COMMENTARY

New chief impressed by officers' professionalism

Now, having been on Kwajalein for almost two weeks, I have had the opportunity to visit every section within the Kwajalein Police Department. I am pleased to announce that once again I am blown away and impressed with the talent and professionalism displayed by all officers, access control officers and constables. The cooperative spirit between the section lieutenants, the "eager to please attitude" of our newest officers and constables recently joining the team, and the administrative support staff have all been impressive and awe inspiring. Without a doubt, I could not ask for a better team to serve with in support of this community.

On behalf of the entire KPD, I would like to reach out with the "right hand of cooperation" to both the RMI and KAL-GOV law enforcement communities. What an honor and privilege it is for me to join Capt. Raney Bolkeim, Prosecutor Davidson Jajo, Chief John Kabua, Capt. Julius Lejjena and Representative Noda Lojkar, a group of outstanding men who represent and serve their federal and local governments.

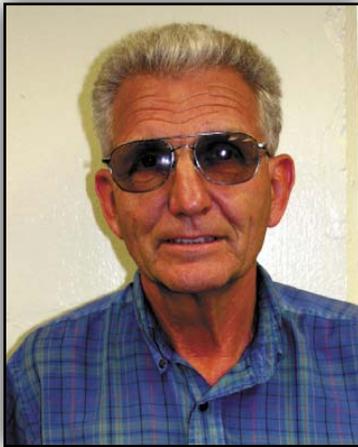

Like many of you, our officers work long and sometimes rough hours in the performance of their daily duties. Many of our officers put in more than 55 hours per week to meet our corporate responsibilities to this command and community. Like you, they are here serving Kwajalein far from home and alone. Nonetheless, like you they are here to fulfill their obligations willingly, professionally and sometimes sacrificially with little or no recognition. Refreshingly, not one mentioned the necessity for recognition.

From me, their newly appointed chief, I would ask that when you see one of these fine people wearing a POLICE, CONSTABLE or ACCESS CONTROL OFFICER uniform, take the time to greet them and thank them for their service. From my vantage point as something of an "outsider looking in" there is a positive relationship between this great community and its police department. One such expression to provide credence to this was recently demonstrated the night of the last mission. As our officers do, we were mandated to establish "no access" areas along North Point for the safety of the community. A resident living right there at the main checkpoint came out of his quarters with his small son. After a few minutes of exchanging greetings and pleasantries and generally getting to know each other, he then just out of the blue offered all of the officers on duty and me the use of his quarters if we needed water or use of the facilities. For that expression of welcome and real community spirit, I extend my sincerest gratitude. It was that spirit when I was here two years ago for a short visit that I remember most and look forward to in the years

USAKA Employee of the Week

Jack Carey

Carey is an unobtrusive but tireless volunteer in the community in many areas. He is a familiar face with the Running Club activities, Java Café, and in outreach for the chapel especially in the area of unaccompanied personnel, just to name a few. If there is a need, Carey will most likely be there to assist. He fits it all in and still trains for the RustMan as a single participant. Carey always has a kind word and smile and is a true inspiration to those who know him.

Iraq, Afghanistan joining free nations of world

By Steven Donald Smith
American Forces Press Service

The United States and its allies have fostered a historic transformation in Afghanistan and Iraq, President George W. Bush said Monday.

"Two of the world's most dangerous regimes have been removed from power, and the world is better off for it," Bush said during the graduation ceremony at the U.S. Merchant Marine Academy in Kings Point, N.Y. "Two violent dictatorships are being replaced with growing democracies that answer to their people, that respect their neighbors, and that serve as allies in the war on terror."

Bush is the first president to deliver the commencement address at the academy.

With the toppling of the Taliban in Afghanistan and Saddam Hussein in Iraq, both countries are now taking their "rightful place" in the free world, he said.

Bush said his meeting with Iraqi Prime Minister Nouri al-Maliki during his surprise visit to Baghdad last week was an informative exchange.

