Take time out of your busy schedule to relax

I'd like to recommend that you come to the 10:45 a.m. Protestant Worship service, but not just to listen to me, to listen to the children. Regulars know that about halfway through the service I give what we call a Children's Message in which all the young people come up and sit on the floor and listen to a brief story, hopefully with an applicable point.

One Sunday I wanted to teach the children about the word sabbath which means "stop" in Hebrew. As they settled on the floor in front of me, I sat on a stool and held up a stop sign and said, "What's this?" One boy answered, "That's from school; you stole it!" I tried to tell him I didn't steal it, I'm the pastor. I borrowed it, and I promise I'll give it back (which I did).

You could imagine that it was a bit hard after that to get the children back on track and to understand what sabbath is all about. We are an easily distracted society.

Take the sabbath, for instance. This was a day that God instituted so that we could rest, take a break, stop. While we were sitting around taking a break, we decided to fill the silence with 101 activities, games, outings, events, clubs, chores, so that we need another day to rest from our day of rest. The holidays are coming up. I'm sure these were intended as special times of celebration to break from our normal patterns of work and remember what is most

Letters to the editor

Replacing priest is serious concern for many island residents

The first (and reiterated) question in the Town Hall meeting was regarding what changes Kwajalein Range Services was looking for in a Catholic priest. And the response was basically that we don't discuss personnel issues in the Town Hall meetings.

I feel that the replacement of a spiritual leader is not a personnel issue. It's not like the replacement of a clerk that sells you shoes, for example.

The people of Kwajalein, Roi and the outer islands who look to Father John for spiritual guidance, both inside and outside of the Catholic community should have some say, or at the very least have some answers regarding the replacement of their leader.

Col. [Stevenson] Reed's [U.S. Army Kwajalein Atoll commander] comment about the sadness and loneliness that occurs during the holiday season for those of us away from our families made me think: Is there a worse possible time to send away the man who so many of the unaccompanied look to for guidance? He has opened his heart and home to us. All were welcome, regardless of faith.

No, it's not a personnel issue, it's a personal issue. It affects many of us very personally. I am one.

Jabro School grateful for chance to observe Kwaj classes

I would like to take this wonderful opportunity to thank the following individuals for their warm welcome to those of us from the Jabro Private School who observed classrooms on Kwajalein.

Thank you to Judy Kirchner, Jane Premo, Bonnie Hogan, Susan Davis, Deb Johnson and Atota Matthew.

We, the teachers, really enjoyed every moment we spent in your school. Fortunately, we learned new things, met new friends and of course, enjoyed fun conversations with the school's nice principal, Deb Johnson.

I would also like to thank my friend, Cris Lindborg for stopping by to catch up with her little jokes. We, Marshallese, we say "ijamin meloklok kom" meaning to say "I will never forget you." Mrs. Kirchner, you are our big help.

Kwaj Town Hall meeting held Tuesday

USAKA, KRS leaders respond to increased insurance rates, retail pricing, housing, quality of life concerns

Hourglass reports

Insurance rate increases for Kwajalein Range Services employees, the Army's implementation of Lean Six Sigma and an explanation of the newly-formed Transition Team were key topics addressed at the Town Hall hosted by U.S. Army Kwajalein Atoll, KRS and the Kwajalein Police Department on Tuesday evening in the Kwajalein Jr. and Sr. High School Davye Davis Multi-Purpose Room.

USAKA Commander Col. Stevenson Reed introduced himself to Kwajalein residents and said over the past four months he was trying to participate in community events as much as possible. Reed turned the meeting over to John Pickler, KRS president, after sharing his belief that USAKA and KRS "walk out with the same, shared vision" for Kwajalein.

A Safety Share by Pickler encouraged residents to be careful with their holiday decorations and when using candles. Make sure indoor and outdoor Christmas lights are UL listed. He also urged residents to be mindful of winter driving conditions when visiting the United States over the holidays.

Reed weighed in with his holiday concerns, asking the community to be good neighbors during the holiday season and identify anyone who might be alone, depressed and possibly suicidal as a result of being so far from home during the Christmas season.

