MANIT MINUTE

Navigation and Stick Charts

In order to navigate in the open ocean, sailors from the Marshall Islands used observation of the only two things visible – sky and water. An apprentice would spend years memorizing the night sky, ocean features and other signs like cloud shape and flight patterns of birds. The stick charts were a teaching tool but are not maps in the western sense. The knowledge contained in a stick chart would be meaningless without the guidance of its maker. The information would be committed to memory. Stick charts were not taken out to sea as tools.

THE RUMOR MILL

Col. Joseph Gaines addresses circulating rumors head-on. Rumors can earn from one to five ears. One ear is an unfounded rumor, while a rumor earning five ears is the truth.

Rumor: Self Help might be open on Mondays again.

After receiving comments from residents that Self Help should be open on weekends, the hours are in fact being reconsidered. According to KRS leadership, the hours will be reorganized so Self Help can open on Mondays while keeping overall number of weekly hours the same. Final details will be announced at a later date. The bottom line is USAKA and KRS are working to accommodate residents' needs while staying within current constrained resource limits.

THE KWAJALEIN HOURGLASS

The Kwajalein Hourglass is named for the insignia of the U.S. Army 7th Infantry Division, which liberated the island from the forces of Imperial Japan on Feb. 4, 1944.

The Kwajalein Hourglass is an authorized publication for military personnel, federal employees, contractor workers and their families assigned to U.S. Army Kwajalein Atoll. Contents of the Hourglass are not necessarily official views of, or endorsed by, the U.S. Govern-

Manit Day celebrates tradition, culture of the Marshall Islands

Article and photos by Catherine Layton
Associate Editor

Manit Day is the Marshallese celebration of their culture and tradition. Ebeye first celebrated Manit Day in 1986 after the Republic of the Marshall Islands became a sovereign nation. The celebration on Kwajalein, which includes demonstrations of Marshallese culture and traditional living such as weaving of mats and baskets, rope-making and coconut husking, started in 1998 with the opening of the Marshallese Cultural Center.

USAKA Commander Col. Joseph Gaines spoke briefly at the opening of the event, saying, “Manit Day is a celebration of Marshallese culture that showcases the talents of everyday Marshallese citizens. We are fortunate to be able to observe and participate in such a wonderful tradition. We thank you for this opportunity and hope that the residents of USAKA can learn and benefit from traditional Marshallese culture by sharing in today’s events.” Gaines went on to thank the Marshallese Cultural Center’s board members, staff and volunteers for putting together the celebration.

This year’s event was highlighted by a dance performance by the Ri’katak students from the high school. The students encouraged members from the audience to dance with them; all seemed enthusiastic to participate. There was also a booth where Kwajalein residents could sample Marshallese cooking and food items, provided by the Jinetiptip Marshallese women’s club.

Everyone was invited to stroll through the impressive cultural center, a museum featuring exhibits about the Marshallese way of life involving shells, fishing, navigation, weaving and carving.

Prescilla Korok, left, and Leroij Seagull Kabua James enjoy the festivities surrounded by women weaving traditional mats and baskets.

Iroij Kotak Loeak, left, welcomes the audience to the Manit Day celebration on Kwajalein in Marshallese, while Harden Lelet translates in English.

Local Scouts converse worldwide

By Catherine Layton
Associate Editor

The Jamboree-on-the-Air is an annual Scouting worldwide event held on the third full weekend of October each year. The event is a 24-hour period where Scouts from across the world get a chance to speak to each other via ham radio. Luckily for the local Scout troops, Kwajalein has an active and willing Ham Radio Club, enabling the event to take place.

The event is sponsored by the Boy Scouts of America at the national level. A few radio channels are dedicated to the event to make contacting other Scouts easier.

"This year we had the most Scout contacts ever out of the last six years that I have been participating," said Scoutmaster Corey Wiley. "We had about 15 Scouts from Pack 135 and Troop 314 participate this year."

