearing vociferously, rolling my eyes and using my left hand to make other work-related gestures. So while we achieved an efficient result on the task, I'm not sure we fully communicated.

But that's all right, because I traced 23 customer survey answers back to his computer, and they all included the question and answer, "Editor should look for new job – Strongly Agree."

Now that's clear communication.

Daugherty stresses women's opportunities

By KW Hillis
Assistant Editor

Instead of celebrating famous women such as Madame Curie, Sacagawea and Eleanor Roosevelt during Women's History Month, Lt. Col. Anne Daugherty, RTS commander, honored women who aren't celebrated in history books and made the most of opportunities life presented — people like her grandmother.

"Great women don't have to be famous ... but their impact and influence on the people each of us becomes can be enormous," Daugherty said in her speech to Kwajalein Junior/Senior High School students on Thursday.

Up until the late '70s, history books in kindergarten to 12th grade held few, if any references to accomplishments by women throughout history. In 1978, in an effort to remedy that situation, an education task force in Somona County, Calif. held a Women's History Week. That initial history week led to a 1980 message from President Jimmy Carter encouraging recognition of women's contributions and finally to the first Joint Congressional Resolution declaring the week of March 8 as National Women's History Week. In 1987, Congress made March National Women's History Month. Now, in history books, women scientists, astronauts and writers share the pages.

In honor of National Women's History Month, tables are set up at Café Pacific, Café Roi, Macy's and Gimbel's with displays outlining the history of some influential women, said 1st Sgt. Dennis Neal. Neal described Daugherty as one such woman.

"[Daugherty] is the first woman to hold [the Range commander's] position," he said. "She is a pioneer."

Despite being the first female range commander, Daugherty doesn't see herself as a pioneer.

"I haven't had to break any ground," she said. Becoming the Range commander "was just a matter of eventuality. It was going to happen ... It's not that common yet though."

Each generation has had more opportunities and has made opportunities for the next generation, she said.

"Just about every woman has a chance to make a difference in the lives of people that follow, and some jobs just don't pay to do that," she said. "What you get for your awards are ... the pretty [child drawn] pictures for the fridge, which is a heck of an award, but it is not necessarily nationally recognized."

Pioneers who do open up opportunities for others may be a mother, grandmother, sister or aunt who "helped us get where we are, become what we are, either directly or indirectly, by helping us form as individuals, with character and strength to take on the world."

Daugherty said she was influenced by her grandmother, who despite having to live with her grandparents because her parents were too poor to care for her, took advantage of available opportunities. These included traveling on her grandfather's ship and graduating from college at a time when women rarely earned degrees.

After raising seven children, her grandmother lived until she was 93, and forged a close relationship with her grandchildren.

"My life is a reflection of the opportunities made possible by women before me," said the wife, mother, sister, daughter, Soldier and Army officer. "As Americans, we automatically inherit opportunities, benefits and rights that our forefathers and ancestors fought hard to secure for us.

"Personally, I thank them for paving the way for me to go from Barbie dolls to ballistic missiles in 41 short years," she said,

The students in the audience, both male and female, paid close attention to the list of opportunities that Daugherty took advantage of, including becoming a Black Hawk helicopter pilot after graduating from the fifth class at West Point that allowed women, teaching ROTC, attending graduate school and, finally, becoming the RTS commander.

"It was interesting," said senior Luke Riley, who came up afterward to interview Daugherty for the school newspaper. He said he expected a list of famous women and their accomplishments, rather than who in her family influenced Daugherty and the opportunities she chose.

"Opportunities — that is why I like to honor Women's History Month, because of all the things that they have done that wasn't for them. It was for the world," she said.

Daugherty challenged the young people in the audience.

"What opportunities will be out there waiting for you when you graduate from high school? When you graduate from college? When you start your career? Or start your family?" she said.

In her life, Daugherty said that as one opportunity finished she looked to see what other opportunities presented themselves and chose what she thought was right for her, her philosophy based on a poem she had read as a child.

"[It] read, 'Go as far as you can see. When you get there, you will see further,'" she said.

Before the students left to return to class, she asked each of them to do one thing in the future.

"I ask you to always do something you can value and when possible consider the opportunities you are making for those around you, for those that follow you."

