Shifting sands expose rock

By Jim Bennett
Editor

Westerly winds have pushed the sand around on Emon Beach, exposing an underlying calcified coral rock and an aspect of Mother Nature at work.

In response to the exposed rock, Community Activities personnel have placed cones around the unsafe area located in the center of the beach, stretching over a 10- to 15-yard span.

"It's a slipping hazard, and we're asking people to enter the water on either side of the cones," said Simone Smead, Community Activities manager.

Once in the water, people can swim wherever they wish within the buoyed area, she added.

"It's a cycle of Mother Nature," said Jack Martindale, RSE environmental engineer. "Sands do shift and move. This may be a natural progression of sand migration."

Martindale added along large coastlines sand can move hundreds of miles, depleting expensive beachfront property and adding ground elsewhere. Being an isolated atoll and a man-made beach, local history over the past 30 years or so would indicate the general nature of the sand movement.

DCS hits Roi diver

By Jim Bennett
Editor

A Roi diver is "completely OK" after a mild case of decompression sickness, or the bends, suffered over the weekend, according to Eric Rogers, vice president of the Roi-Namur Dolphins.

The diver dove twice Monday and suffered from mild symptoms that afternoon. Tuesday, the diver flew down to Kwajalein Hospital, where he was treated in the hyperbaric chamber and later released.

The diver, who was experienced and held commercial diving credentials, had been free diving during his surface interval, and club investigators believe that contributed to the case of the bends, Rogers said.

"Any strenuous activity during or after a dive can cause you to get bent," Rogers said, adding the club was performing a full investigation, interviewing divers who were with the man and checking dive profiles and computers.

KRS' Black describes 'Zero Accidents' philosophy

We in KRS read with interest the letter by Ron Clark, "Reader takes issue with safety philosophy" in last week's Hourglass. Ron presents his concerns in a detailed, frank manner. KRS appreciates those who would take the time and effort to express their concerns and opinions. Because Ron and the Hourglass readership deserve an answer, we offer the following:

The concept of "Zero Accidents" may appear on the surface to be a control effort. The KRS "Zero Accident" philosophy is a concept dedicated to the premise that all accidents are preventable. Our "Zero Accidents" philosophy is also a quality of life issue, management commitment and ultimately an uncompromising view of the value of life and the environment. The expectation is our philosophy will eventually be cultivated as a "value," which all KRS employees, dependents, managers and supervisors will firmly practice in everything that they do.

At the center of our Environmental, Safety and Health (ES&H) process is our People. This focus is to respect and value our employees and their families, regardless of personal views or differences. We feel obligated to orient all on the elements of a risk control system that does not bully them into following rules. Instead we encourage all to establish their own habits and practices, which will limit the negative effect the hazards could have on their work and off-duty life. Fostering everyone's participation and ownership of the system is essential.

As Ron asked, "Who ever wishes for injury?" The obvious answer is no one. That being the case, would it not behoove us to seek out new ways to stop injuries or illnesses? Because each of us depends on many others to carry out the mission, we must ensure the safety of all by exercising the right to stop an unsafe activity or to safely manage a hazardous condition. After all, if we did not accept this higher level of thinking concerning zero accidents, which accidents or illnesses are acceptable?

Over the next several months, KRS will be rolling out various initiatives that will assist all of us to better understand and achieve Zero Accident performance. This will not be accomplished by adding a litany of rules and safety gear. Instead we will establish a collaborative risk management system utilized equally by employees and dependents to the benefit of all.

The bottom line of our Zero Accidents philosophy is that we care for all the people within the community. I hope this will be proven to Ron and others by our actions in the months ahead.

KRS Environmental, Safety and Health manager

Bike mandate concerns reader

In less time than it takes to write this letter, I can go register my bike to comply with the new regulation. This small loss of freedom will make it much easier for the police to recover bikes. But I don't believe that we were put on this planet for the purpose of making life easier for policemen. Instead, I believe that the job of policeman exists because of us.

Before, we had a small worry of someone taking our bikes. Now, if we don't register, we have the virtual certainty of the police taking our bikes. I do not feel safer.