Lean Six Sigma

Reed announced the introduction of Lean Six Sigma, a program used by KRS and USAKA to train personnel "to look at and streamline processes and eliminate waste in those processes." He insisted it was not a program designed to eliminate jobs, "it's about being efficient."

Reed's goal is to identify 30 projects annually, beginning with streamlining warehousing from 44 warehouses to ten, perhaps even four, and using the savings to repair infrastructure around the island. One hundred percent of the cost savings will stay on island and can help fund needed improvements. Reed hopes to save $500,000 on the warehouse project alone.

Anyone with a recommendation for Lean Six Sigma consideration is urged to use their chain of command or mention it to a Six Sigma Yellow Belt.

Transition Team

"If you don't know the Global War on Terror has priority for all Army funding, then you've missed the mark," said Reed explaining the need to reshape the future of Kwajalein given current budget constraints and change of missions. The budget for fiscal year 2008 looks like it is funded at the IAT numbers, but "I still need to see it in writing," said Reed, who will continue to go after more money.

"RTS is going after Army missions," said Reed, explaining the Pentagon directive to pursue Army systems and testing on Kwajalein. To remain significant in the big picture of the Department of Defense, USAKA plans to expand its client base beyond U.S. Air Force programs and go after the Medium Extended Air Defense System, successor to the PATRIOT; and the Israeli Arrow Missile program. "I see us as being relevant to the Army," said Reed. "We see Kwajalein as not going anywhere. It's very much of national interest."

The transition team, established by USAKA as a tool to develop a course of action for the transformation of Kwajalein, is meeting weekly to look at how missions, the budget and the installation of fiber optics will shape the future of the island. The team, representative of the Kwajalein community, includes military personnel, Department of the Army civilians and contractor personnel. Reed expects a finalized course of action plan from the team by February, at which time he will brief the chain of command at SMDC in Huntsville and Washington, DC. The community will then be briefed once the plan is approved by the leadership.

"Kwajalein is a place for families," said Reed. He said the team may consider transferring jobs to Huntsville, Ala. and consolidating the schools as the island population decreases, but insisted the schools will not close. He said he doesn't think of these changes as downsizing, but as rightsizing. Reed maintains that it is important to keep Kwajalein an attractive place for potential and current employees. He cautioned people to wait until the transformation plan is finalized before making career decisions.

Missions/schools/police

KRS leadership briefed the audience on key departmental issues. There is a January date tentatively set for a SpaceX mission as well as several Intercontinental Ballistic Missile 2007 dates, said Doug Peters, KRS Plans and Operations manager. Peters added that the Kwajalein Missile Range Safety System Worthy upgrade, a joint USAKA, KRS, Massachusetts Institute of Technology/Lincoln Lab venture, is progressing successfully.

KRS updates concerns from April town meeting

John Pickler, Kwajalein Range Services president, began Tuesday night's Town Hall by updating the status of issues identified at the last Town Hall meeting.

- At the April Town Hall an audience member expressed confusion about the criteria for issuance of private vendor licenses. At Tuesday's meeting, Pickler said that KRS has streamlined the vendor's program and that no one is on the waiting list now. He said there is an SPI in the works to refine the program. "We've gotten over some of the hurdles that we had to go through" that were mentioned at the last Town Hall Meeting. He added that anyone with questions should contact Steve Beuby, KRS deputy manager for Community Activities at 50781.

- Another issue from April was the adult pool, which an audience member had described as in "terrible shape, green and gross." Pickler said Tuesday that the reports he had received from regular swimmers were that the pool is cleaner now than it used to be. The chlorination schedule and mixture have been changed to have a better, cleaner pool, and the personnel responsible for cleaning the pool have received additional training. "Clearly the pool needs a new paint job," Pickler said. He added that as funds become available that would be looked at.

- Another issue pending at the April meeting was repair of the street lights. Pickler said that the final installation of street lights will be complete by Nov. 25.

