Thanks for our enjoyable evening

My mother used to tell me, "If you can't say anything nice, don't say anything." But I never let that stop me.

As many people know, I've never been shy when it comes to talking about things that irritate me and make me less than happy.

In this case, however, I'm actually going to say something nice.

My wife and I celebrated our 37th wedding anniversary this past week.

Usually, I'm tighter than bark on a tree when it comes to money, but what the heck, number 37 only comes once, right?

So we had one of those dinner-on-the-beach experiences. You know, with the tiki torches and the bamboo screening and Louie Armstrong music playing.

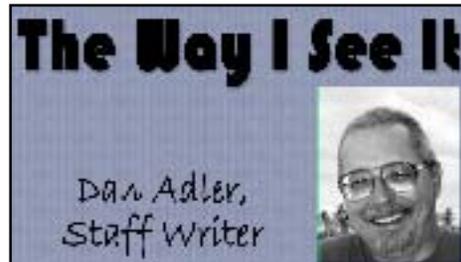

I was with the woman I've loved for more than half of my life and the evening was wonderful.

The food was worthy of a first-class restaurant. We were served shrimp cocktail, a great salad, dinner rolls and the best lobster and filet I've had in a long time. By the time the biggest piece of cheesecake I've ever seen came for dessert, we were near our limit of food intake. But we soldiered on and ate that cheesecake.

The two Marshallese men who took care of us were great. You'd have a hard time finding better service anywhere.

They were always there to fill the wine glasses and believe me, they kept filling them.

Neither one of us is what you could call a big drinker. My wife gets tipsy on a half glass of wine. All I'll say is she was pretty happy that night.

When dinner was over, we teetered back home full of good food and all that wine to start our next 37 years together.

So I'd like to thank the people who made our evening so enjoyable and our anniversary that much better.

Post office gets high marks on inspection

By Yael Beals
Editor

The Kwajalein post office received high marks on its recent inspection. From March 31 to April 11, postal workers received training in addition to their required annual inspection.

Felix Mendiola, the United States Army Pacific Region Program Manager, and Arthur James, the Assistant Program Manager in charge of Custodian of Postal Effects (COPE), are the inspectors for military post offices in the pacific region.

A postal inspection assesses all aspects of postal work. The inspectors make sure the post office is in compliance with United States Postal Service regulations; Department of Defense regulations; building security requirements and customer service requirements. Also, overall knowledge of counter service, maintenance of post office boxes, processing, operations, etc. is assessed.

The inspectors look for discrepancies and inconsistencies, then provide training and education where needed. "A person can work postal for 50 years and still not know everything," exclaimed Karla Long, postal manager. "It is a continuous process of learning. There are so many rules and regulations that it is impossible for anyone to know everything. Even the inspectors learn things when questions are posed and the search begins to find the answer," continued Long.

The inspectors asked employees numerous questions in order to get a sense of their postal knowledge. "All clerks were found to be quite knowledgeable in their jobs," said Long. "They only give unsatisfactory and satisfactory ratings and we received a satisfactory and commendable rating, which is awesome. There were no outstanding discrepancies, which is rare, and we have worked really hard to get to this point." Long continued, "it is a team effort and I thank everyone on the postal team for their efforts and support. We have a great group of people here. They are conscientious

What if I'm a victim of identity theft? Part I

USAKA Legal Office
Contributor

Identify theft is a rapidly growing concern worldwide. The Federal Trade Commission notes that in the United States alone, upwards of 10 million identity thefts occur every year. Identity theft is a serious crime and could affect you in ways you have never thought possible. Even if you do not have a credit card someone could steal your identity, then fraudulently establish credit in your name and then proceed to destroy your personal credit. Other scams include establishing fraudulent businesses in your name and then scamming others in your name! When this occurs, not only are you a victim but you are looked upon by others as an identity thief. The Federal Trade Commission has published the following steps to take when confronted with the theft of your identity.

If you are a victim of identity theft, take the following four steps as soon as possible, and keep a record with the details of your conversations and copies of all correspondence.

