'Spirit stories' can happen when you don't know it

A few weeks ago, I went to church and Reverend Funk talked about 'spirit stories' and said we all had one.

I wondered what exactly a spirit story was and if we all had one, what mine could be. I thought about it for a while and couldn't come up with anything, so I pretty much just forgot it. Time went by and I didn't think of it again.

Then, as I watched the Olympic equestrian events on TV, Reverend Funk's words came back to me and I think I know what my spirit story is.

My family and I were living in Florida. Like a lot of men, I was consumed by work and making money to pay the bills. My days were long and hard. The time spent with my family was passed mostly in silence as I would be tired and stressed. When I spoke to my daughter, it was mostly complaints about her messy room or poor report card or some other thing that irked me. We didn't spend much time together.

Then one day, out of a clear blue sky, my wife said she wanted to get our daughter a horse. My reaction was less than enthusiastic. "Are you crazy?" I said. I knew my daughter loved animals. She volunteered at animal shelters, even bringing animals home sometimes to help them heal from injuries or illness. But a horse? All I thought of was the money it would cost.

I argued with my wife, but she was insistent. I told her to do whatever she wanted, but not to expect any help from me.

My wife got the horse and found a place to board it not far from where we lived. I went out to see if it was decent and that our daughter would be safe there.

As I stood in a large field, watching the people and their horses, something came over me that to this day I can't explain. I saw the stall that "our" horse would be put in and it wasn't in great shape. The next day, I was back with wood, tools and paint to fix it up. I can't begin to tell you how out of character that was for me. I hated that kind of work and normally would have avoided it. My wife was amazed. My daughter was happy.

In the next few days, I went back several times and watched my daughter ride and I saw the joy it brought her. I stood in the fields as people rode by and the air would be thick with dust. It was hot and the dust would stick to my sweaty skin. I was dirtier than I had ever been. But as I watched the people ride, I was struck by a powerful urge. I wanted a horse. My wife was shocked. My daughter laughed herself into a stomach ache.

After much discussion with my wife (some of it heated) I got my way, and a wonderful creature came into my life. She was a Tennessee Walker. Beautiful, white, 17 hands high, elegant. Her name was Miss Lady May. It took me some time to ride well, but I became a very good horseman. My daughter had another horse named Sam that we took to shows occasionally. Taking him to the shows was a family affair.

These animals changed our lives. My daughter and I rode together every hour we could. Work was no longer the priority in my life. It was riding with her and spending time with her. And as we rode, we talked. I got to know her as never before. We became very close.

Eventually, my wife and I tired of the rat race world of Florida. We moved to Alabama and purchased a piece of heaven. Ten acres of beautiful country and lots of riding room all around. We had horses and a pack of dogs. We were living country-style. It was the happiest time of my daughter's life.

Within a few years though, she became ill and was diagnosed with a fatal disease. She was courageous and fought back hard. As she became sicker and weaker, she still rode and cared for her horse. It was the thing that kept her going through a lot of suffering.

The day came when God decided he needed someone good with horses and called her home.

I'll never know what happened the day I stood in that dusty field and decided I wanted a horse. I don't know what made me do it. It was so far removed from the person I was at that time. But because of that day, my daughter and I spent many years being close. Without those horses, I don't know if that would have happened.

Though it's been years since she passed, there's not a day that goes by I don't miss her and the times we had together. But even through the sorrow and tears, the thought of her and I riding together brings a good memory and a smile.

If God knew he was going to take

Public Internet outage mystery solved

By Mig Owens
Assistant Editor

Connection made by a home computer to the Internet goes much deeper than wires, satellites and servers. Connecting is literally our link to the outside world, family and friends and maybe even an online sale.

But with an 8,000-mile round-trip satellite hop and a 2,000-mile cross-country fiberoptic circuit ride, a lot can go wrong. And it does.

A recent service interruption came courtesy of a farmer in Missouri, whose backhoe cut the cable affecting numerous lines, including ours. Heavy rain is also a culprit.

"If anything at all happens along that great expanse, we always catch the heat," Mike Nelson, Communications manager, said. "Sometimes it's difficult to pinpoint exactly what causes the problem."