Anti-terrorist exercise ramps up prior planning

By KW Hillis
Assistant Editor

The train explosions in Madrid, Spain last week causing over 200 deaths, is another in a series of terrorist acts plaguing nations and people around the world.

On Thursday and Friday, USAKA's Emergency Operations Center was activated by the Crisis Management Team as part of an anti-terrorism exercise.

Anti-terrorism exercises, conducted by government and civilian entities world-wide, help coordinate and pre-plan responses to terrorist acts and the pre-planning can even thwart parts of an actual attack, according to Maj. Richard Scrivner, USAKA Operations officer.

The EOC team, drawn from departments all over the island including the fire department, police, transportation, logistics and EOD, worked through a series of terrorist activity scenarios involving hijacked planes, hostages, explosions and biological agents.

"[The exercise] better prepares the team for the unlikely, but possible, terrorist activities," Scrivner said.

The anti-terrorism readiness process is continuous, starting with the assessment of the threat, planning what can be done and what resources can be called on, depending on the threat scenario, and deciding what would be the best response, he said. During an actual terrorist attack, the command would make the final decision of what to do. Whether an actual attack occurs or an exercise is called, the team responds. After-action meetings fold in the lessons learned to upgrade the responses for the next exercise or actual event.

"Some of it is just a matter of having the key players, the decision-makers aware [of resources]," Scrivner said. "One of the scenarios we went through, folks were offering up different suggestions on how to solve the problems ... At the end of it, we had two or three viable possibilities and prior to [the meeting], nobody had really even thought about it."

The prior planning does prepare the island for the worst.

"Residents need to realize that the leadership on this island does try to look ahead and prepare in a 'what if' situation," said LuAnne Fantasia,

Security Tips

- Report suspicious activities or items
- Trash could reveal sensitive information
- Be careful what you say over the phone
- Keep lights on outside home or office
- Inspect mail before opening it
- Have emergency numbers on hand
- Be a detailed, not casual, observer
- Learn descriptive terms for people and vehicles
- Practice estimation of time, direction and distance
- Protect yourself and your family when traveling:
 - Blend in with behavior, clothing and luggage
 - Vary your routine
 - Vary your routes

USAKA Public Affairs officer. "Doing this protects all of us."

Residents' responsibilities

If a real attack occurs, residents can help protect themselves and others.

"Residents should stay tuned, pay attention and listen up," Scrivner said. "Be assured we are going to inform the community what we want them to do. Whether it is a man-made disaster or a natural disaster, yes, the sirens will go off. The television, radio and e-mail will focus on putting the information out. It will be coming out of the Public Affairs office.

Residents need to act on the information.

"For example, going back to the natural disasters, if it says for everyone to stay inside and not go surfing even through there is a 10-foot wave out there, then you'd better stay inside," Scrivner said. "Otherwise, you are putting our response folks at risk."

Residents should not call the Fire Department, police station or other emergency numbers because that will tie up the lines. Also, employees and family members not assigned to an emergency response team need to stay away from the area that was attacked, said Lloyd Jordan, EOC team member and KRS Community Services manager

"You see it in Iraq, an explosion occurs, people gather around and then a secondary explosion occurs," he said.

Residents should prepare an emergency kit containing two to three days of food, water, flashlight, radio and batteries, Jordan said. Originally suggested as part of severe weather preparedness, the kit could come in handy if during a terrorist attack residents are instructed to stay in their homes or the power and water goes out, Jordan said.

Volunteers

"If there is a real threat, and we are working 24 hours a day, seven days a week ... we are going to want volunteers," Scrivner said. "If we turn off the Marshallese work force, we are going to need help."

Volunteers can help make box lunches, man the phones for Public Affairs or run registers at the stores among other tasks. If volunteers are needed, information on where volunteers can go to help will be put on the TV and radio, Jordan said.

Depending on the situation, blood donations may be needed from residents, Scrivner said.

Kwajalein Hospital Medical Laboratory is currently looking for people who would be willing to donate blood in the case of an emergency. Residents interested in getting on the lab's blood donor list can call Medical Laboratory supervisor Sandra Clark, 5667.

Be aware

Although we are relatively isolated from the rest of the world, residents should be alert and report any suspicious activities, Scrivner said. Residents should be observant to what is going on around them, Scrivner said.

"If something doesn't look right, it probably isn't, and they probably need to report it," he said.

When traveling, people should keep a low profile and blend in.

