Plan to provide Enniburr power is charging up

By Jim Bennett
Editor

The plan to feed electrical power to Third Island has been energized with both a recent and an upcoming feasibility study.

The studies came up again as one of several issues discussed at the RMI-U.S. Joint Committee Meeting held last week in Majuro.

An estimated 700 Marshallese live on the island, located about one mile south of Roi-Namur, many working in support of USAKA/RTS. The island's only source of power is portable, gas-fed generators for individual buildings. The island also has no running water and the only telephones are cellular phones.

But that could all change if a pair of studies prove positive.

ALTAIR goes down briefly after shortage

An electrical component shorted out ALTAIR on Roi-Namur Wednesday afternoon, shutting down all power in the building.

At about 2:30 p.m., an air-conditioning system control component shorted out to the metal bus bars in the main facility equipment motor control centers, according to Tony Longhurst, Technical Facilities manager.

There were no flames, but you could smell smoke, said Bevan Jacobs, ALTAIR leader. "It put out lots of smoke."

The smoke detectors alerted the fire department, and ALTAIR personnel also manually activated the fire alarms, Jacobs said.

San Juan to renovate hangar's outer shell

By Peter Rejcek

Those working in the Aviation Department hangar are understandably not big fans of the weather here.

Trying to find a dry spot to work on a 1900D airplane is becoming increasingly harder as the hangar's outer shell continues to rust away. Holes the size of a man's thigh are not uncommon. The roof above the back offices even fell in at one point, according to Lott Lawson, Aviation Services manager.

But thanks to a $950,000 contract with San Juan Construction, that's all about to change — and quickly.

San Juan expects to begin peeling off the metal roof and sides of the hangar and replacing them with aluminum siding by the end of the month, according to Kevin Bottomley, San Juan superintendent. The project should be finished by the end of August, he said, assuming everything goes according to plan.

"The weather is going to play a big part," he added. That's because for every metal section removed, the San Juan crew will need to immediately replace it with new aluminum siding. If not, and it rains, the water will ruin the insulation. The wind is also a factor because of the heights involved, making safety a No. 1 priority.

"It's going to be an intense job," Bottomley said.

The work will begin with the sides of the hangar and then move to the roof, with its 110-foot-long panels that have to be removed. San Juan is bringing

Reader: Thumbs down to stopping movies at Rich

Last weekend I took my nine-year-old daughter to see "Monsters Inc." at the Rich outdoor theater. Usually, she goes with friends, but Mom and Dad wanted to tag along—and what a great time we had!

The weather was perfect: The moon was full, the breeze was gentle and warm, and only once did a plane rev up and overpower the volume of the show.

There were Kwaj kids everywhere; sitting on the stage, lying on blankets, lounging on beach chairs ... The crowd even extended out to the fields, where pick-up games of whatever went on and off before, during and after the show. What fantastic memories for these Kwaj kids!

I wonder how many of these kids sitting on the stage knew or cared that the movie showing was six months old and had already hit the video stores? How many hand-holding teens even care what movie is showing? The adults had as much enjoyment watching the stars and full moon rise as they did watching the movie.

Does it really have to come to an end? Should pre-teens and teens be going to a dark, secluded movie theater surrounded by BQs? My daughter certainly won't be going with just friends anymore. Where are all the children going to sit? I have trouble seeing the screen if anyone sits within five rows in front of me at the Yuk. How will any kids be able to see? What an extremely uncomfortable, unaccommodating theater for families.

Why is converting the Rich not an option? Can both theaters be upgraded? Can the community pitch in and help defray the cost to upgrade the Rich? Considering the expense of bringing my family of five to the movies stateside, I'd be willing to donate substantially to keep the Rich open.

While I have your attention: The AAFES movies I've watched on other military bases always start with the audience standing to the playing of the National Anthem. Why don't we do that here, particularly in these times?

Music Festival success due to plenty of help

I would like to thank all the organizers of the Second Annual Spring Break Music Festival for helping to make it such a big success. It had the mellow feel of a giant beach party, with good friends, great music, delicious food and fantastic homebrew. It doesn't get any better.

Here are the organizers:

Jim Stepchew — Homebrew and co-founder.

Bob Orlock — Chili contest and event Web site.

Lee Allas — Ethnic foods

Christy Drabek — Roi coordinator and Jera cruise.

The DeLongs — Slip and Slide.

Special thanks go to:

Jeff Cagle and Neil Dye for sound system and DJ work.

Steve Snider for his expert advice and support.