- In April an audience member asked why private groups can't use the Kabua Room for noncatered events. On Tuesday, Pickler said that KRS is now allowing private groups to bring their own food to gatherings at the Kabua Room as long as they are not selling food.

- The lack of organization of greeting cards at Ten-Ten was a concern at the last Town Hall. Audience members were frustrated with the disarray of the cards, such as envelopes with the wrong cards, etc. On Tuesday Pickler said, "We've tried to make that section at Ten-Ten more appealing." We still are addressing some of the issues of having some of the right cards there.

- A concern at the last Town Hall was "Can we get seasonal merchandise in at least a month before a holiday?" Pickler responded on Tuesday, "I hope you've noticed in Macy's that there's a lot of Christmas merchandise. We took what you said to heart in terms of retail merchandising and tried to get items in a more timely manner."

- Rodent control is an ongoing issue. Pickler asked Janet Burki, deputy program manager for Logistics, to respond to this concern. "We've increased inspections and monitoring in all of new housing. We've increased pest control services to working seven days a week." She added that a survey indicates that there has been an improvement and promised that Logistics would stay focused on the problems.

for the Kwajalein Schools Superintendent slot after the previously selected candidate withdrew one month into the school year for health reasons, said Steve Beuby, KRS deputy program manager for Community Services. The committee will not select a superintendent unless it finds the "right person," said Beuby. If the right candidate cannot be identified at this time, the process will be tabled until next summer when there is a wider pool of candidates. In the meantime, Principal Steve Howell will continue as acting superintendent.

Joe Barnes, Kwajalein Police Department chief announced a $250 reward for information leading to the apprehension of individual(s) suspected of breaking and entering two Kwajalein homes last weekend. He reminded residents to secure their homes at night and any time they are away from home, and offered to supply interested residents with a dowel to secure sliding glass doors.

Money

Quality of life and cost of living were the two hot topics in the question and answer period.

An audience member expressed his concerns about the cost of living and working in this community. "Do you think it's fair that families have to pay $1,300 a month for health care insurance," he asked. He added that between the costs of insurance, child care, retail and food, living in Kwajalein was prohibitively expensive. "I love it here, but I don't know how much longer I can afford to work for KRS." He added that some people work for 1980's era wages. "We're not all being paid like rocket scientists." His question brought applause from the audience.

Pickler responded to this employee's comments. He admitted that in planning for this year's budget cycle, "We did not take a serious look at changing the fringe amount" included in pay. "We insisted on a merit pay increase at 4.2 percent, but did not adjust the fringe rate. We will look at that for the next fiscal year."

Many insurance-related questions came on the heels of benefits open enrollment plan documents distributed by KRS Human Resources a few days before the meeting. Plan options include higher fees for employees. Bob Bills, KRS HR director, explained that the insurance carrier, Aetna, raised rates due to high claims experience on Kwajalein from the year before. Bills explained that medical costs generally went up 10-12 percent, but health insurance claims by our community went up 170 percent. He added that although rates have risen, there are no reductions in the plan coverage.

An audience member asked if KRS looked at other insurance companies besides Aetna. Bills responded that when KRS initially requested bids for insurance companies, it was hard to get three bidders. He said companies look at the premiums paid out in the previous year to make their bids. With that in mind, and the high dollar value claims against Aetna, he didn't think KRS would get a better bid. Another community member asked if employees can get their own insurance coverage. Bills said that employees can use insurance other than Aetna for their family members, but that employees have to use the KRS-chosen insurance provider. Otherwise the pool of covered employees would be made even smaller, and rates would go up more. He recommended that employees researching other insurance companies be careful to find a reputable company and be sure that they cover claims outside of the United States. Anyone with questions about insurance coverage can call Bills at 50767.

An audience member wanted to know why KRS doesn't 'piggyback' on its parent companies, Bechtel and Lockheed Martin, to get lower rates for health insurance. Bills responded that KRS is a separate entity from the other two companies and that it isn't legal for KRS to use their insurance. Another audience member questioned the discrepancies in fringe benefit pay for exempt and non-exempt employees. Exempt employees get a higher fringe rate payment per hour than non-exempt employees. The audience member said she thought, in reality, there is an unspoken directive from KRS managers to keep overtime to a minimum or nonexistent.