This new awareness is something the world has had to deal with for a long time.

"The United States has been fortunate," Scrivner said. "Europe back in the '70s had discos blown up. The Middle East has been a disaster for a long time. ... Now we're faced with the things that other folks have been living with."

Exercising the anti-terrorist scenario has helped, he said.

"We're all part of the same team and we just want to make sure that the team works smoothly in time of need," Scrivner said.

Couple rediscovers first love after 26 years apart

By Jan Waddell
Reporter

On her 17th birthday, he gave her a token of his love, a silver bracelet. Now, after 26 years apart, she once again wore the bracelet after they were reunited and given a second chance at love, on a tiny island in the Pacific Ocean.

First Love

Elsy Fierro was only 16 years old and a junior at Thomas Jefferson High School in El Paso, TX., when she met David Diaz, a senior.

Both were in ROTC, but according to Fierro she was new to the school and didn't know many of the other students.

"He was on the ROTC rifle team and I was on the ROTC drill team," Fierro said.

"I became aware of Elsy in the fall of 1976," Diaz said. But he admitted he didn't start courting her until the spring of 1977.

Diaz was her first boyfriend, and she was his first girlfriend.

Diaz said he would walk the 2½ miles to Elsy's house to sit on the porch and talk to her. He also admitted that is where he first kissed her.

They also attended movies, basketball games, proms and military balls, over the next two years.

And then came her 17th birthday, and the gift that symbolize their love.

"I scraped every nickel and dime I had [for the bracelet]," Diaz said. "I saved my allowance, lunch money and did extra jobs for my folks. Then I went to the jewelry store and put a down payment."

He added he was able to pay-off the bracelet and have it engraved with her name, in four weeks.

When Diaz gave Fierro the silver bracelet, girls weren't wearing big jewelry at that time so she put it away for safe keeping, she said.

"Little did I know she kept it all this time," Diaz said. "I was floored when she told me she still had the bracelet."

After two years of dating Diaz, Fierro entered college.

"I broke up with him," Fierro said. "I thought I needed to date other people. He was my first boyfriend. I was young."

"I thought it was better so I stayed away," Fierro said. "I never heard any more about him."

"At first I went along with [breaking up]," Diaz said. "Elsy had moved on. But I never forgot her."

Life Goes On

Fierro married, continued her college education and went on to obtain her Ph.D in Education.

In 1985, while pregnant with her second child and shopping in a Sears's store, she saw Diaz with some friends.

"He did not recognize me," Fierro said. "I set the memory [of Diaz] aside again."

Fierro knew Diaz had been dealing with cancer and felt he did not need her in his life, since she was married with a child and one on the way.

She lost all touch with friends they had together and the memory of her first love was stored away.

In 1990, she felt the need to look for him and find out if he had beaten the cancer, and maybe put to rest his memory.

Fierro said she tried to locate their old friends or any of his family members.

"At first I went along with [breaking up]. Elsy had moved on. But I never forgot her."

— David Diaz

"I knew the name of the street and the block [his mother lived on]," Fierro said. "I kept driving up and down his block."

But she could not remember what house Diaz's mother lived in. She said she was too embarrassed to knock on every door on the block.

At this time, she said she felt he had died from cancer and gave up looking for him.

Meanwhile, Diaz married in 1992 and divorced seven years later.

A friend once told him he always compared other women to Elsy.

"I would see a woman who would look like her from behind," said Diaz. "But it wasn't her. I had to get used to the fact she was gone, but part of me was still looking for her."

Diaz said there were many times when their paths could have crossed, since they lived only one town away from each other.

"In the times when we were close enough to meet each other, it is probably better we never did," he added. "It was just as well. We were leading other lives."

"I sent an e-mail and the next day he answered. I asked him if he remembered me and he answered, 'How could I forget you?'"

— Elsy Fierro

He added, "We may have been in the same [shopping] mall. Who knows how many times we may have passed each other."

Reunited online

In 1999, a co-worker convinced Fierro to register on a new Website, Classmates.com.

Fierro said there were only a couple of students from her old high school registered at that time.

"I forgot completely about it," Fierro added.

Diaz also registered with Classmates.com in 1999 and saw Fierro's name. He sent her an e-mail but never received a reply. He noticed, shortly after he registered, her name disappeared from the list.

According to Diaz, he felt that something had happened to the database at Classmates because his name also disappeared from the list, so he registered again.