Family thanks well-wishers

Perhaps you sent a lovely card,
Or went out to Gea Pass;
Perhaps you sent a donation,
If so, we saw it there.
Perhaps you spoke the kindest words,
As any friend would say;
Perhaps you were not there at all,
You just thought of us that day.
Whatever you did to console our hearts,
We thank you so much — whatever the part.

From the family of Hal Cunningham

ASVAB offers Marshallese military opportunity

By Barbara Johnson
Feature Writer

Soon after Darren Bantol graduated from Kwajalein Jr./Sr. High School in 2001, he enlisted in the Air Force.

"I think this is really a good opportunity for us Marshallese students to try," Bantol said in an e-mail to the Hourglass this week. "The Air Force has been really a great experience for me in many ways," he said. "For instance, living all by yourself and knowing different people from different parts of the world."

Bantol, who will be an airman 1st class in December, also spoke about the benefits, particularly the 100 percent tuition assistance.

"I think that's a good thing for us Marshallese students because we ... don't have to worry about losing out because we can't afford it," he said.

Bantol is one of five students from the RMI currently in the Air Force, said Maryanne Lane, Host Nation support officer. The others are Glenn Kato, Jason Loeak, Paul Alfred and Rolden Lincoln.

For Marshallese, joining the service "presents them an opportunity for education, experience in other cultures and self-esteem. It makes them team players," said Ray Denham, who retired as an Air Force Senior Master Sgt. in Oct. 1985 after serving 27 years. He talks to Marshallese students who ask him about joining the Air Force.

Bantol said one of the things that has changed for him in the military is respecting people. Another is "being on time for anything." The military is "really strict" about that, he said.

To enlist in any of the U.S. armed services, high school graduates are required to take the Armed Services Vocational Aptitude Battery, which will be given tomorrow on Ebeye. The test will be held at Ebeye Public School in two sessions, 8:30 a.m. and 1 p.m., for RMI citizens between the ages of 18 and 28.

The score on the ASVAB determines whether the student qualifies to enlist in the U.S. military. Different branches of the military have different minimum qualifying scores, Lane said.

"Since the Compact of Free Association was signed in 1986, Military Entrance Processing Station personnel have been administering the [ASVAB] to RMI citizens in the RMI at Majuro and Ebeye annually," Lane said.

The test is open to U.S. and RMI citizens only, she said, and there's no pre-registration, but each session has a maximum of 30 people, and no one will be admitted after the test begins.

"It's a voluntary test," Lane said, "and we tell the principals to send their best students." She said the test is difficult, particularly for those with English as a second language.

Lane said the test is given twice a year, and in the spring, closer to graduation, the test will probably also be held at Kwajalein.

The ASVAB is considered a multi-aptitude test battery. It has eight subtests, according to the Web site www.military.com.

Four of the areas, Arithmetic Reasoning, Word Knowledge, Paragraph Comprehension and Mathematics Knowledge count toward a person's qualifying score, which determines qualification to enlist in the military, according to the Web site.

The other areas of the battery, General Science, Auto and Shop Information, Mechanical Comprehension and Electronics Information, determine an applicant's qualifications to train for certain specialties.

The ASVAB, maintained by the Department of Defense, is used as a military recruiting tool to test potential recruits both in what they already know about certain subjects and in their general learning ability and vocational aptitude.

It also helps high school graduates decide on the careers for which they might be best suited.

No Marshallese have gone into the service from Ebeye for the past several years, Lane said, but she recalls that in 1995, about 15 RMI and FSM graduates joined; six were students from Ebeye. A person must have a high school diploma or a GED to enlist in the service, she said.

Denham said that for the past three or four years Marshallese students on Kwaj have been contacting him about joining the Air Force.

He said he discusses what's required, the opportunities, job training, education and other benefits. Even if students don't pass the ASVAB, it's a good experience to take it, he said, explaining it shows them what they need to study to achieve their goal.

Denham keeps in touch with the students after they have enlisted.

"All the ones I talk with talk about staying in for 20 years," he said. Loeak is an ophthalmologist's assistant, Bantol works in a legal office, Alfred is in technical school for weather and Lincoln works in supply, he said. "They're all doing very well," Denham said, explaining he's happy to talk to students about any branch of the service.

"It's a great experience and a good way to get an education," he said.

For Bantol, this certainly seems to be true. He thanked Denham for his help, saying komol tata jen rimajol re ilo Air Force [Thank you very much from the Marshallese in the Air Force].