"There is no corporate policy against overtime," said Bills. He added that individual organizations may have limited it to meet their budget. Pickler reiterated his commitment to look at improving fringe payments and offered to clarify the audience member's individual situation in a private discussion.

Another questioner asked, "Can we lower hospital cost or rates to help with the insurance rates? Perhaps use Lean Six Sigma to improve the processes?" Pickler responded that KRS would also look into the hospital rates.

Other topics

An audience member inquired about the replacement for the Rev. John Sheehan, Roman Catholic priest, and what changes KRS was planning on making in that area.

Individual personnel issues are not discussed in public forums, according to Pickler, but he assured the audience that the Rev. Rick Funk, installation chaplain, and Monsignor James Gould were "working the issue" and there would be coverage for the Catholic community during the holidays, and a replacement priest will be assigned to the community. In a follow-up interview Funk said a substitute priest arrived Friday.

KRS explains difference in exempt, non-exempt

By Jeff Halliday

Kwajalein Range Services Legal

Exempt vs. non-exempt employees: What's the difference?

You have probably heard talk about exempt and non-exempt employees your whole working life. But for most people, the difference between the two categories is fuzzy at best. Do you even know what exempt workers are exempt from? It's not a simple subject, and the issue is, as usual, somewhat more complex on Kwajalein than elsewhere, but here's a primer.

The Fair Labor Standards Act is the U.S. law that requires that certain jobs get overtime pay for more than 40 hours per week. At the same time, FLSA makes some other jobs exempt from the requirement to pay overtime. Hence the term exempt employee. A company can be more generous than the FLSA requirements, but not less. Here comes the Kwaj complication: The FLSA does not apply on Kwajalein, but we use some of the same concepts and some of the same language, including the terms exempt and non-exempt.

So who is exempt? For a company like KRS, typically only executive, supervisory and professional positions are exempt positions. To qualify as exempt, they must be paid a salary rather than an hourly wage.

And who is non-exempt? The exemptions do not apply to manual laborers or other non-management employees in production, maintenance, construction and similar occupations. These are often called blue collar jobs. The exemptions also do not apply to police officers, fire fighters, paramedics and similar employees.

In short, the determination of exempt vs. non-exempt is based on the job description, not the job title, nor the employee's preference. There are advantages to each status. Some workers would rather be employed in non-exempt positions to ensure they're paid for every hour they work. However, exempt employees are often paid more than non-exempt employees, because they are expected to complete tasks regardless of the hours required to do them. If staying late or coming in early is required to do the job, exempt employees are frequently expected to do just that - without additional pay.

An audience member questioned why KRS does not purchase food and retail items through the military commissary and post exchange system since Kwajalein is a military post.

“DeCA [Defense Commissary Agency] and AAFES [Army and Air Force Exchange Service] service the military community,” said Chief Warrant Officer Phyllis Mitchell, USAKA Community Activities chief. “AAFES doesn’t give 100 percent back into the Recreation Fund.”

“DeCA and AAFES will not embrace us” as a government-owned, contractor-operated facility, said Pickler. The small size of the Kwajalein community poses a challenge in purchasing food and retail items, and KRS is looking at options to bring costs down, such as procuring food from less expensive vendors, added Pickler.

The status of the finger piers at the Small Boat Marina was addressed by Janet Burki, KRS deputy program manager for Logistics, who acknowledged that the piers have sustained a lot of damage lately. She said the Quality of Life Integrated Product Team voted to fund the repair of the second pier, and KRS is working to get it back in the water. Repairs on the third pier fall under an unfunded requirement, and “we are trying to find creative ways of finding funding,” said Burki. In answer to a resident’s request to install cleats on the docks versus the metal rings already in place, which are cumbersome to use, Burki agreed to look into it.

