Logistics handle mass exodus

By Peter Rejcek

A different sort of abandon ship drill was underway this week as TDY personnel associated with IFT-9 scrambled to leave the island after the mission was officially scrubbed Tuesday. That left logistics folks working hard to get them checked out and shipped off.

Despite having to check out about 75 people between Tuesday afternoon and Wednesday morning (and with almost 30 fewer employees because of weather that delayed the morning ferries from Ebeye), things ran fairly smoothly at the Kwaj Lodge, according to Laura Brooks, Kwaj Lodge supervisor.

"We had a little leeway Tuesday," she said, explaining that the lodge used an express checkout system that moved people out quickly Wednesday morn-

Under investigation

Kwajalein Police Department investigators examine a body — identified as Miguel Romero, 25, a Kwajalein firefighter — found in front of the Tropics BQ this morning. Romero had suffered a head wound and trauma, according to LuAnne Fantasia, USAKA Public Affairs officer. EMS pronounced him dead at the scene. The cause of death is under investigation. The body was reportedly found around 4 a.m. below Romero's third-floor window, which was found open. An ambulance arrived shortly before 7:30 a.m. to remove the body from the scene, which police had cordoned off with yellow police tape. Details to follow as they become available.

West winds delay ferries, hit SBM

From staff reports

Tuesday night's storm packed winds strong enough to delay the first four ferry runs of Marshallese workers Wednesday morning.

Ferries were held up for two hours until conditions calmed, with the first boat leaving Kwajalein at 6:20 a.m., said Tom Dillon, Marine Department manager.

Winds gusted up to 32 knots during two separate storms Tuesday and Wednesday, according to Aeromet.

The Kwajalein Small Boat Marina also has taken it tough all summer with westerly winds and swells, according to Simone Smead, Community Activities manager. Welders have had to make temporary repairs to joints within each of the two finger piers and the fuel pier. More permanent repairs have been scheduled for the past two weeks, but have been delayed because of the westerlies.

Anti-terrorism drill tests awareness

By Jim Bennett
Editor

Working as the assistant manager at Ten-Ten Wednesday, Julian Flores heard some soldiers talking about a suspicious package. Walking to the side of the building where a gravel alley separates the convenience store from Macy's West, he noticed an unmarked box, taped closed.

"I didn't see anybody going for it," he said. "And we usually don't see anything on the side of the building, certainly not a taped-up box."

And that's when Flores called 911, setting off a counter-terrorism drill that locked up downtown Kwajalein throughout the lunch hour as police and fire units held back onlookers while an Explosives Ordnance Division crew removed the box.

But it was nearly 2½ hours after the "bomb" was placed, according to the drill's "bombmaker," said Sgt. Travis Tikka, USAKA provost sergeant.

"After I placed it there I observed some people who looked right at it, shrugged their shoulders and went on about their business," Tikka said. "It just shows how comfortable we've become in our day-to-day lives."

Not that Tikka advocates paranoia, but in a day where terrorism has become a household word, drill organizers hoped to increase awareness for the potential that exists.

"If you see something that doesn't belong, you need to ask about it," he said.

If increasing awareness was the goal, the timing actually was perfect. Plac-

Future dreams rooted in patriotic memories of the past

"Give me the liberty to know, to utter, and to argue freely according to conscience, above all liberties."

— John Milton

Patriotism for my country, the United States of America, has instilled a self-confidence in my heart and soul that will follow me for the rest of my life.

The United States was formed and has grown from the beliefs of both democracy and equal rights for American citizens everywhere. Those are beliefs any U.S. citizen should respect and hold with pride — a lesson I learned at a young age following Desert Storm.

I was born and raised in a military family, as my father is a member of the U.S. Army. My father fought in Desert Storm and made his awe-inspiring return back home when I was a young child around the tender age of seven years.