These instances are usually of a short duration, explained Nelson, and ones which his group doesn't have a lot of control over.

Add to that outages for maintenance and down time scheduled by the government or service provider, and personal computer users aren't the only ones inconvenienced.

"We're not being mysterious on purpose. There are operational security issues tied up in why I can't tell you when something's down," Nelson said. "I don't mind letting people know not to call Tech Control. They are instructed not to tell you what's going on unless you have a valid need to know."

Nelson stresses the fact that all communication is being monitored twenty-four hours a day, seven days a week. This contrasts with some of his group's contacts in the states, who operate during their normal business hours, and who must be called at home to come to the office and troubleshoot. In such a situation, Nelson's group directs the efforts to correct the problem.

Information Technology owns the network portion of the public Internet, explained Tim Kummer, Network Operations manager.

"Once a personal computer dials in, through a phone line to a switch, data is transferred to a network device, which transfers it across wire on island to the satellite and then on to the states," Kummer said

He said that in the states, each home may have a different Internet Service Provider and it's typical for users to notify their ISP when they have connectivity issues.

"Here, it's all one circuit that's monitored by COMM," Kummer said. "Problems are generally not hardware related on this end, so users do not need to inform IT when the Internet service is down."

Only if business communications are down, Kummer suggests calling the IT on-call pager.

Kummer says that the Internet can be self-monitored by checking the TV stations. If channels 20, 23 and 26 are frozen, the public Internet is also not working.

Inconveniences such as down time should be weighed against the fact that the public Internet is free, explained Nelson.

"The government spends about $20,000 a month for the two circuits and $1,750 a month for the ISP. That's nearly $22,000 a month for service that residents don't pay for," Nelson said. "The current service is six times larger and faster than it ever was before. That improvement cost them absolutely nothing. The government spends a lot of money every month for quality of life."

Spirit . . .

her, perhaps He saw to it that she had some happy times before He did. I was angry at God for many years. At times I still am. How could He do that? I have no answers, only what I believe to be true. Something brought those horses to us so my daughter and I would find each other before she had to go.

Is this a spirit story? I couldn't say for sure. Maybe Reverend Funk could. I think it is. I think it's mine.

There are many visions of what heaven is. My vision is that one-half second after I breathe my last, I'll be standing on a lush, green prairie that goes on forever with snow-capped mountains all around, the day will be bright and clear, the air will be crisp and sweet. Standing before me will be a beautiful, white Tennessee Walker, saddled and ready to go. My daughter will be on Sam and she'll hand Lady's reins to me. And then she'll say, "We've been waiting Dad, let's ride."

Across the miles, a carver

By Jan Waddell
Reporter

From Chuuk to Kwajalein to New York, a carved storyboard head from Micronesia found a home in New York.

Jonathan Shepherd, a FOM air condition technician on Kwaj, visited the Mic Shop about three months ago and saw a Chuukese storyboard carved head, with New York Fire Fighters hoisting an American flag and the Twin Towers standing in the back ground.

Shepherd purchased the carving and then with the aid of Laverne Arthur, Mic Shop chairperson, tried to find out some information about the carver before he mailed the carving to New York, where he felt it should be.

"I saw the carving. I felt it was designed for the [9/11] memorial," Shepherd said.

"I was touched to see a carver from an outer island of Chuuk would be so impressed with the incident [9/11] that he was encouraged to put knife to wood to express his feelings for this bitter sweet horror," Arthur said. "Who would have ever thought that a man so vastly removed, on a mere speck of an island in the middle of the Pacific, from the United States would feel this strongly?"

As kismet, coincidence or fate may have it; a C5 airplane crew from New York recently arrived on Kwaj and during their down time, crew members decided to visit the Mic Shop where Arthur happened to be stocking shelves. Even though the shop was closed, she opened the door to the visitors and allowed them to do some shopping.

Ronnie West, Air Force Load Master, was one of the crew on the C5 who decided to do some shopping at the Mic Shop, wearing his FDNY t-shirt.

Arthur asked him if he was a New York firefighter and West explained that he was with the chief engineer on the FB Firefighter, Marine Division boat stationed in Manhattan.