He said his future in the service is undecided, but, "So far it's pretty challenging and fun. ...I think I will go for the big 20 [years] ...I'll make it my career. I think it's exciting and I think other Marshallese in uniform enjoy it too."

Kom ruwainene

"Kom ruwainene" is the Marshallese way to say, "Welcome."

BOB and KATHY VALENCIA have returned to Kwajalein from White Sands Missile Range, N.M., for their second tour. Their first tour was from 1991 to 2001.

Bob is RTS flight safety engineer.

They say, "Great to be back and see many of our old friends."

Kwajalein clocks do not change, but Sunday in the states (Monday here) people will set their clocks back an hour to revert to Standard Time, meaning the East Coast will be seven hours ahead (minus a day) and the West Coast will be four hours ahead (minus a day).

Woodshop hammers home safety measures

By KW Hillis
Feature Writer

The new dining room table just delivered to Kim Lennon's home is beautiful, but it is too short. With help from the information she gains attending the Hobby Shop's new woodshop safety orientation course and the woodshop's equipment, Lennon said she is going to fix the table rather than get a replacement.

For the first time Wednesday, local instructors are offering a safety class and a basic understanding of how to use each of the 14 large and small woodworking power tools. The class runs from 6 to 9 p.m., said Julie Balter, Community Activities Hobby Shop Coordinator. Doug Hepler will teach the free, three-hour class, which runs from 6 to 9 p.m. Class attendance is required for anyone unfamiliar with the equipment before they can use the woodshop. People already using the woodshop must demonstrate their competence to the shop coordinator, she added.

The purpose of the class is two-fold, "to make sure people are using the equipment safely and to encourage more people to use the facility," said Amy Hansen, Community Activities Recreation superintendent.

"I've made a bed and I've made serving trays," Lennon said, explaining that she has taken adult education woodworking classes and even owns a table saw and other power tools. Both Lennon and her husband, Chris, are signed up for the first class.

"For me it is a refresher ... some of the tools are different than I am used to," she said. "They have a sander that moves up and down ... I don't know what it would be good for. It will be fun to have someone say, 'This will be good for — whatever it is good for.'"

Hepler teaches woodworking to junior and senior high students, said Peter Brewster, who monitors the woodshop on Mondays and helps people with the equipment.

"Doug Hepler has been teaching for an awfully long time," Brewster said. "He is good at imparting his knowledge to someone else ... this [course] will at least give people an introduction to the equipment, which hasn't been available."

Every Monday Brewster said that between one and nine people visit the well-equipped woodshop for projects ranging from cutting out a pirate for the upcoming Swash-buckler's Ball to more elaborate home projects.

"For the handyman, the shop is very well-equipped," he said. "There is a bandsaw, two lathes, a couple of jigsaws ... and a lot of smaller tools."

Safety is very important when working with power tools, Brewster said. In addition to closed-toed shoes, safety glasses, face shields, ear protection and certain kinds of respirators are also needed.

The roar and whine of a table saw and a miter saw reverberated through the woodshop Wednesday afternoon. Brian Mack set up a table saw to cut boards for a shelf, and Michael Hauge constructed a large equipment container.

The safety orientation course is a good idea so people will know how to use the equipment correctly, Mack said.

"I've seen people take plywood ... and crosscut on the table saw," he said. "It would probably take anywhere from two to six hours to tune [the table saw] up after that."

Practicing what he suggests, Mack said, "I was going to ask Doug to refresh me on the lathe, since it's been 20 years since I used one."

Although wood is stacked against the walls of the shop, it is designated for school projects and is not for sale. Wood can be purchased through GSK, and several other stores on Ebeye, Hansen said.

Brian Mack sets up a guide on a table saw at the woodshop Wednesday. Mack is using the shop equipment to build shelves.

"With the consent of the shop coordinator, wood can be brought into the facility and stored while you are working on your project," she said. "The wood must be clean, without nails or staples. Because of limited space, however, the shop has a one-month time limit on storage."

Brewster plans to make a hope chest for his daughter.

"I could get into a catalog and find a hope chest," Brewster said. "It's the idea that I made it, the self-satisfaction: ... If I bought one she would appreciate it, but if I make it she will brag about it forever."