"I would check the Web site about once a quarter," Diaz said. "Hoping maybe she would register again."

Then in 2003, her sister convinced Fierro to re-register with Classmates.com.

"I saw David's name," Fierro said. "The only way I could send David an e-mail was to pay $40 [registration fee]," she added. "I sent an e-mail and the next day

Mission set for tomorrow

From Range Safety Office

A Range Operation is scheduled for Wednesday, March 24, 2004.

Caution times are 7:01 p.m. Wednesday March 24 through 3:01 a.m. Thursday, March 25, 2004.

The caution area for this mission is the area bounded by Boked Island on the east reef, by Yabbernohr Island on the west reef, by the line drawn north of Bigej Island, and by the high tide mark on Ninni Island on the west reef.

See Mar. 19 Hourglass for maps of caution areas.

In order to ensure clearance of non-mission support personnel from the mid-atoll corridor by the window opening time, KPD island clearance procedures began at approximately 7:30 a.m. on Saturday, March 20, 2004, and continue until evacuation has been accomplished.

Egress of all air and sea craft will be required when requested by authorized clearance personnel. Subsequent to lagoon clearance, the hazard area will be in effect until mission completion.

In the event of a mission slip, the caution times and areas will be in effect for the following days:

Thursday, March 25, 2004, 3:01 a.m. – Friday, March 26, 2004, 3:01 a.m.

Friday, March 26, 2004, 7:01 p.m. – Saturday, March 27, 2004, 3:01 a.m.

Questions regarding the above safety requirements for this mission should be directed to the Command Safety Office, Range Safety Officer, ext. 52477.

Hourglass Advertising

Friday's ads are due by noon Wednesday and Tuesday's ads are due by noon Friday. All ads for a given resident must be less than 50 words. We will combine multiple ad submissions, where necessary, or edit for style and space.

he answered. I asked him if he remembered me and he answered, 'How could I forget you?'

"I truly thought she had forgotten me," Diaz said. "I had hoped, at the very least, that I was a nice memory. I couldn't believe it when she told me she wanted to be with me."

It was Sept. 25, 2003 when they started talking, via e-mail, again.

Diaz phoned her shortly thereafter, but according to Fierro, she didn't have much to say.

"I couldn't speak," Fierro said. "I was just listening to his voice."

She finally told him the reason she couldn't talk was, "you took my breath away."

"I had told her once before I loved her," Diaz said. "How could I say I hated her? It took me a long time to let her go. I never forgot her."

They have been talking two or three times a day ever since.

"It is like we haven't been away," Fierro said.

"She is my Alpha and Omega," Diaz said. "My first and only. I had been thinking about her all my adult life."

'The trip was worth the journey'

On March 12, 2004, Fierro stepped off the plane at Kwajalein and into the waiting arms of Diaz, six months after they had reunited through e-mail.

When he met the plane emotions overwhelmed him, but for the first time in 26 years, Diaz and Fierro were reunited.

Back at his BQ room, Diaz got down on one knee, and asked Fierro to marry him, she said.

"I truly thought she had forgotten me. I had hoped, at the very least, that I was a nice memory. I couldn't believe it when she told me she wanted to be with me."

— David Diaz

"It is nice to be asked," Fierro said.

"I had to come out [Kwajalein] to find out she was always in my backyard," Diaz said. "Everything worked out now. Five or 10 years ago wasn't the time. Now is the time."

She said they plan to be married on Sept. 4, 2004, in El Paso in a small church wedding.

Fierro hopes to find a job on Kwajalein and join her fiancée. She has worked at the New Mexico University as a faculty member and manages a grant to prepare teachers to become principals. She said she would give all this up, if she could find a job on Kwaj. Otherwise, Diaz will move back to New Mexico with her, she added.

Diaz said they plan to, "live together. Share our life together, travel and enjoy life."

He added, "The trip was worth the journey."

Students spell success 'exploration'

By Jan Waddell
Reporter

Twenty-four students explored ways to take top honors in the 2004 Elementary School Spelling Bee, Monday.

Eight students represented each of the 4th-6th grade classes in the bee.

The Parent Teacher Organization sponsored the spelling bee which has been going on for about 12 years, said Loretta Childers, PTO spelling bee coordinator. Teachers selected the students, but there was no word list to study, Childers added.