“We can’t fix some of the mold problems and whoever designed new housing did it wrong.”

— Col. Stevenson Reed,
commander, U.S. Army Kwajalein Atoll

A regular diner at the Café Pacific and member of the newly-formed meal-card holders’ committee praised the initial efforts at improvement by the dining facilities managers and staff, but said things were beginning to “slack off.”

Café Pacific dining facilities managers are working with the committee, but are waiting for the committee to come back and put their specific issues on the table, said Beuby. “If there are any dwindling of improvements, I don’t know about them,” Beuby said.

Rumors about a forthcoming renovation to the Café Pacific Dining Hall, which included a closure of from nine months to a year, were put to rest.

Burki responded, “We are in the preliminary planning stages.” Reed added that $6.5 million has been allocated in the 2007 budget for sustainment, renovation and modernization projects. Repairs and renovations of the Café Pacific will use $2 million of that money. A construction time frame was not identified. The Yokwe Yuk Club and the Roi-Namur pier will also undergo renovations and repairs.

Housing

Not slated for renovation or repairs, but instead removal, are the 28 uninhabitable trailers which were the topic of a recent newspaper column by Reed. Six trailers were moved to the southern end of Kwajalein and are awaiting destruction. Twenty-two more will be removed within the next eight months at a cost $1,000 per trailer. Reed allocated $30,000 out of the USAKA budget to fund

Kwaj police looking into three break-in incidents

Hourglass reports

There have been three incidents of breaking and entering on Kwajalein in November.

Two of the break-ins were over Veterans Day weekend.

“Basically, in both these incidents we had victims report to the Kwajalein Police Department that a perpetrator [or perpetrators] entered their residence and removed several bottles of alcoholic beverages,” Joe Barnes, KPD chief of police, said. “The quarters entered were identified to be unsecured. In one of the incidents, a description of a suspect was provided to KPD; however, there have been no arrests at this time. The investigation is still ongoing, and the community has been informed to provide any assistance in these incidents. Residents in the vicinity of the burglaries have been made aware of the incident.”

Barnes continued, “When the crime is reported, officers respond to the scene and after assessing the situation they obtain as much detail information as possible from the victim. A detailed description of the items removed and collecting evidence from the crime scene are obtained. Then the process of identifying suspects begins. The residents in the vicinity of the burglaries are contacted for the purpose of possibly obtaining additional information concerning the crime.”

Barnes said KPD is offering a $250 reward to persons with information resulting in an arrest and conviction in these breaking and entering cases.

The community can help fight crime by reporting to KPD any suspicious activity in their community. KPD has a Crime Stoppers Hotline, 50966, to report any crime-related information.

November’s breaking and entering incidents were the first since May, when there was one.

the removal.

There is no plan to replace the removed trailers, nor money for new construction of residential housing, said Pickler. The last dome built to replace decaying trailers was an extra dome home built from money saved in the dome home building project.

One Kwajalein resident in new housing wondered if his home, which shares walls on both sides with condemned units, was in danger of encroaching mold. He also wondered why so many homes were left empty and if there was a record of concerns regarding the unoccupied housing that he could review.

Sixteen homes are off the market for mold issues ranging from minor to bad and will be left unoccupied not so much “as a matter of health, but due to a lack of funding for repairs,” said Flynn Gideon, KRS Logistics

Sportfishing club holds weekend tournament

Anglers compete in two-day tournament for bragging rights in six fishing categories

By Trudy Butler
KAISC tournament director

Eighteen teams, with anglers from Kwajalein, Ebeye, Third Island and Roi-Namur, participated in the two-day fishing tournament held Sunday and Monday.

The tournament was sponsored by the Kwajalein Atoll International Sportfishing Club. Anglers had a choice of fishing a full day, 8 a.m. to 5:30 p.m., on Sunday or Monday, or if they were really hard core, fishing both days.

Fish categories for the tournament included marlin, more than 200 pounds; ahi (yellowfin tuna), ono (wahoo), mahi mahi, other tuna (aku or dogtooth) as well as aggregate weight. There was also a prize given to the team that landed the smallest fish.