Bob Babcock for transportation support.

The 1900 pilots and Jera crew for getting Roi workers back and forth.

Col. Wrenn for his 100 percent support.

It takes a lot of hard work to put together an event like this. The fact that it went so well reminds us again of what a special place this is.

Apologies to all who helped with RLF event

A couple of weeks ago, [Middle of Nowhere News published] an article on the Relay for Life. We said that Beverly Schmidt was the only one who organized this event; this is not entirely true.

Thanks to Barbara Wallace, we were able to obtain the names of the committee that helped make this event possible. The committee was: Julie Balter, Gwyne Copeland, Bob Sholar, Alan Taylor, Dotty Miller, and, as we said, Barbara Wallace and Beverly Schmidt.

We are terribly sorry for this mix-up, and will try our best to make sure this does not happen again.

TAKING THE POINT: Desmarais accepted to famed military academy

By KW Hillis
Feature Writer

Not even Robert E. Lee or Douglas MacArthur made it in the first time around.

But a sixth-grader's dream "to be an Army guy" turned into reality for Kwajalein High School senior Anthony J. Desmarais II the first time he applied to the United States Military Academy at West Point.

Desmarais has received an offer of admission for the West Point class of 2006.

Out of about 10,000 applicants each year, almost 1,200, or just 12 percent, are accepted at the prestigious school, according to the Academy's Web site.

"I really got interested in it last [school year]," explained Desmarais, sporting a T-shirt proclaiming "Army" and holding the embossed green West Point admissions portfolio.

The Army, he said, has been a dream since elementary school. But after talking to family and men who have been to West Point, he decided to apply.

Maj. Richard Muschek, a 1987 West Point graduate, said Desmarais approached him about the academy early last fall after Muschek and other USAKA officers and enlisted personnel spoke to high school seniors about different paths into the Army.

Desmarais works at Building 1010 as a software programmer in the high school work study program, so Muschek said he kept up with the different phases of the student's academy application.

"It's a very intense application," said Michelle DeMaio, Desmarais' mother. The application requires essays, a congressional nomination and a physical fitness test. Desmarais sent the initial paperwork containing his College Board Scholastic Assessment Test scores, grades and extracurricular activities and sports in late September.

Senior class president and a member of the National Honor Society with all A's, Desmarais sent a long list of his activities to West Point including his work at the Community Recreation Center as a youth softball and basketball coach and his participation in the softball, basketball and volleyball teams.

"You have a score with West Point," Desmarais said. "You have leadership, academic and athletic scores — they add them up and that's your number. [West Point] uses that number to determine if you are going to get accepted or not."

The West Point Web site profile of the class of 2005 lists applicants' achievements taken into consideration during the admissions process including class rank, American College Testing and SAT scores, academic honors and activities.

Although a large percentage of students admitted in last year's class ranked high in academics, with 71 percent placing in the top fifth and 22 percent in the second fifth of their class, a small percentage did not. Leadership ability and physical fitness also counts heavily. Out of the 1,189 students admitted last year, 707 were members of the National Honor Society, 505 participated in Scouting and 1,084 lettered in a sport.

DeMaio said her son was fortunate to hear about his acceptance very early.

"I got the letter of assurance from them in November," he said. "It's a letter that says if I send them all my other paperwork and everything goes through fine, then I'm in; they have a spot reserved for me."

After five essays in response to questions from West Point, Desmarais wrote three more to receive a congressional nomination. He secured a congressional nomination from Rhode Island's Sen. Jack Reed.

Desmarais completed the physical aptitude exam, monitored by Kwajalein High School coach Tom Ferris. The exam consists of five different events including as many pull-ups as the applicant can do, a standing long jump, a modified or kneeling basketball throw, as many push-ups as can be completed in two minutes and a 300-yard shuttle run — running 25 yards up and back six times.

"I got nine feet, one inch on [the long jump]. I was above the chart," Desmarais said.

Because of the letter of assurance, he was invited to a West Point orientation program in January, DeMaio said.

"Going [to the orientation] made me want to go more," Desmarais said, describing the campus, the cadets' honor code, the sports arenas and especially the state-of-the-art computers given to each cadet.

"The computers were awesome ... they have a network that is hooked up to every single cadet on the campus," he said. "The dining hall itself is a five-wing, gigantic star with huge murals on the wall of [famous military figures] like George Washington. The view is really cool, too. The Hudson River is right there."

Although smaller than many college dorms he visited, the barracks are fine, "because you're not allowed to have anything, so it's not crowded at all," he said.