Travis Atchley claimed the sixth grade prize after successfully spelling "exploration."

Joey Fackler placed second and William Ray took third.

The fifth grade winner, Rayn Posey, took top honors spelling "Georgia."

Second place went to LeeRoy Denham and in third place was Dylon Russell.

Eric Brower took first, in the fourth grade, spelling "neighbor."

Sarah Greenbaum took second and Dane Bishop clinched third.

The top three winners received trophies and all participants received certificates.

Spring Break kicks off at Youth Center Friday

By Jan Waddell
Reporter

The Youth Center's daily Spring Break activities range from a Catamaran Cruise to golf starting Friday, with prizes being awarded in the different competitions and tournaments.

"These are not everyday activities," said Ann McCoy, Child and Youth Services coordinator.

"[There will be] lots of stuff to do during Spring Break," said Heather Schantz, Child and Youth Services assistant director.

Students in the grades 7-12 grades can participate but must be registered with the Child and Youth Services program to participate in the Youth Center programs, said McCoy.

Registration is used to track youth center participation and to supply emergency contact information. It is an Army Regulation and is required to take part in any Youth Service or Youth Center activity, according to McCoy.

Youth Services Registration forms can be picked up at the elementary school administration building or at the Youth Center.

McCoy said she will also mail forms to families who have not yet registered. McCoy can be contacted at 53606, and Schantz can be contacted at 53796.

The registration fee is $12, RMI guest students can also register for Youth Center activities and the registration fee has been waved for them.

Ronnie Dan is available at the Youth Center to help RMI guest students register, McCoy said.

Spring Break activities kick off with Beach Volleyball on Friday, 5-6 p.m. at the Youth Center. All students interested meet on Emon Beach on the sand court.

On Saturday, from 10 a.m.-4 p.m. a golf tournament and barbecue will be held at Holmberg Fairways.

Bob Butz will give golf instructions. After a barbecue lunch, students will play a five-hole mini tournament. The event is open to beginners as well as seasoned golfers, and all equipment will be provided.

Anyone interested in participating, must sign up before Thursday and be registered with the Youth Center.

On Sunday, a pool tournament will be held at the Youth Center, 8-10 a.m. Sign-ups are Saturday on the Youth Center bulletin board.

Students can learn how to use a GPS device Monday, 3-4 p.m., prior to the Wednesday, March 31 GPS Scavenger Hunt, which will be held from 3-4 p.m.

The scavenger hunt will have different locations plotted out around Kwajalein and participants will have to find each location using the GPS.

There is a 3-Point Shoot-Out on the outdoor basketball courts from 5-6 p.m. on Tuesday.

This will be a shoot-out with competitors shooting hoops from the 3-point line, at different locations on the court.

A softball game is set for March 31, 5-6 p.m., on Brandon Field.

The Catamaran Cruise to Meck happens April 1, 8 a.m.-noon. Participants should bring their own lunch and drinks are provided. Students should meet on the dock.

"Any youth interested needs to sign up at the Youth Center by March 31," McCoy said.

Tennis is the scheduled activity for Friday, April 2. Anyone interested should meet at the tennis courts from 3-5 p.m.

Saturday, April 3, 4-6 p.m., a pick-up basketball game will be held on the outdoor courts.

On Saturday evening, April 3, the Youth Center will hold an Open House from 7-9 p.m. All registered 7-12 graders are welcome to bring the entire family to the Youth Center for open family recreation.

A second pool tournament will be held Sunday, April 4. Sign-ups for the pool tournament are scheduled for April 3, and are on the bulletin board in the Youth Center hallway.

The Spring Break activities will end with a technology activity on Monday, April 5, 3-4 p.m. Students who would like to learn how to calculate costs, fees and interest on purchasing a vehicle are encouraged to attend.

The Youth Center will also maintain the regular schedule which is Tuesday-Friday, 3-9 p.m.; Saturday, 3-10 p.m.; Sunday, 2-10 p.m. and Monday, 1-9 p.m., over the Spring Break.

Schantz said the Youth Center also has many regular activities which include, pool, darts, a big-screen TV where PG-13 movies can be shown; croquet; pickleball; ping pong and X-Boxes along with the computer lab.

Students can bring in X-Box and computer games to play at the center providing they are "everything and teen rated. Mature is not allowed," Schantz said.