"The prime minister is a man of strong character; he has a clear and practical plan to lead his country forward," Bush said. "He briefed me on the immediate steps he's taking to improve security in Baghdad, to build up Iraq's economy and to reach out to the international community."

The formation of a new Iraqi government and subsequent successful raids on al Qaeda targets in Iraq have created a moment of opportunity for the Iraqi people, he said.

"Iraqis must seize this moment, and we will help them succeed," Bush said. "I assured the prime minister that when America gives a commitment, America will keep its word."

By helping Maliki's government achieve its goals, the Iraqi people will have expanded opportunities, the terrorists will suffer a major blow, and the world will see the power of a thriving democracy in the heart of the Middle East, the president said.

A free and sovereign Iraq will also require the strong support of Europe, he said.

"Some of the most important support for Iraqis is coming from European democracies with recent memories of tyranny -- Poland and Hungary and Romania and Bulgaria and the Czech Republic and Slovakia, Georgia, Ukraine, Latvia, Lithuania, and Estonia," he said.

Bush said he understands that some Europeans do not agree with U.S. decisions on Iraq. "Yet we've all watched the Iraqi people stand up for their freedom -- and we agree that the success of a democratic government in Baghdad is vital for the Iraqis and for the security of the world," he said.

The European Union has been among the world's most generous financial donors for reconstruction in Iraq, he said. "And Europe and America will encourage greater international support to help Prime Minister Maliki implement his plans for recovery," he added.

The international community has pledged about $13 billion to help the new Iraqi government, but only $3.5 billion has been paid thus far, Bush said.

"All nations that have pledged money have a responsibility to keep their pledges -- and America and Europe will work together to ensure they do so," he said.

During his graduation remarks, Bush also spoke about the life of a Merchant Marine Academy graduate named Aaron Seesan.

Seesan, an Ohio native, grew up dreaming of being a soldier, Bush said. When Seesan graduated from the academy three years ago, he joined the U.S. Army. While he was serving at Fort Lewis, Wash., a group of soldiers from the fort was struck by a suicide bomb in Iraq. Seesan volunteered to go to Iraq to take the place of a wounded platoon leader, Bush said.

"When Lieutenant Seesan arrived in Iraq, some of his fellow soldiers wondered what was the Army thinking. His platoon sergeant said, 'I didn't know what the hell a Merchant Marine graduate was doing here in the 73rd Engineering Company.' The sergeant quickly changed his mind when he saw Lieutenant Seesan in action, taking care of his men as they patrolled the most dangerous roads in and around Mosul," the president said.

In May 2005, Seesan was killed in Iraq when a makeshift bomb struck his truck.

"While still in high school, he (Seesan) wrote a poem that now seems prophetic," Bush told the graduates. "He wrote, 'Mourn not my terrible death, but celebrate my cause in life.' Aaron's cause in life was freedom, and as you take your place as officers in our armed forces, I ask you to celebrate the freedom for which Aaron fought and died."

Seesan was awarded the Bronze Star.

VIETNAM VETERAN HAS BIG

By J.J. Klein
Reporter

Sitting on a shelf in Christopher Hayden's man-camp trailer is Senator John McCain's memoir about life after the Vietnam War called, Worth the Fighting For. Hayden has written his own book chronicling the life of a young Marine during the Vietnam War, held as a prisoner of war and continues with his return home as a veteran.

A temporary employee of San Juan Construction for the past four months, Hayden was hired to lay and repair tile work on the new Vehicle Paint and Prep facility. He is set to leave Kwajalein June 30.

In Hayden's book An American Veteran a young marine named Custer is shot down during a hushed-hush mission over Laos, captured by the Vietcong and held prisoner for three years. Custer survives agonizing torture, the horrifying death of a friend and fellow POW, which motivates him to make a failed attempt at an escape.

An American Veteran is fascinating reading made even more remarkable by the fact that the fictionalized character is living out true events and experiences of the Vietnam War. It begs the question, exactly whose life is recounted within the covers of this book?

A quiet, likeable guy, Hayden is tightlipped about whether it is his story that is fleshed out in these pages. All he will say is that you need to read the book. But Hayden's life as a Vietnam vet is bigger than his book. It is the reason that he wrote the book.