During the visit he accompanied a plebe, or freshman, to his classes.

"I went to his calculus class. It was pretty similar but not quite as advanced as my AP [advanced placement] class is right now," he said, adding his favorite subjects are math and economics. Cadets do not have to declare their major until after their second year, but for Desmarais "it will probably be engineering or political science," he said.

Muschek said, "I wish I had considered going to the orientation ... I would have been better prepared mentally."

Desmarais said he is ready to go and wishes he was done with high school classes.

He reports July 1 for the first day of "Beast Barracks," or basic training overseen by upper classmen. After eight weeks, school will begin.

"I think he is going to excel, whatever he chooses to do," Muschek said.

Range operation set for Tuesday

From the Command Safety Office

A range operation is scheduled for Tuesday, April 16. Caution times are 5 a.m. through 2 p.m.

In conjunction with this operation, a caution area will exist within Kwajalein Atoll, defined by the area bounded on the north by Boked Island on the east reef and Yabbernohr Island on the west reef, and bounded on the south by a line drawn north of Bigej Island on the east reef to a point at latitude 08 54.2N, longitude 167 45.8E, then to a point at latitude 08 52.8N, longitude 167 45.8E, and then to a point north of the high tide mark on Ninni Island on the west reef.

In order to ensure clearance of non-mission support personnel from the mid-atoll corridor by the window opening time, Kwajalein Police Department island clearance procedures will continue until evacuation has been accomplished. Egress of all air and sea craft will be required when requested by authorized clearance personnel. Subsequent to lagoon clearance, the hazard area will be in effect until mission completion.

In the event of a mission slip, the caution times and areas will be in effect for the following days:

- 5 a.m. to 2 p.m. Wednesday, April 17.
- 5 a.m. to 2 p.m. Thursday, April 18.

Questions regarding the above safety requirements for this mission should be directed to the Command Safety Office, range safety officer, 52477.

KYC Chili Cook-off raises $466 for kids

From staff reports

The Kwajalein Yacht Club's Chili Cook-off at this weekend's Spring Break Music Festival raised $466 for the Kwajalein Shrine Club to support their programs that help children.

The contest drew 20 participants.

The winners were:

Original: 1) Phil Copeland, Bevan Jacobs and Stan McMurtrie; 2) Nate Jackson; 3) Jim Schilling.

Traditional: 1) Curt and Tina Bean; 2) Deann Brower; 3) Steve Snider.

Hottest: 1) Carol Shattuck; 2) Roger Wellsandt; 3) Kelly Morger.

Jim Schilling won the People's Choice award for his Navajo Chili.

Digitization process time-consuming ...

It was at that time when the Marshallese were making the difficult transition to a Westernized culture. Images such as a native man standing stiffly in a three-piece suit (sans shoes) between two others, half-naked, covered in only grass skirts, attests to the changes underway.

Rosoff said Joachim, the son of a Portuguese copra trader and a Marshallese woman, was purposefully creating a photographic history of his people.

"He was right on the cutting edge," she said of his skills and equipment. "You rarely get somebody within the culture to document it."

The project involves scanning each glass plate negative into a computer as quickly as possible. The emulsion on many of the plates is coming off, scarring the photos, creating a spiderweb effect across the surface. Performing Photoshop surgery on the pictures to fix the defects is secondary to getting them saved and identified, Rosoff said.

It's a time-consuming process. Rosoff said she can scan about eight to 10 images in a regular workday.

"I may be pulling the last image ever off the plate, so I want to make the best scan possible," she said.

Humanitarian group to study proposed project ...

built last year, generates excess power, and the command has offered to sell that electricity to Third Island, if the RMI can manage to get the power across the reef to the neighboring island, said Maj. David Coffey, chief, USAKA Host Nation office.

A commercial contractor surveyed the site recently, Coffey said, and three men from Tech Serve International will visit the island April 29 to study the feasibility of a humanitarian mission that would lay the needed power lines.

"They're just coming to look at it," said George Talbot, a Roi-Namur resident who coordinated the visit. "It will let them more accurately see if they can put a proposal together."

Talbot, a field engineer by trade, contacted Tech Serve after he experienced Third Island's electrical troubles first-hand. Working on a public address system for a church there, Talbot noticed the power from a portable generator was burning out the equipment. When the possibility of Roi-supplied power came up, Talbot said he called Wes Syverson, the founder of Tech Serve and a man with whom Talbot had worked in Africa during the 1980s.