The Hobby Shop is also looking for teachers who are qualified to teach an adult education woodshop class, Balter said.

For more information, call Balter at 51700.

Emon cycles with sands of time ...

Smead said she has seen the rock exposed by shifting sands at least twice in the past eight years, and each time, the sand shifted back, covering the rock.

"Mother nature has a way of taking care of herself," Smead said.

Likewise, Community Activities has not added sand to the beach in the past eight years, she said. The department has looked at the option, but Smead said she's not convinced new sand would not simply end up out in the lagoon, washed out by waves and tides.

Dredging sand from the lagoon is not an option, Martindale added, pointing out that such actions carry numerous environmental impacts.

Bends case stands as 'wake-up call' for divers ...

The Dolphins will hold a "safety stand down" at their Nov. 6 meeting, said Dave Saunders, Safety and Training Officer for the Dolphins.

"It's a good opportunity to use this as a wake-up call," Saunders said. "We're going to talk about why this happened and why this won't happen again."

Saunders added it's the first case of the bends to hit a Roi diver in the eight years he's been there.

"It's one of those things where one is too many, in my opinion," Saunders said. "It's a testament to how safe we are, but unfortunately, people make mistakes and either don't think or choose to ignore the rules."

This is only the third local case of DCS over the past 2½ years and only the fourth case treated at Kwaj Hospital in that time. Two divers, both TDY visitors, suffered from DCS on Kwajalein, and one diver from Bikini was flown to Kwajalein for treatment.

Meanwhile, Kwajalein Scuba Club records more than 1,300 tanks filled every month, KSC President Jack Martindale said, and Roi Namur, with fewer club members, records an esti-

Before the Dive

- Get plenty of rest and hydration. Alcohol can dehydrate a person.

- Do not go below 130 feet.

After the Dive

mated 400-plus dives per month, Rogers said.

"We implement conservative diving measures, and that's why we have the safety record we do," Martindale said, pointing out tips for safe dives. "Hydration, rest, dive profile — all the things you learn in dive class. Safety regulations keep dives to less than 130 feet; no decompression diving."

One of two dive physicians on Kwajalein, Dr. Ed Paget treated the man.

Speaking in general terms on a typical treatment, Paget said, a diver might be taken to a simulated depth of 60 feet, where he or she is given 100 percent oxygen. An attendant enters the chamber with the patient. Depending on the dive table in use, the treating physician may keep the patient and attendant at depth and slowly bring them back to surface pressure over up to six hours.

That time and depth, up to 160 feet, can be extended for more serious cases.

"Fortunately, we haven't had that serious of a case since I've been here," Paget said, noting he has been on Kwaj for five years now. He added, however, that over the five years, some DCS patients with more serious cases have suffered from long-term effects including nerve damage.

In Monday's case, the diver was treated and released.

Divers experiencing symptoms should contact the hospital as soon as possible. General symptoms include nausea, visual changes, weakness in extremities and skin rashes. More severe cases can affect the central nervous system.

But dive officials are pushing prevention.

"It could've been worse," Saunders said. "It's very serious."

Soccer kicks off fall season next week

By Jim Bennett
Editor

Adult soccer takes center stage on the athletic scene Tuesday with the kickoff of the fall 2002 season and 17 teams vying for titles.

New this year, as in softball this past season, divisions will play on specific nights, according to Scott Pratt, Adult Sports supervisor. For example, the Men's A Division and Women's B Division, play Tuesdays and Fridays, though specific times may vary from night to night. Also, home teams, listed in the paper and on the master schedule, get the choice of side or possession and may defer possession to the second half.

In all divisions, all teams will play 12 games, and post-season play will consist of a single championship game between the top two teams.

Clarifying an existing rule, Pratt said games tied after regulation play will go into a sudden-death overtime of five minutes. If after a second overtime period, the game remains tied, the game will be called a draw.

In championship games, the second overtime will be followed by a shoot-out to determine a winner.

In the A Division, last fall's champion, Spartans I Men, returns along with Locals, Kobeer and Abyss Kwajalein.

Men's B Division includes school teams Jabro Boys, 2001 B Division champions Spartans II Boys and Spartans III Boys, Calvary Boys, who took the C Division championship last fall, and Queen of Peace Boys.