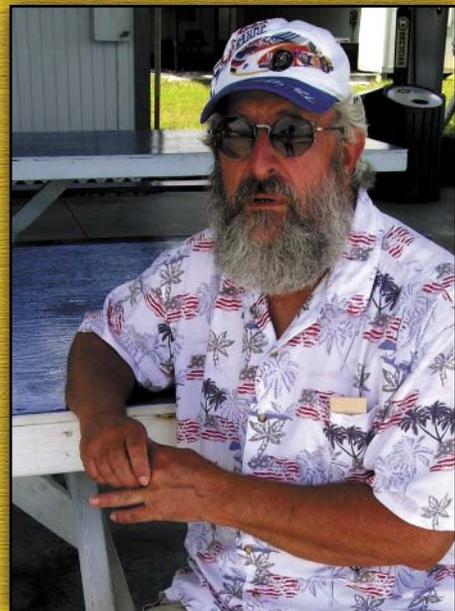

Hayden wears his heart on his sleeve when it comes to Vietnam veterans. "We are all here for a purpose," mused Hayden. "We might not always find out what that purpose is, but I think that sometimes our purpose finds ourselves, finds us."

His purpose is to spotlight the life of a Vietnam veteran for those who do not understand the "pitfalls and honor" of being a veteran. "How can one relate to somebody if they didn't hear their story," concluded Hayden. He has tried to fulfill his promise of telling their story by giving lectures, writing songs, running across the country memorializing veterans and finally by writing this book.

The book was written "to finally face up to my own past and experiences" admitted Hayden, "also to share with other veterans that they are not alone... I think it's really important that veterans know that their service to their country was worthwhile and it meant something not just to themselves, but to their country, as a whole."

When Hayden returned home from the war, like other veterans,

he struggled with feelings of being let down by society and his inability to find employment so he retreated to the small town of Twin Lakes, Colo. where he lived in a tiny cave high on Mt. Elbert. While living in that cave Hayden tried to make sense of his feelings of bitterness and depression. "I wrote all my feelings down and this is what came out," remarked Hayden of the song he penned called A Veteran's Prayer.

Every time Hayden shared this song with a group of veterans he was overwhelmed with requests for the lyrics. The Veteran's Prayer struck an emotional chord with veterans precisely because it put words to feelings they hold deep within. "Most veterans as they try to hold in their feelings really want to let them out but don't know how," commented Hayden, "and I think one of the things I've tried to achieve is to help them express themselves maybe through me, if not through themselves."

More than 2,400 servicemembers are still missing in Vietnam.

"Most veterans, as they try to hold in their feelings, really want to let them out but don't know how and I think one of the things I've tried to achieve is to help them express themselves maybe through me, if not through themselves." — Christopher Hayden

STORY TO TELL, HEART TO MATCH

"In 1983 when they dedicated the Vietnam War Memorial a lot of facts came out that I was unaware of, one being the suicide rate among Vietnam veterans was higher than any other group of veterans."

— Christopher Hayden

"In 1983 when they dedicated the Vietnam War Memorial a lot of facts came out that I was unaware of, one being the suicide rate among Vietnam veterans was higher than any other group of veterans."

Hayden asked himself what he could do to make people aware of the problems facing veterans.

One night, while watching television, Hayden was inspired by a movie he was watching, The Terry Fox Story. The movie told the story of a young, athletic Canadian boy, whose leg was amputated as the result of battling cancer, who ran 3,000 miles across Canada to bring awareness to and raise money for cancer research. "I thought to myself, 'Well, if this guy can run across Canada with one leg, I can surely run across America with two good legs'", quipped Hayden.

With that spark of an idea the "Chris Hayden Run for Life – Marathon for Veterans" began to take shape.

It was called the "Run for Life" because Hayden wanted an accounting of the 2,400 Vietnam MIAs/POWs, and he wanted to tell other veterans "hey, you survived this war, don't let it destroy your life."