Meanwhile, Tech Serve had three men scheduled to work in the region, installing a transformer for a broadcast station in Saipan. Tech Serve agreed to have the men stop by on their way home from the Saipan mission, Talbot said.

Tech Serve describes their mission as "providing technical assistance and equipment to missions and ministries," according to the organization's Web site, www.techserve.org. That includes construction and wiring of electrical, telephone and water systems in mostly Third World countries. The Tech Serve engineers also will examine the feasibility of burying within the reef a single conduit that could be used for electrical, telephone and water service, Talbot added.

"Everyone seems to be real supportive, so we're going ahead with it," Talbot said.

Once the proposals are in, the RMI will have to decide what course they want to take and how they want to fund it.

In other news, the members of the JCM:

- Referred requests to the U.S. ambassador for U.S. assistance with environmental projects at the Bigej fuel tanks and Prince Eugen, along with the demolition of the WWII ruins on Third Island.

- "I'm not against it, but it's not a USAKA or CINCPAC issue," Coffey said. "It would have to go through Department of State. They accepted responsibility for the Prince Eugen when they became a nation, but if they want to ask for help through the ambassador they can."

- Reviewed Title X proposals including the Carlson Island pier and water catchments for mid-atoll corridor islands.

- Reaffirmed USAKA's commitment to the U.S. EPA's universal environmental standards and procedures on Biken, Aur Atoll, and all facilities with which U.S. personnel become involved.

- Promised continued U.S. Coast Guard support of RMI patrols and surveillance. The Coast Guard also will provide search and rescue training to the Marshallese, particularly the crew of the patrol boat Lamoor, this summer; specifically in radio communications, command and control and search patterns, Coffey said.

- Agreed on the RMI's outstanding debt to Tripler Medical Center, $110,034.78, and both RMI and Tripler will work toward a settlement plan.

- The U.S. will provide the RMI numbers of RMI citizens enlisting in the military, but not names and locations, due to security and privacy considerations. The RMI will help the U.S. recruit enlistees and academy candidates.

The JCM — bringing together military leaders from CINCPAC, USAKA (the commander serves as the CINCPAC representative to the RMI) and the RMI — alternates between Honolulu and Majuro, with the next official meeting to be held next April in Honolulu. USAKA, however, will host a working meeting in November.

Coffey praised the meeting last week saying, "From the time we arrived, they ran the whole show with agenda, meeting minutes and everything. I saw little room for improvement."

Metal roof will be replaced with aluminum ...

out six professional sheet metal workers to help with the work, Bottomley said.

When San Juan is done, the roof will never rust and should be able to withstand 125 mph winds, he added.

"It's going to be a lot better for us," Lawson said, adding that the inside of the hangar will eventually get air-conditioning, which will help with corrosion control.

The hangar project will start up about the same time that the BQ rehabilitations are being completed, Bottomley noted. The eyebrows, or ledges, and landings at the Coral, Palm and Shell BQs have been an ongoing project since last year.

Bottomley said the work is ahead of schedule and his 50-man crew has cut back to working five days a week.

But San Juan will have little leisure time when the hangar project begins. Bottomley said they'll probably have to work seven days a week to get it completed on time.

The company, which has had a continuous presence here since 1996, is certainly busy these days. They're just finishing up an office renovation at Building 5050 on Meck Island, which includes a new video wall, Bottomley said. In addition, they're developing work plans for projects at the Ocean BQ and Building 1009, along with more office renovations at Building 5050.

ALTAIR incident to be studied for solutions ...

personnel, said Richard Carroll, Shop leader.

"First we identified the problem, then we got the lights back on in about 20 minutes and made the ... repairs," he said.

"To lose the entire building [when something like this occurs] is something we'd like to prevent," Longhurst said. "Part of our responsibility is to learn from these incidents and make sure they don't reoccur," he added.

Now his department will spend some time asking questions and start working toward a permanent solution, he said.

ALTAIR was back on line at 5 p.m.

Homeplate, Spartans I claim softball crowns

From staff reports

In a winner-takes-all single World Series game, Homeplate edged Thirty-Something 10-7 to win the Women's A Division crown.

Youth conquered experience in the Men's B Division. Spartans I ran over the Barnacles, 16-8, in the playoffs before taking two straight from Gummos to win the World Series.

Both games were close. Spartans escaped Tuesday's game with a 11-10 win. The following night, they needed extra innings to put Gummos away for good, 18-15. Gummos knotted the score in the seventh inning, but couldn't respond to a two-run effort by the Spartans in the ninth.