The Women's A Division features Champions Spartans I Women and Play On, Sudden Rush and Spartans II Girls.

And like the men, the Women's B Division includes school teams Spartans III Red, last year's champion, and Spartans III White teams and Jabro Girls and Calvary ladies.

By Jim Bennett

Fourteen-year-old Carlos Notarianni, of the swim team Mako Sharks, broke a record older than himself early this month.

During the Oct. 6 swim meet between the Barracudas and Makos, Notarianni swam the men's ages 13-14 100-yard backstroke in 1:06:23, breaking the previous record of 1:08:26, set by Larry Chidsey, on March 1, 1984.

Notarianni went on to place first in three other individual events, taking the 50-yard freestyle at 26.15, 100-yard freestyle at 57.92, and 100-yard breaststroke at 1:22.19. He tied teammate Ian Taylor, scoring 24 points each for the Mako Sharks.

The Mako Sharks beat the Barracudas 420-404. The teams next meet Sunday, 4 p.m., at Millican Family Pool.

Notarianni is one of 95 youths, ages four to 16, swimming on one of Kwajalein's two teams. The swimmers posted collectively 152 personal best times during the meet.

In other pool action:

Girls 13-14 opened their meet in the 50-yard freestyle with all four competitors finishing within just over two seconds of each other. Kaylee West claimed the win with a time of 30.68 seconds, followed by Lani Brown at 30.90, Alyx Howard at 31.61 and Tiffany Warga at 32.97.

Eight boys and seven girls ages six and under completed the 25-yard freestyle. Annie Hepler finished first for the girls at 20.43, with Angela Kendrick right behind her at 21.60. Hepler and Sarah Greenbaum led the girls 8 and under age group in score, collecting 18 points each for their team, the Barracudas.

John Sholar took the boys' event, finishing in 24.86, followed by Keith Brady at 27.78. One to two years older in the boys 7-8 age group, Shawn Brady finished the 25-yard freestyle in 15.85 seconds. Sholar and Shawn Brady both collected 18 points for the Makos and Barracudas, respectively.

Every attempt will be made to schedule appointments as soon as possible based on availability and severity of illness. An appointment may be available on the same day in many cases. DEVELOPMENT and DEMONSTRATION of the Long Range Air Launch Target System Environmental Assessment. The Missile Defense Agency (MDA) has completed an Environmental Assessment (EA), prepared in accordance with the National Environmental Policy Act (NEPA) of 1969 and implementing regulations. The EA analyzes the environmental impacts of conducting two developmental tests for the Long Range Air Launch Target (LRALT) System. The first test would involve dropping an inert missile from an aircraft into a designated area on U.S. Army Yuma Proving Ground (YPG), Arizona. For the second test, a fully operational LRALT test missile would be air launched over the Central Pacific Ocean from a point about 200 nautical miles south of Midway Island. The test missile would travel a southwest trajectory toward U.S. Army Kwajalein Atoll in the Republic of the Marshall Islands. The expended rocket motors and target payload would impact within the open ocean. In preparation for the tests, rocket motor processing and missile assembly/check-out would occur at Hill Air Force Base, Utah, and at YPG, respectively. The military cargo aircraft used to launch the LRALT in the second test would be staged out of the Pacific Missile Range Facility on Kauai, Hawaii. Based on this analysis, the MDA has determined that the proposed activities are not expected to result in any significant impacts to the environment. Beginning Oct. 18, the EA and Draft Finding of No Significant Impact (FONSI) is available to the public for a 15-day review period. Both documents will be accessible on the Internet at <http://ax.losangeles.af.mil/axf> and at the following locations: Alele Museum and Library, and the Grace Sherwood Library. Public comments on the EA/Draft FONSI will be accepted through Nov. 1. Submit written comments to: SMC/AXFV, Attn: Thomas Huynh, 2420 Vela Way, Suite 1467, El Segundo, CA, 90245-4659. Library hours at the temporary facility will be: Monday, 10 a.m. to 7 p.m.; Tuesday, closed; Wednesday, 10 to 11:30 a.m., 1:30 to 8 p.m.; Thursday, 1:30 to 8 p.m.; Friday, 1:30 to 8 p.m.; Saturday, 10 a.m. to 7 p.m.; and Sunday, 1:30 to 7 p.m.