It took Hayden eight months to put the run together, including trying in vain to solicit financial sponsorship for the run, finding a driver for the support van and prepping the vehicle for the journey. Money for the event was hard to come by except for the occasional check from local Montrose, Colo. townspeople and the support of local businessmen who paid for the six pairs of Nike running shoes Hayden would wear out on his run. He was repeatedly turned down for sponsorship of the event. That is until the Molson Coors Brewing Company reconsidered and put up $5,000 for the run.

The 114 day "Run for Life" kicked off at Norton Air Force Base in San Bernardino, Calif. where the National League of POW/MIA Families was holding its annual conference, and took Hayden through eight states and 3,000 miles, finishing at the Vietnam War Memorial in D.C. on July 1, 1984. On the road, Hayden was able to get his message out through interviews with local newspapers and news stations, and some not so small media outlets, including a segment on Good Morning America.

Hayden is committed to living out his purpose and his promise to fellow veterans.

Shortly after his run across country, Hayden was reassured that his work was getting through when he heard a fellow veteran comment, "If he can do that for me, then it's time for me to do something for myself." For Hayden that is mission accomplished.

Home accidents result in 20,000 deaths yearly

By Amanda Curtis, RN
Inge LeBlanc, RN, CCRN
Kwajalein Hospital

June is National Home Safety Month. Each year nearly 20,000 deaths and 21 million medical visits are a result of home-related injuries. The home is the second most common location of unintentional fatal injuries in the United States (motor vehicle accidents are the first). Children under five and adults over 70 are the highest risk groups for home injury, both fatal and nonfatal. The top five preventable injuries in and around the home include; falls, poisoning, fire/burns, choking/suffocation and drowning.

To prevent fall keep stairs, steps, landings and floors clear. Reduce clutter and ensure telephone and electrical cords are out of walkways. If you use throw rugs in your home place them over a rug-liner or choose rugs with non-skid backs to reduce your chance of falling.

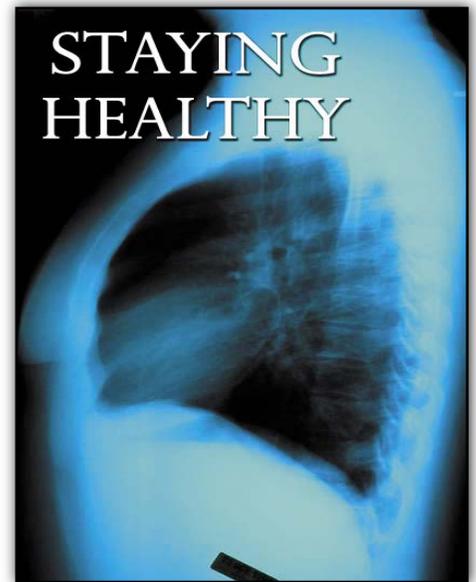

Prevent poisoning by identifying all potentially dangerous products such as household cleaners, medicines, pesticides and typical 'garage-type' items. Make sure all items have child resistant closures on them, are locked up, and are stored in high places. Post the national poison control hotline (1-800-222-1222) next to every phone.

Prevent fire and burns by designating the grilling area a 'no play zone.' Keep children and pets away until grill equipment is completely cool. Never leave burning candles unattended. Extinguish all candles before going to sleep or leaving the room and always keep burning candles up high, out of the reach of children.

Prevent choking and suffocation injuries to small children by using a cardboard toilet paper roll to measure objects, if they fit inside, keep them out of a child's reach. Always supervise children when they are playing and eating. Do not permit children under six to consume small, round or hard foods, such as hot dogs.

Prevent drowning by having constant adult supervision around any body of water, including pools and bathtubs. Never leave your child alone or in the care of another child. When hosting a pool or beach party, assign specific adults to keep an eye on the pool or shoreline at all times.

The Home Safety Council at www.homesafetycouncil.org has statistics, checklists, tips and resources for keeping your home and surroundings safe for all populations. Also, www.CodeRedRover.org is an interactive home safety web site that offers games, activities, do-it-yourself projects, home safety checklists and tips for parents and kids all in the name of saving lives.