1. Place a fraud alert on your credit reports, and review your credit reports.

Fraud alerts can help prevent an identity thief from opening any more accounts in your name. Contact the toll-free fraud number of any of the three consumer reporting companies below to place a fraud alert on your credit report. You only need to contact one of the three companies to place an alert. The company you call is required to contact the other two, which will place an alert on their versions of your report, too. If you do not receive a confirmation from a company, you should contact that company directly to place a fraud alert.

Equifax: 1-800-525-6285;
www.equifax.com; P.O. Box 740241,
Atlanta, GA 30374-0241

Experian: 1-888-EXPERIAN (397-3742); www.experian.com; P.O. Box 9532, Allen, TX 75013

TransUnion: 1-800-680-7289;
www.transunion.com; Fraud Victim
Assistance Division, P.O. Box 6790,
Fullerton, CA 92834-6790

Once you place the fraud alert in your file, you're entitled to order one free copy of your credit report from each of the three consumer reporting companies, and, if you ask, only the last four digits of your Social Security number will appear on your credit reports. Once you get your credit reports, review them carefully. Look for inquiries from companies you haven't contacted, accounts you didn't open, and debts on your accounts that you can't explain. Check that information, like your Social Security number, address(es), name or initials, and employers are correct. If you find fraudulent or inaccurate information, get it removed. When you correct your credit report, use an Identity Theft Report with a cover letter explaining your request, to get the fastest and most complete results.

Continue to check your credit reports periodically, especially for the first year after you discover the identity theft, to make sure no new fraudulent activity has occurred.

2. Close the accounts that you know, or believe, have been tampered with or opened fraudulently.

Call and speak with someone in the security or fraud department of each company. Follow up in writing, and include copies (not originals) of supporting documents. It's important to notify credit card companies and banks in writing. Send your letters by certified mail, return receipt requested, so you can document what the company received and when. Keep a file of your correspondence and enclosures.

When you open new accounts, use new Personal Identification Numbers (PINs) and passwords. Avoid using easily available information like your mother's maiden name, your birth date, the last four digits of your Social Security number or your phone number, or a series of consecutive numbers.

If the identity thief has made charges or debits on your accounts, or has fraudulently opened accounts, ask the company for the forms to dispute those transactions:

- For charges and debits on existing accounts, ask the representative to send you the company's fraud dispute forms. If the company doesn't have special forms, use the sample letter to dispute the fraudulent charges or debits. In either case, write to the company at the address given for "billing inquiries," NOT the address for sending your payments.

- For new unauthorized accounts, you can either file a dispute directly with the company or file a report with the police and provide a copy, called an "Identity Theft Report," to the company.

- If you want to file a dispute directly with the company, and do not want to file a report with the police, ask if the company accepts the FTC's ID Theft Affidavit. If it does not, ask the representative to send you the company's fraud dispute forms.

- However, filing a report with the police and then providing the company with an Identity Theft Report will give you greater protection. For example, if the company has already reported these unauthorized accounts or debts on your credit report, an Identity Theft Report will require them to stop reporting that fraudulent information. Use the cover letter to explain to the company the rights you have by using the Identity Theft Report.

Once you have resolved your identity theft dispute with the company, ask for a letter stating that the company has closed the disputed accounts and has discharged the fraudulent debts. This letter is your best proof if errors relating to this account reappear on your credit report or you are contacted again about the fraudulent debt.

3. File a complaint with the Federal Trade Commission.

You can file a complaint with the FTC using the online complaint

Bowling center policy change, requiring reservation

Amy Hansen
Contributor

The Bowling Center is changing its operations but it will continue to be a great place for group activities such as leagues, parties and special events. The Bowling Center is now available on a reservation basis only. Patrons who wish to bowl can reserve the facility by calling the Community Activities office, a minimum of 24 hours in advance to make arrangements. If a reservation is underway and there are open lanes, a sign will be hung outside the Bowling Center building and "walk-in" patrons are also welcome.

There is a minimum reservation fee of $30 for two hours, which is paid at the time of the reservation. Each additional hour is $15. This payment is applied to the final bill collected at the Bowling Center after the event. New rates go into effect Thursday with the following prices: $2.25 per game, $1.50 shoe rental, and 3.00 per month locker rental.

The Bowling Center's next monthly special event is Red Pin Monday's 6-9 p.m., May 5. Come join the fun and try to win a free game!