Arthur immediately called Shepherd to tell him a New York Fire Fighter was on Kwaj.

West's boat was built by the Navy in 1938 and supplied all the water to Manhattan after the 9/11 terrorist attack on Manhattan.

West said he had just gotten off his shift when the terrorist-manned planes flew into the towers. He was immediately recalled to his boat where he spent the next 18 days fighting fires, supplying water to other divisions and searching through rubble of what once was the World Trade Center.

"I supplied all the water to Manhattan, from the Hudson River," West said.

He added, if he had still been on his shift, he would have been one of the firefighters who entered the towers immediately after the airplanes crashed into them.

West added his memories of the event were blurred, but some images will never leave him.

One memory, which he spoke of sullenly, were the nurses walking through the rubble bringing water to the firefighters.

"We were in Hades," West said. "Guys didn't wear [air] tanks, they just went in. I lost 10 men."

West said he spent the next three months attending three to five memorials a day.

Even though West's reserve squad was activated, he was allowed to stay with the fire department and help.

"The Air Force respected that," West said. "They didn't activate me." West said it wasn't until Dec. 5, that he was activated for Operation Enduring Freedom.

Shepherd was finally able to realize a dream and present the storyboard carving to a member of the New York Fire Department.

Shepherd presented the carving to West in front of the Mic Shop Saturday, and it was put on the C5 bound for the New York Fire Academy on Randall's Island north of Manhattan, Sunday.

Shepherd added he has not given up in finding out more about the carver.

NASA helps Kwaj schools with rocket science

By Jan Waddell
Reporter

Kwajalein's school kids are participating in rocket design, building, and the thrill of launching rockets, with the aid of NASA.

This week kindergarten through sixth-grade students learned about what it takes to build and launch a rocket.

Betty Flowers, NASA Wallops Public Affairs officer, and Berit Bland, education coordinator for NASA, donated 25 Alpha rockets for the students to launch.

The 12-inch Alpha rockets went approximately 400-500 feet in the air as the students looked on.

The students made predictions on the rockets using math and science skills and then students actually "pulled the string" to launch each rocket.

The high school students will participate in a similar rocket program using the Big Daddy rockets, which are around 24 inches tall, next week.

The high school science classes "will actually build their rockets," Flowers said.

Students will also have the ability to use software to analyze the stability of the launched rocket and altitude it might go, according to their design.

"Education and outreach is very important to NASA and our employees genuinely enjoy working with kids of any age," Flowers said. The high school students will spend next week designing, building and analyzing. On Saturday, Sept. 4, at about 2 p.m., the students will have an opportunity to launch their creations, providing the winds stay below 20 mph, Flowers said.

Flowers explained many children on Kwajalein know what their parents' jobs are, or they have seen the incoming launched rockets, but with the NASA educational outreach program, they actually see what goes into building and launching a rocket.

Syncolift cover project completed

By Jan Waddell
Reporter

After approximately two years of being ravaged by the harsh Kwajalein elements, the Syncolift skeleton frame finally received a covering.

"I am absolutely delighted to see this project finally being completed," said COL Jerry Brown, Chief of Staff, U.S. forces Japan. "We have waited a long time for it. Congratulations to all who had a hand in making it a reality. A first-class community requires first-class facilities. Our community deserves the very best."

The Syncolift, or marine sandblast structure, is finally reaching completion. Located at the Marina, the facility is used for boat maintenance.

"The frame was corroding rapidly," said Brent Peterson, KRS Engineering and Planning structural engineer.

The structure is designed to "stop the wind and water transport of sandblast material into the water," said Ken Sims, USAKA Environmental Management Office chief.

According to Sims, the project was started under Raytheon, but was never completed.

Last April, Polysteel Inc. finished corrosion control on the structure in preparation for the covering, but they had to wait for the doldrums to install the cover.

On Aug. 8, Island Development Company started installing the cover.

The Syncolift skeleton over the boat maintenance facility was corroding and received the new cover last week.

Jim Rugg, KRS Environmental manager, explained the wind has to be below 10 mph for the workers to safely install the cover.