One marlin was landed during the tournament by Team Leah, Capt. Rines Lokejak and crew. Although she was a beauty of a fish, she weighed in at 129 pounds and did not meet the minimum weight requirements for the marlin category.

Team Smells Like Fish, Captains Ron Tsubamoto and Jack Picco and crew Bill Craft, Dan Bogart and Tony Veirup, ran away with the ahi category with their 54-pound catch.

Team Win Em All, Capt. Lenny Hamamoto and crew Jan Paget, Tish Kuskulis, Ross Hamamoto and Fralene Peters, captured the mahi mahi category with their 17.5-pound catch.

Team Fish That Gotta Weigh, Capt. Ragnar Opiniano and crew Pat Dowell, Ken Riley, Jake Opiniano and Dane Bishop, won the ono category with their 34-pound fish.

The other tuna category went to Team Ek-Kilepleb – Big Fish from Roi-Namur, Capt. Joe Coleman and crew Jeff Smathers, April Simon and Darren Wilburn for their dog-tooth tuna weighing in at 22.2 pounds and the aggregate weight category went to team Hard Core from Kwajalein, Capt. Tom Jack and crew Chris Maurer, Yoshi Kemem, Brandon Ridens and Riley Setton, for their total of 212 pounds of fish caught for day one of the tournament. Team Hard Core fished both days of the tournament.

Last but not least, the smallest fish category was a split between team Win Em All for their 1 pound mahi mahi and Team Relimen, Capt. John Norris and crew Alan Godwin, James Chong-Gum, Ted Galloway and Patty Galloway, for their 1 pound aku. A total of $4,300 in prize money was awarded for the tournament.

The weather on Sunday and Monday was just about perfect for fishing. There were lots of anglers participating in the tournament and most importantly of all, there were plenty of fish caught.

This 129-pound black marlin was caught by Capt. Rines Lokejak and his crew during the two-day tournament.

important to us, but we are easily distracted.

The holidays are a special time to gather with family and friends, to call home, to even take a nap. We don't need to do every event to make it worthwhile. Rather than shop 'til you drop, we should probably just drop the pressure to pick the perfect gift. Let's reduce the weight on our social calendar and relax.

So if you see me this holiday season standing on a street corner holding up a stop sign, just remember this, I didn't steal it, but I do mean it.

Housing supervisor. The resident was invited to view housing records for unoccupied homes at the Housing Office.

"Everybody deserves a quality home to live in," said Reed explaining that he walked Sgt. Maj. of the Army Kenneth O. Preston through various housing units to show him the magnitude of problems with mold, shoddy construction and rat infestation. Reed also said a safety officer from SMDC was looking at the housing mold issue and "we are still waiting for an answer."

We can't fix some of the mold problems and "whoever designed new housing did it wrong," Reed said. He explained the cost to repair Navy housing, or hard-sided housing, is $135,000 per duplex, never mind the cost to repair homes in the new housing area, but vowed to continue to work at identifying the problems. Reed hopes to invest money saved elsewhere for housing repairs.

A Kwajalein resident asked if USAKA would consider dropping the $1,500 charge for moving out of new housing away from rats and mold, and into available housing.

"No," said Reed. In a follow-up interview with Gideon, he said it is difficult and extremely rare to be allowed a fee-waived change of housing. He said that typically when repairs are made to occupied housing that the families remain in their homes; but if conditions warrant, are moved into temporary quarters during the repairs, then returned to their homes.

In the spirit of Thanksgiving an audience member asked the community to remember service members deployed in support of the Global War on Terror by visiting the America Supports You Web site and purchasing a music compact disc to be sent to troops. The Web site is <http://www.americasupportsyou.mil/americasupportsyou/>.

A Kwajalein resident asked KRS to give more notice when holding meetings of importance to residents, such as the current round of briefings on employee benefits. Pickler agreed that more notice is appropriate.

Reed and Pickler promised to hold town hall meetings approximately every six months; the next one is expected in May.