Hobbyshop and Woodshop increase fees

Denise Dorn

A new fee schedule is effective Thursday.

The Kwajalein Hobby Shop is an artistic oasis for island residents. The services offered will not be changing and patrons can continue to enjoy this alternative to the many outdoor recreation opportunities. However, in order to keep this facility viable, a new fee structure begins Thursday in order to generate revenue needed to help offset costs.

The biggest change is a new usage fee for facility access. This fee covers some of the overhead expenses such as, saw blades and drill bits, in the woodshop and glazes and firing cones in the pottery/ceramic side, as well as labor. Materials will continue to be available on a pay-as-you-go basis, however there will be fee increases.

We hope to maintain the wonderful atmosphere you've helped create at the Hobby Shop. Thank you in advance for your understanding.

The huge engines at the power plant use hundreds of thousands of gallons of diesel fuel each month. The Power Reduction plan has helped to reduce the amount of fuel used and has resulted in significant savings.

Power reduction plan pays off

Yael Beals
Editor

The Kwajalein community saves thousands of dollars per day by using less electricity.

In August 2008, the US Army Kwajalein Atoll implemented a power reduction program. One element involved publishing articles and advertisements in the Hourglass as part of a grass roots publicity campaign to promote energy conservation within the Kwajalein community.

Dan Eggers, who manages utilities, calculates the savings of $5,784 at the Kwajalein power plant per day thanks to the cooperation and efforts of the Kwajalein community.

The power plant responds to the demand for electricity usage on Kwajalein. "We need to have enough operating capacity to provide for each piece of equipment and light that gets turned on," explained Eggers.

In March, total fuel usage was 420,856 gallons compared to March 2006, when we burned 480,035 gallons. Today's fuel rate is $3.03 per gallon and the 1909 gallons not burned each day translates to a saving of $5,784.27 per day—a reduction of 14 per cent or $179,312 for the month. "We see the results of the effort by the community to conserve in reduced load," said Eggers.

Jim Landgraff, US Army Kwajalein Atoll utilities evaluator, explained that the price of fuel is volatile. "You come to work one morning and you receive the message that the cost of your fuel increased by more than 30%. The last fuel hike was in December and it went from $2.30 to $3.03; that's 73 cents a gallon. This caused the Kwajalein power plant fuel bill to go up 4.3 million dollars."

According to Landgraff, the price of fuel affects every person and everything on the island including: scuba diving, fishing and boating. In 1999, B-boat fuel cost 92 cents a gallon and today it costs $3.22 a gallon. Also, prices are raised for everything that is shipped or produced.

Part of USAKA's Power Reduction Plan is an initiative to reduce the installation's footprint, which is an ongoing effort to empty and shut down unnecessary facilities and turn off equipment that use energy and require maintenance.

"With the new transition plan, [the footprint reduction plan] has reached its zenith," explained Fred McNickle, who manages Kwajalein Range Services Public Works. According to McNickle, the plan involves consolidating facilities, relocating functions and eventual disposition of buildings. "In the past few years we have demolished Building 932, the old community activities facility; Building 1074, the old warehouse; and Building 709, the old shipping and receiving warehouse, which was severely damaged due to high winds and beyond economical repair. [They also demolished] residential quarters 401, 403, 422 as well as removed and shutdown numerous trailers,” explained McNickle.

Removing trailers is another part of the footprint reduction plan. “The Kwaj Power Plant uses approximately $9,067 of fuel per year, at the current cost, to produce electricity for each trailer,” noted Eggers. In 2008, 88 trailers will be removed from service.

McNickle explained that trailer residents are relocated based on their hiring status. They will move to a single bachelor quarter room, bachelor quarter suite or a hard house.

David Darden, who works for the Kwajalein Police Department, lived in a trailer for the past two years. On April 3, he moved to the Reef BQ. Darden said he misses his kitchen. “It doesn’t upset or disturb me to move back into the BQ. It’s very understandable with the current budget situation.” This is Darden’s third tour on Kwajalein and he also lived in the Reef BQ in 1996. “Seeing the marvelous renovations to the Reef BQ, it looks like a miracle has taken place,” exclaimed Darden.

