Does doing what's right ever cross their minds?

We've always known we couldn't trust the politicians. We couldn't trust them with our taxes. We couldn't trust them to do what's really in the best interest of the country and not some lobbyist who's stuffing money in their pockets.

But I'll bet that even the most cynical of us thought we could trust them around children.

I guess not. At least not some of them.

The recent revelations about congressman Mark Foley, an outspoken proponent of 'family values,' exchanging explicit e-mails and text messages with underage male pages was a shock.

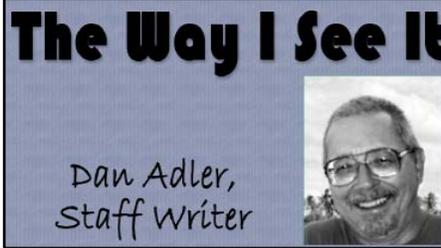

But what's even more of a shock was that the leadership of the United States House of Representatives apparently knew about it for two years and did nothing.

House Speaker Dennis Hastert says the parents of a teenage page to whom Foley had sent e-mails two years ago did not want the matter pursued. Excuse me, Mr. Speaker. A matter as serious as a United States Congressman making inappropriate overtures to underage children is a mighty big deal and should have been pursued no matter what. Foley should have been removed from his congressional seat then and there until an investigation could be completed. It's not like this has never happened before. A similar incident took place with two congressmen in 1983.

If nothing was done with Foley because it would have been a political embarrassment, well, is this less embarrassing?

It wouldn't have been better to handle this two years ago?

How can Hastert and others in positions of power not know of the 'lurid' nature of those e-mails? The congressman who was in charge of the page program at that time was alarmed enough by Foley's e-mails to bring it to Hastert's attention.

Representative John Shimkus, who is now in charge of the page program said that new rules will be implemented to keep pages safe.

There have to be new rules to guard those young pages from our congressmen? They have to be protected from the people who are doing the nation's business?

These are the people we want running our government and passing the laws that protect us? These are the people we trust with our country? Boy, that gives me warm fuzzies.

Sick, sleazy people who do this kind of thing are to blame for their own actions. But, maybe, even more to blame, are the people who know about it and have the power to stop it, but do nothing or sweep it under the rug or simply get rid of the problem by sending the offender somewhere else. Why doesn't doing what's right ever cross their minds?

I don't understand that thinking. What do they hope to gain by doing nothing? Look at what happened to the Catholic Church when some in power chose to do nothing about pedophile priests. How much loss of credibility did the church suffer that could have been avoided if the right thing had been done immediately?

If the House leadership decided to do nothing about Foley because of politics, then brother, has that backfired or what?

How much better would it have been to dump Foley two years ago instead of having this blowup right before an election?

We all know the old saying "with great power comes great responsibility." It would be nice if power came with a little wisdom, too.

Roi-Namur all hands meeting addresses solutions to critical budget cut challenge for fiscal year 2007

Pay increases will pace cost of living, merit pay increases will continue

By J.J. Klein
Reporter

Fiscal budget 2007, fiber optic cable update, and frustration with inconsistency in food availability were topics addressed by Kwajalein Range Services management with Roi-Namur residents at an all-hands meeting Saturday.

Also in attendance, representing U.S. Army Kwajalein Atoll Commander Col. Stevenson Reed and Lt. Col. Justin Hirniak, was Master Sgt. Frank Cota.

John Pickler, KRS president, kicked off the forum with a reminder to keep safety a priority and praised the Roi-Namur community for its outstanding safety record.

“The bottomline is we came out with, what Col. Reed and I agree, is a very reasonable budget number and I am very optimistic about the projection for ‘07.”

— John Pickler, president,
Kwajalein Range Services

Turning to the fiscal budget, Pickler said, “If fiscal year ‘06 was a serious challenge for us, then fiscal year ‘07 was approaching critical. We all know that a lot of the money from the Federal budget is going to support the Global War on Terrorism...and natural disasters like Katrina.”

KRS made several concessions when presenting its budget proposals, but was committed to preserving the ability of Roi-Namur to conduct its missions while providing for logistical support and quality of life activities. KRS said it would not compromise on merit pay increases and promised pay increases would keep pace with the cost of living.

Working collaboratively with USAKA to brainstorm “creative budget solutions,” KRS will procure 18 ALTAIR tubes, instead of the six originally slated for purchase, said

Pickler, but admitted this was only “plugging the dam” and studies are underway to find ways to reduce consumption rate and determine the root cause of the problem.

“The bottomline is we came out with, what Col. Reed and I agree, is a very reasonable budget number,” said Pickler, “and I am very optimistic about the projection for ‘07.”