Tools, trips to Ebeye add up to many good deeds

By J.J. Klein

Catch the 8:30 a.m. Monday LCM to Ebeye and you are bound to bump into Ed Lyvers and his weighty sack of tools on his way to do his good deed for the day at Queen of Peace Catholic Church.

Lyvers, a staff member with Massachusetts Institute of Technology Lincoln Laboratory, and the site representative for ALTAIR, the deep space radar, has been making the trip across the lagoon on his day off from work every Monday.

"The [Kwajalein] Catholic Church congregation went over to Ebeye for Mass last October and I noticed they needed some help with their PA system," said Lyvers.

Without hesitation Lyvers rolled up his sleeves and set in motion to upgrade the sound system with the assistance of Clyde Loeak, the church maintenance man. Together they have put in new PVC conduit and wiring for new microphones in addition to cleaning up the wiring to the existing speaker system. "You don't really want to see any of those wires," admitted Lyvers, "they detract from the beauty of the church."

The parishioners of Queen of Peace Catholic Church are grateful for Lyvers' handyman skills. Until Lyvers walked into the church three months ago, the Rev. Raymond Fabio, Roman Catholic priest, knew of no one who could attempt this type of repair and continued to make-do with the deteriorating sound system.

"A Home Depot would be very helpful," Lyvers joked describing the obstacles he faces while working on Ebeye. "It is very difficult finding parts that I need. Tools can also be a problem. They [Queen of Peace Church] have a number of tools, but I usually bring my own, and sometimes can't predict what I'll need."

Lyvers also has to contend with the rolling power outages on Ebeye. Because electricity is unreliable

Fishing in Emon Beach area banned until July 15

KRS Environmental and Health Department

Heavy equipment operations are underway at Emon Beach to add fill to cover the exposed rock and to create a gentler slope to the beach. Based on available data, the dinoflagellate, Gambierdiscus toxicus, is known to exist in sediment material around USAKA. This dinoflagellate carries the toxin that produces ciguatera, and the activity at Emon Beach could intensify the potential for ciguatera contamination of fish stocks. Areas where dredging and/or filling activities are ongoing or have recently occurred should always be avoided for fish harvesting. Please avoid the Emon Beach area for fishing and subsequent fish consumption until July 15.

to come.

We're introducing a tipster's line. Callers will remain anonymous. It is designed to encourage the community of Kwajalein to be proactive against criminal/unlawful activities. Here's how you use it:

1) Call 50966

2) Pass on your tip including who, what, why, when, where and how.

As you may already know, KPD will be hosting a Town Hall meeting. Paul Sefcik, Capt. Moses Moreno and I are looking forward to sharing with you, the community we serve, information about the department and the many areas we operate throughout the Atoll. We also look forward to sharing with you some of our future goals, discuss how we may serve and protect you better, and lastly to field questions about your cares and concerns. In the meantime, be careful, be safe and look out for your fellow neighbor.

the church receives power from outside sources and Lyvers is able to keep working with the help of a few very long extension cords. Additionally Lyvers is making repairs and upgrading the software of one of the church's laptops.

Lyvers' generosity to Ebeye does not stop with the church. He is working on a project aimed at providing Queen of Peace High School with donated computers.

Service to others is nothing new for Lyvers who started volunteering at his church in Lexington, Mass. twelve years ago. Eventually Lyvers was asked to help out with St. Malachy Church in Burlington, Mass. "I led a group to install all of the wiring for a new organ," recounted Lyvers. "We worked through the night to finish the installation, as the guy who was going to tune up the organ was coming the next morning."

The Bingo machine repairs at the Yokwe Yuk Club are also the result of Lyvers' skill. "I found out about it from Rick Larkin, who thought it was something simple," said Lyvers. "It wasn't simple. I had to replace two chips on one of the PC boards. It took me about five to six hours to fix, but it works fine now."

That is Lyvers' method of operation, taking something in need of repair and getting it back and running again. He modestly commented, "I would just call it being helpful to those who need it."