Ed Lyvers, who works with the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, Lincoln Laboratory, has been living in a trailer on Kwajalein for two and a half years. “[I] use electricity as if I were paying the electric bill,” said Lyvers adding that if he were forced to move into a BQ, he would leave Kwajalein.

Decisions had to be made about closing facilities. “The metering of the Yokwe Yuk Club displayed a surprisingly high power draw,” said Eggers.

McNickle, explained, “around 1999, the Yuk Club kitchen was shut down due to serious structural issues. Several repair options were investigated; however, the cost to return the 55 year-old facility to a safe and economical condition was beyond any economic justification. In addition, the electrical operating cost alone was $5,000 plus per month so closure gave an additional reduction in power and the associated costs.” The Yokwe Yuk Club officially closed on Oct. 31.

Steve Cummings, who manages food services, explained that the bakery recently closed down its wholesale operation, shutting down two large ovens which ran 16 hours a day. “We now bring frozen bread in from [the] United States. Everything else: Donuts, cakes and cookies, we make here everyday.”

Angela Mitchell, manager of the Vets’ Hall, has lived on Kwajalein for three years. “The Vets’ hall is a large building but only parts of it are in use at any given time, so it’s important that we have the air-conditioners set accordingly. Of course, lights and refrigerators are kept in check too,” said Mitchell. “I am teaching my five year old son the relationship between electricity and money, so we concentrate on efficiency at home as well,” continued Mitchell.

Eggers comments, if our thermostat temperature [at work], were set-back from 74 to 80 degrees, there would be substantial savings. The same is true in our homes. “This can be accomplished with little or no investment, merely applying a change in mind-set about waste. This is a large potential for savings, [that] lies in setting back our thermostats at night or when an area is unoccupied,” said Eggers.

Stephanie Los, system engineer III, who lives in the Palm bachelor quarters, follows her mother’s advice when it comes to conserving energy. “I still do the same things my mother taught me; I’ve adjusted my room temp; take short showers; turn off lights when I leave the room; and don’t leave the water running when I don’t have to,” said Los.

Power reduction has not been affected significantly by the decline in population so far. According to Eggers, to date, population changes have not had a large impact on electricity usage because rooms and residences that will be reissued continue to be air-conditioned. On Kwajalein, air-conditioning consumes the most electricity.

“Everyone can be part of the power reduction plan by employing common sense. With regard to the use of electrical devices; if you are done using it, switch it off. Or, better yet, ask yourself, ‘Do I really need it?’ before switching it on,” exclaimed Ron Martin, Superintendent, Kwajalein Power Plant.

The power plant is the lifeblood of Kwajalein.

and caring and really do their best to provide the best customer service possible.”

“Kudos to the postal staff and the COPE at the Kwajalein post office. We were very pleased with the [inspection] results,” said CW4 Mitchell, U.S. Army Kwajalein Atoll post office evaluator.

The Kwajalein post office is the first military post office that is run by civilians. The operations portion is run by Kwajalein Range Services and Sgt. Jesus Rodriguez is responsible for the COPE duties.

Post office staff received training for new postal procedures. “We will be setting up an official mail center which takes care of all business mail. This will help us process the business mail a little quicker and provide better and more accurate service,” said Long.

Anyone sending mail to a company or department will write the company name first, then write the department or attention to a person, then write APO, AP, 96555; i.e. Kwajalein Range Services (KRS), ATTN: Finance or ATTN: Jane Doe, APO, AP 96555 or HQ, USAKA Command, ATTN: Community Activities, Mr. John Doe, APO, AP, 96555. Mitchell explains, units and organizations will have until 1 September to contact their business partners or clients to inform them of their official mailing address.

“I felt the training was very important and useful, especially for new employees. The Postal service [is] a very serious business and we need to make sure everyone is on the same sheet of music,” said Rodriguez. “I would like to thank and congratulate everyone in the post office for a job well done. They give 150 per cent everyday to support the mission and the residents on Kwajalein.”

“The community can be assured that they are getting the best possible service available through military means,” exclaimed Long.