Olympic swimmer to visit Kwaj

By Peter Rejcek
Associate Editor

U.S. Olympian Chad Carvin is coming to Kwajalein next week to help the swim team raise a little gold to pay for its trip to the Micronesian Games at Pohnpei in July.

Carvin, who turns 28 tomorrow, participated in the 2000 Olympic Games in Sydney, Australia, where he placed sixth in the 400-meter freestyle. The visit, sponsored by the international swimming organization FINA (La Federation Internationale de Natation), is intended to promote swimming in Micronesia, according to Cris Lindborg, who is helping organize the swim team's July trip.

Carvin will be here April 16-18. A dinner fundraiser is planned Tuesday at the REB, Lindborg said. Tickets to the spaghetti dinner, with Carvin as the keynote speaker, are $10 each. The money will help defray the costs of lodging, food and other expenses for the swim team.

"We have to buy uniforms, T-shirts, goggles, and everything else," Lindborg said.

The 10 members who will represent the Marshall Islands in the games will also be announced Tuesday, Lindborg said. The team, for the first time in the history of the Micronesian Games, will include natives of the Marshall Islands, she added.

Kwajalein has traditionally fielded the team that represents the Marshall Islands in swimming events because it is the only such team in the country, explained Lindborg, who has been involved with the event since 1990.

The Micronesian Games are held every four years. Events include everything from softball to canoe racing. While the other teams representing the Marshall Islands aren't from Kwajalein, Lindborg said, "Some of our kids may be participating."

In the last three Micronesian Games she's attended — Saipan in 1990, Guam in 1994 and Palau in 1998 — Lindborg said the swim team has brought back more medals than any other Marshall-ese team. She said she expects another good showing in July.

"We should have a pretty good team," Lindborg said.

Brewster, Greenbaum tops in Driftwood

From staff reports

Despite a one-minute pit stop to rehydrate in perhaps one of the hottest racing days in recent memory, Brian Brewster won the 24th annual Driftwood Classic 10K Road Run Monday.

Brewster finished in 44:02, just 1:23 better than Sharon Greenbaum, the first woman to cross the finish line. Brewster managed the win, even after spending a full minute at the four-mile water station gulping several cups of water, literally splashing sweat down the final stretch.

"It was brutal," Brewster said.

The Driftwood is considered one of the final tune-ups for the Kwajalein Running Club's signature event, the Rustman, scheduled for April 29. Brewster won the Rustman in 2001, turning in the second fastest finish in the race's 22-year history.

Brewster said he will compete again this year in the Rustman, but admits capturing the record set by Bob Sholar in 1993 is a lofty goal for anyone.

"I would like to do as well as I did last year," he said.

Monday's race was lightly attended due to mission activity, but the ranks were augmented by the attendance of five U.S. Army visitors, according to Sholar, KRC event organizer. Sholar said the racing conditions were unusually poor, causing an "inordinately high" dropout rate due to the searing heat.

Sue Rosoff, left, shows Leonard deBrum the prints she has made after scanning in glass plate negatives that date from the turn of the century. The pictures were created by deBrum's father, Joachim, a sort of Renaissance man of the Marshall Islands.

New deal ensures survival of photo history

By Peter Rejcek
Associate Editor

The photographic past of the Marshall Islands will survive into the future.

The Marshall Islands Cultural Society, the Alele Museum in Majuro and Leonard deBrum inked an agreement late last month in Majuro to complete the digitization of the Joachim deBrum photo collection. The society began archiving the 2,500 glass plates, many over a century old, in late 2000.

"It guarantees we can finish the plates," said Cris Lindborg, director of exhibits at the Marshallese Cultural Center.

The agreement not only gives archivers access to all the plates, but also to previous records and work done by a former Peace Corps volunteer, Carol Curtis, in the 1980s. Curtis later worked at the Alele Museum, where she created contact prints of about half the collection and recorded information about each photograph on index cards, according to Sue Rosoff, who is leading the digitization project.

"We had been starting from scratch," Lindborg noted.

The historical trail goes back further than Curtis, Rosoff added. She's dug up information from the late 70s concerning an inventory of the deBrum home on Likiep Atoll, in the far north of the Ratak Chain. And through the Internet, she's contacted other people who had been in contact with the deBrum collection.

"Finding all of this history just adds information," Rosoff said.

The project, in fact, is about more than just scanning in high-resolution images of each plate. The society is actually creating a database for every image. Using the work started by Curtis and others, the goal is to create a complete historical record of the era when the plates were made, from roughly 1880 to 1920.