"It will be a huge accomplishment to get the cover up," Peterson said.

After the cover is installed, phase two of the project will begin, according to Rugg. Phase two consists of installing a second telescoping structure.

The second structure will roll back and forth on rails telescoping inside the larger structure, according to Rugg. This will allow for larger boats and several boats to be worked on at the same time.

After the two structures are completed, Rugg said, "Sandblast grit and paint will not go into the lagoon."

He added workers will also be sheltered from the elements and increase efficiency for the Marine Department.

I am absolutely delighted to see this project “ finally being completed. We have waited a long ” time for it.

USS Lake Erie to visit Kwaj

By Mig Owens
Assistant Editor

More than 300 sailors are expected to disembark the USS Lake Erie Aug. 30 for a visit to Kwajalein.

The 567-foot-long USS Lake Erie is the Navy's test ship for theatre-wide ballistic missile defense, according to the ship's website. With a home port of Pearl Harbor, her mission is to demonstrate the operational capability of ballistic missile defense from the sea.

"At this time, we don't know if the ship will be open for tours. As soon as the ship confirms either way, we'll post it on the Roller," said Denise Robertson, port agent for the Port of Kwajalein.

In anticipation of the ship's arrival, Community Services is in the process of coordinating events for the crew and is making plans for merchandising.

"We're excited about the possibility of them coming on island and have a ton of events planned for them," said Torrey Landers, manager of Recreation Activities.

The ship is scheduled to depart on the morning of Sept. 1.

The last time the USS Lake Erie made a stop on Kwajalein was May 2002.

COMMUNITY NOTICES

ATTENTION ISLAND residents: The constructing, relocating, demolition or altering of any structure on Government owned facilities requires a permit approved by Public Works and USAKA. There have been several instances of residents building decks, fences and wind breaks, without going through the permit process. A building permit is required to ensure proper building, fire and safety codes are met. The unauthorized construction, installation or relocation of any structure will result in the removal of the structure at the owner's expense. SPI 2600 RO, lays out the process for getting a permit for privately owned structures constructed on Government property. A digging permit is required prior to any excavation. This requirement is in place to ensure that excavation does not result in injury to the person digging by hitting underground utilities or unexploded ordnance. There is also the possibility of disturbing archeological and historical sites. The SPI that lays out the process for obtaining a dig permit is SPI 1310 R2. These processes are not meant to obstruct or impede the building of structures, but to ensure that they are constructed safely and meet all codes and regulations that apply to the construction of privately owned structures. A permit application can be obtained from the Housing Office. Questions? Call John Norris, 53353.

KWAJALEIN POLICE and Firefighter Christian Fellowship meets Wednesday, Sept. 1, 5:30 p.m., at the ARC. The topic will be "Why Bad Things Happen to Good People." Our meetings are open to anyone seeking a real and vibrant personal relationship with Jesus Christ. Come join us for relaxed, nondenominational Christian fellowship, prayer, and Bible study. Refreshments will be served. Questions? Call Mike, 52413, or e-mail fullarmor911@yahoo.com.

ROLL-AWAY trash containers should not be left on the street except on trash pick-up days. Residents are asked to place the containers in front of or to the side of their house and not in the fire lanes and to return them to their quarters after trash pick-up. Only residents on Taro and Pine Street and at Qtrs. 427, 401 and 403, are authorized to use the fire lane for trash pick-up. Your cooperation is appreciated. Notices will be issued to those who repeatedly leave their trash containers on the street the day after trash pick-up. Questions? Call 51511.

COPIES OF the 1998-2004 graduation slide show presentations are available for purchase. For more information, call the high school, 52011.

Celebrating Women's Equality

Celebrating Women's Equality Day, SFC Travis Tikka and Gwyne Copeland assist prospective voters with registration Thursday on the Post Office porch. The day honors passage of the 19th Amendment to the Constitution in 1920, which granted women the right to vote. The event was sponsored by USAKA to honor this constitutional amendment and to secure that right in this election year. "This has been a very good thing," Tikka said. His suggestion for those who have not yet done so is to visit www.fvap.gov, look at the state election site, find your state, fill out the form and mail it in.