The post office staff would like to remind people that resale items (items sold for profit) including, jewelry, clothing, scuba gear, photography, perfumes, etc. can be shipped through the following methods; DHL (<http://www.dhl-usa.com/home/home.asp>), Continental cargo (<http://cargo.cocargo.com/cargo/shipping/>), shipping and receiving (contact Jimmy Matsanuga, 53444), or the Ebeye post office (hours: Monday-Friday 8 a.m.-12 p.m. and 1-4 p.m.).

Please do not ship resale items through the Kwajalein post office. This is a Department of Defense regulation and only official DOD businesses can use military means. According to CW4 Mitchell, private organizations may use the Military Post Offices for notifying the Kwajalein community of a club or business activity, however, the use of MPO’s for private organizations are intended for letter mail only. Letters addressing this will go out to all private organizations, private vendors and residents.

Anyone sending mail to a company or department must write the company name first, then write attention to the department name or a person.

29th Annual Rustman Triathlon coming Monday

Back in 1980, some of the Kwajalein Running Club’s founders thought it would be fun to have one of those, then unusual swim-bike-run endurance events called “triathlons”.

Kwajalein Running Club will conduct the 29th Annual Rustman Triathlon on Monday. Yes, at Kwajalein, we have one of the oldest annual triathlons in existence. If you want to watch the race, the swim starts at 4 p.m. at the dock security check point and proceeds to Emon beach. A good vantage point to watch the biking and running is from anywhere along 9th street. The bike route travels 9th street six times and the run route travels 9th street three times. The first finishers should be arriving back at Emon Beach around 6-6:30 p.m. Finishers are expected to continue to arrive through 8 p.m.

An even shorter triathlon for youngsters, the “Rusty Family” will be held the following weekend, starting at Emon Beach at 4:30 p.m. on Monday May 12. Distances are 500-yard swim, 10-mile bike and 2-mile run.

Information and registration information for both events is available in a pouch posted on the Mini-Mall Bulletin Board. Questions? Call Bob or Jane Sholar, 51815. Pre-registration is required.

Race day morning set up crew is 7:30-10:30 a.m. on race day.

form; or call the FTC's Identity Theft Hotline, toll-free: 1-877-ID-THEFT (438-4338); TTY: 1-866-653-4261; or write Identity Theft Clearinghouse, Federal Trade Commission, 600 Pennsylvania Avenue, NW, Washington, DC 20580. Be sure to call the Hotline to update your complaint if you have any additional information or problems.

By sharing your identity theft complaint with the FTC, you will provide important information that can help law enforcement officials across the nation track down identity thieves and stop them. The FTC can refer victims' complaints to other government agencies and companies for further action, as well as investigate companies for violations of laws the agency enforces.

Additionally, you can provide a printed copy of your online Complaint form to the police to incorporate into their police report. The printed FTC ID Theft Complaint, in conjunction with the police report, can constitute an Identity Theft Report and entitle you to certain protections. This Identity Theft Report can be used to (1) permanently block fraudulent information from appearing on your credit report; (2) ensure that debts do not reappear on your credit report; (3) prevent a company from continuing to collect debts that result from identity theft; and (4) place an extended fraud alert on your credit report.

4. File a report with your local police or the police in the community where the identity theft took place.

Call your local police department and tell them that you want to file a report about your identity theft. Ask them if you can file the report in person. If you cannot, ask if you can file a report over the Internet or telephone. If the police are reluctant to take your report, ask to file a "Miscellaneous Incident" report, or try another jurisdiction, like your state police. You also can check with your state Attorney General's office to find out if state law requires the police to take reports for identity theft. Check the Blue Pages of your telephone directory for the phone number or check www.naag.org for a list of state Attorneys General.

When you go to your local police department to file your report, bring a printed copy of your FTC ID Theft Complaint form, your cover letter, and your supporting documentation. The cover letter explains why a police report and an ID Theft Complaint are so important to victims.

Ask the officer to attach or incorporate the ID Theft Complaint into their police report. Tell them that you need a copy of the Identity Theft Report (the police report with your ID Theft Complaint attached or incorporated) to dispute the fraudulent accounts and debts created by the identity thief. (In some jurisdictions the officer will not be able to give you a copy of the official police report, but should be able to sign your Complaint and write the police report number in the "Law Enforcement Report" section.)

Next week we will explore in more detail exciting topics also related to identity theft such as "fraud alerts" credit freezes and identity theft reports.