Pickler informed Roi-Namur residents of a newly-formed joint USAKA and KRS transition team, part of the Space and Missile Defense Command Transformation Program. The team is developing a plan for the installation commander that will lay out goals, objectives and a vision of the future status of USAKA/RTS.

Janet Burki, deputy program manager for Logistics, clarified a question from a previous meeting regarding priority in traveling to Kwajalein for medical appointments. Emergency medical issues receive first priority in getting manifested on a plane leaving Roi-Namur, next are personnel on mission cycle, followed by people with medical appointments on Kwajalein.

A Roi-Namur resident opened up the question and answer period with an inquiry regarding the outcome of the employee survey and requested a fiber optic update.

KRS Human Resources Manager Bob Bills explained the results of the survey, pointing out the areas of community activity services, amenities, cooperation, job satisfaction and medical facilities rated well with Kwajalein and Roi-Namur residents. Compensation and benefits, personal opportunities, management, food and communication scored the lowest on both islands.

KRS identified annual home leave, vacation, medical insurance, 401(k) and holidays as benefits considered most valuable by the workforce with regard to employee retention.

Figuring out how to handle the results of the survey within the constraints of budget realities becomes a significant challenge for KRS, said Pickler. The human resource team is meeting “to lay out some recommendations for us to take to our customer to see what we can do as a team in partnering to improve conditions,” continued Pickler.

On the topic of the fiber optic cable, Steve Hill, deputy program manager for Mission Operations, said plans for laying cable are proceeding and the forecast is that it could reach Kwajalein with a projected completion date of June 2008.

Another resident asked whether full banking services could be made available on an occasional basis on Roi-Namur. Pickler said KRS could not answer because banking services are a contractual agreement between Community Bank and USAKA, but would make some inquiries. The USAKA representative said he would address this issue with Col. Reed.

A large audience was on hand at the Roi-Namur Town Hall Meeting held on Saturday afternoon.

Although he did not have any complaints with the quality of food offered, a Roi-Namur resident questioned why there appeared to be a food shortage.

Two factors contributed to the inconsistent supply of food and commodities according to Pickler who insisted the problem would get better sooner rather than later.

Many of the key personnel involved in ordering food, materials and supplies were part of the Huntsville, Ala. relocation process creating unexpected gaps in the procurement process, said Pickler, and he believes this process should be cleared up now that these employees are in place.

Another contributing factor was the change in the shipping schedule from a 28-day to a 14-day cycle when delivery switched from barge to container ship. “It’s a different configuration,” said Pickler, “a different number of containers coming out of Guam.”

In addition, added KRS Roi-Namur Operations Manager Floyd Corder, problems with marine vessels necessitated the use of the ferry to transport shipments from Kwajalein, compounded by the breakdown of the crane. The unavailability of the crane allowed only for the transport of one van instead of the usual two vans to allow unloading with forklifts.

Another resident suggested a return to occasional extra flights that would allow Roi-Namur residents participation in Kwajalein community events like the 4th of July fireworks. He recommended KRS provide a special flight quarterly or once a month.

Pickler said KRS would make that possible if it could be assured that seats would be filled.

KRS plans to hold another all hands meeting on Roi-Namur in three to four months.

Bank of Marshall Islands charging check cashing fee

Hourglass reports

The Bank of the Marshall Islands, the only Marshallese-owned business operating on U.S. Army Kwajalein Atoll/Reagan Test Site, is going to start charging a 1 percent check cashing fee effective immediately. BOMI's board of directors recently indicated their branch on Kwajalein was not profitable, and they were planning on closing the branch. BOMI said that if they could use the same business model they use on Ebeye and in Majuro, BOMI could continue to do business on Kwajalein.

The only change employees will see is that now BOMI will use the same schedule of check cashing fees they employ on Ebeye and in Majuro. BOMI's continued presence on USAKA/RTS is beneficial to all: RMI employees have the convenience of banking on Kwajalein, and RMI employees do not have to go to Ebeye for financial transactions, ensuring greater efficiency for the Kwajalein workforce, and Enniburr residents are able to continue to bank from Roi-Namur.

A NIGHT OF INSPIRATION

The Kwajalein Art Guild invited anyone with even a whisper of artistic longings to catch a spark of inspiration as guild members displayed their talents and artistic projects at an open house on Monday evening.

On display were framed watercolors and photographs, delicate beach glass jewelry, glossy pieces of pottery, hanging stain glass works and perfectly stitched quilted pieces, all crafted by "resident" artists. Visitors to KAG were encouraged to sign up for classes.

Anyone in need materials of can purchase art supplies directly from the guild. KAG sponsors holiday and spring craft fairs and provides a scholarship for a graduating high school student pursuing a Fine Arts degree.