Rob Struppeck, a member of the Ham radio club and volunteer for the JOTA, indicated that solar flares are more in favor of transmitting this year, which potentially contributed to an increase of signal. "Dawn Gray has been quite helpful by registering our groups on the national website, letting all other Scouting groups know we will be out there listening and at what specific time," said Wiley. "We had great conversations with Scouts in New Jersey and North Carolina as well as Washington state. Past years we have reached Scouts aboard the USS Missouri anchored in Pearl Harbor," he said.

The event is meant to unite Scouts from all nations. It is a great introduction to ham radio. As Cub Scouts progress to Boy Scouts, communications becomes more a part of the program. Boy Scouts interested in further knowledge of ham radio can work toward a merit badge which requires them to obtain a Junior Federal Communication Commission license.

The JOTA expanded a few years ago to include Jamboree-on-the-Internet. This was done as a means to connect Scouts who do not have access to local ham radio equipment.

"One thing is for sure, we could not do this event without the help of the guys at the Ham Radio Club. Rob and Dawn have organized the entire thing the last two years and they continue to outdo themselves time after time," said Wiley.

"Jack Carey and Robert Struppeck were awesome in volunteering their time to help the boys talk to other Scouts," added Gray.

Japan air force general visits Kwajalein

A group from the Japan Air Self-Defense Force headquarters paid a visit to the Japanese memorial on Kwajalein Wednesday. They were joined by the U.S. Army Kwajalein Atoll Commander Col. Joseph Gaines, fifth from left. Gaines greeted Maj. Gen. Hiroaki Maehara, to the right of Gaines, and accompanied the group to the memorial.

Safety at the smorgasbord

Buffet etiquette fosters food safety at café

By Dave Nobis
Manager, Food Services

While food establishments have many precautions in place to keep food safe, there are some things customers can do to help. How customers handle themselves at the buffet line can help or hinder the safety of the food. Here are a few things to think about the next time you go through a buffet line.

- The number one thing is to wash your hands.

After arriving at the dining facility, go into the bathroom and wash your hands. Your hands have probably come into contact with your face, hair, doorknobs and other places where they can pick up bacteria and germs that you don't want to consume with your food. So wash well with warm water, soap and dry with a paper towel. Use hand sanitizer as well.

- Use the serving utensil that is provided for each specific food item.

Don't use one utensil to serve several food items. If one food item happens to be contaminated and others are not, then cross-contaminates could occur.

- Place the serving utensil back in the same food.

But — be sure the handle doesn't touch the food. Setting the lettuce tongs on top of the salad is not a good idea. Remember, hands transmit many kinds of bacteria and diseases.

- Don't use your hands to serve food.

Use the provided serving tongs or utensils, even for things like rolls. If there are none available, ask a service person for one. Be sure to take what you touch. If you inadvertently touch a bread roll, put it on the

Photos by Catherine Layton

Place the handle off to the side of the serving tray, ensuring nothing from your hands ends up in the food.

plate, don't change your mind and put it back.

- Do not eat in the buffet line.

Those eating while standing at or going down the buffet line can contaminate food. Don't eat from your plate or from the serving utensils.

- When going back for additional servings, use a clean plate.

Don't take your eating utensils with you. Leave them at your table setting on a clean napkin or use clean eating utensils.

- Keep behind the glass.

The intention is for customers to look through the glass as they serve themselves, not to put their heads, arms and bodies under it. Only reach your arm under the glass to serve as necessary. If you have to sneeze or cough, step back from the buffet line, or sneeze into your shoulder or elbow. Remove yourself from the line, then return after you are done and have washed your hands.

- Roll up your long sleeves.

Coats, jackets and long sleeves can drag across the food.

Help children to learn these rules as well. Always accompany a child to the buffet line to be sure they are using serving utensils, not eating while in the buffet line or coughing on the food. Teach children not to use their hands and fingers for serving or eating in the buffet line.

Café Pacific hosts hundreds of patrons daily through buffet-style service.