World War II artifact gives a new meaning to reuse, reduce, recycle

By Leslie Mead
Archaeologist

Sometimes a single artifact can be a fascinating window into the past. This is the case with the U.S. bayonet brought into the archaeology lab by a Kwajalein Range Services employee. When you hold this artifact, you are touching a rich and glorious history.

The story of this blade includes Presidents Theodore and Franklin Roosevelt, an armory founded by George Washington, and two World Wars. The bayonet stands as a testament to U.S. military and industrial strength and flexibility.

The artifact's story begins in 1905, when President Theodore Roosevelt determined the bayonet for a newly adopted rifle, the 1903 Springfield, should be replaced. The replacement was a 21-inch long bayonet with 16-inch blade and a wood and steel handle. It came to be called the 1905 Bayonet. Over two million were produced, stamped with the manufacturing arsenal's initials, date and serial number. If your great or great-great grandfather fought in the trenches during World War I, he probably carried it.

Between 1939 and 1941, with the WWII looming, Franklin Roosevelt requested an inventory be taken of all U.S. military equipment. Of the two million or so 1905 bayonets produced up until that time, only 588,000 remained in the military arsenal. Cutlery and tool manufacturers were immediately contracted to resume production and, by 1943, they delivered over a million and a half of the 1905 pattern weapons, stamped with their initials, date and serial number.

SA stands for Springfield Armory. The ordnance shell with flames signifies the bayonet is the property of U.S. Government military. The bayonet was made in 1917.

In response to comments from the military using the 1905, the government began testing a shorter, 10-inch blade in 1942. The military services were nearly unanimous in favor of the shorter bladed weapon. The new bayonet, identical to the 1905 except for blade length, was called the M1, and by the spring of 1943, it was approved for use.

Wartime shortages delayed the production of the M1 bayonet. To bridge the gap, the military contracted to have the existing supply of 1905's shortened for immediate use. To shorten the blade, the manufacturers cut off six inches, formed a new tip and replaced the wood parts of the handle with an early type of plastic. If your father, grandfather, or great grandfather served in World War II or Korea, he probably carried either an M1 or a shortened 1905 bayonet.

The blade of the bayonet is 10 inches and has a dark coating called "Parkerizing". The handle has bakelite grips, an early form of plastic invented in 1917. (Photos by Leslie Mead)

How does our bayonet fit into this historical timeline? The answers come from the manufacturer's marks. The initials S A on the blade are the armory mark for the Springfield Armory in Springfield, Mass. Established in 1777 by Washington, the Springfield Armory is the nation's oldest. The date stamp, "1917", below the armory mark is the year it was made. The number "655033" is the bayonet's serial number.

But our bayonet's story does not end there; the short blade and bakelite handle tell us it was shortened. The first clue when it was shortened is the original 1917 marking and the faint letters stamped on top of the serial number. Early shortening contracts allowed manufacturers to simply stamp their initials over the original manufacture marks. The faint letters stamped on top of the serial number are "UFH" for Union Fork and Hoe, the company that shortened the blade. UFH held the biggest of the shortening contracts and delivered the first ones to the U.S. military in the fall of 1943. Their contract was cancelled in August of 1945.

Our bayonet probably began its journey to Kwajalein at the height of WWII. The bayonet arrived on Kwajalein after February of 1944 and, once here, it was recycled into non-military use by local residents. It could be said this weapon of war represents a prime example of the many reduce, reuse and recycle efforts that the American military implemented during WWII and that its subsequent use by local residents was just a logical extension of this effort to conserve resources.

Columbus Day Run scheduled for Tuesday

By Bob Sholar

Can you top Kwajalein Running Club race records? Some of the division records are now over 20 years old and are badly in need of being broken. Come put your name on the record sheet, sign up for the Kwajalein Running Club's 29th Annual Columbus Day Runabout at 6 a.m., Tuesday. The course route follows the paved road perimeter of Kwajalein Island, starting and ending at Namu Weto Youth Center. One loop is 6.52 miles, two loops make 13.04 miles.

Those who can't get motivated to run can join race runners at the starting line for a leisurely sunrise walk to kick off the holiday.

For registration details, contact Bob or Jane Sholar. Entries should be delivered to Bob and Jane Sholar or left in the pouch attached to the front door of Quarters 123-C in new housing.

Race completion certificates and t-shirts will be awarded at Emon Beach Main Pavilion at 12:30 p.m. on race day. The grill will be fired up about noon. Participants are encouraged to bring their own meat to grill and/or a picnic lunch. Bring plates and utensils. KRC will provide hotdogs, burgers and sodas. As long time Race Director Eric Lindborg used to say, "In case you don't already have anything penciled in on that 6 a.m. slot for the Columbus Day Holiday, consider the Columbus Day Runabout."