My mother and great-grandparents rode to Fort Campbell in Tennessee to welcome my father back from combat. My great-grandparents wore shirts with patriotic words and symbols and my mother was especially dressed up, ready to welcome back my father.

I remember entering a large hangar and seeing massive crowds of friends and other families everywhere, smiling and waiting in anticipation for the arrival of our American soldiers. Most people were carrying around small American flags, some people even had red, white and blue face paint.

I spotted a friend of mine, who also waited for the return of his father with his family. We both played, waving around our American flags, awaiting the appearance of both of our fathers.

I was too small to see anything at first because I was surrounded by so many people who were towering over me, but I heard loud cheers and even some screams of joy that seemed to erupt out of nowhere. My great-grandfather put me on his shoulders so that I could get a glimpse of my father.

I saw him, still in uniform, with the largest smile on his face, proud to be back home with the rest of his fellow soldiers. They were welcomed by tremendous cheers and open arms from the American public. My father and his fellow soldiers left for Desert Storm as soldiers and returned as heroes.

I looked around with my eyes wide open seeing people crying and laughing, rushing to the soldiers coming back from the war. I held onto my small American flag tightly, waiting for my dad to see me so that he could see how much his little boy had grown since he was away. I smiled excitedly when I saw him coming toward me and ran to him. He embraced me happily, lifting me in the air and setting me back down with a wide grin on his face. He laughed and took off his helmet and put it on my head.

I watched with delight as he then hugged my great-grandparents, kissed my mother and embraced other friends of the family.

When we all walked outside I recognized the American flag flapping high in the sky as I watched my family and friends still welcome back my father and his comrades. The flag stood as a symbol of freedom and bravery for all.

With patriotism one can become stronger, mentally and emotionally. Patriotism for my country has helped me with my self-confidence and has also helped me to grow into a young adult, willing to stand up for my beliefs.

So whenever I stand up to salute the American flag, I am not saluting a piece of cloth but the whole nation and all the positive things American citizens have accomplished.

I will soon attend college and plan on entering the entertainment field. It will take a lot of self-confidence for me to be able to both stand out and be the best to reach my dream. And I know I can't reach my dream for the future without my patriotic lessons from the past.

We can't afford to be complacent these days

With regard to the anti-terrorism exercise described in today's Hourglass, I feel like I have to comment and set the record straight. Both USAKA and Raytheon received a flood of calls complaining about the timing of the exercise because it ended up interrupting our normal lunch-time routine. I must admit my disappointment about this.

We placed the "bomb" two hours before lunch, with the expectation that it would be quickly discovered and that the drill would be over before the lunch hour. But many people walked by, looked and did nothing. One fellow even looked closely, gave it a little kick and then went on his way! I think we all can figure out what might have happened if it were real. I do understand that there's a lot of disappointment right now given what happened with IFT-9 and that complacency is probably part of the result. I would argue that we can't afford that attitude. We are not as immune as some might think.

On the positive side, this incident was the exception (not the rule) during the exercise. I want to thank everyone for that. We here at USAKA do try to plan readiness exercises in a manner that creates as little disruption of other activities as possible, but sometimes it just doesn't work out in cases where we can't control all of the variables.

Bishop Museum loans artifacts to cultural center

By Peter Rejcek
Associate Editor

One museum's backlog of cultural artifacts is another museum's main attraction.

That was the case when the Bishop Museum in Honolulu dug through its storage rooms to bring nine pieces of nearly extinct Marshallese material culture home, at least temporarily, to the Marshall Islands.

"A lot of cultures don't get appreciated because they're in storage," observed Betty Lou Kam, collection manager for the Hawaiian/Pacific collection at the Bishop. Kam, along with Bishop collection technician Ann Iwashita, came to Kwajalein last week in person to deliver the cultural artifacts to the Marshallese Cultural Center, where they will be on display for at least a year.

The museum's board of directors were very supportive of the idea to loan the pieces to the cultural center, according to Kam.

"They like the idea of us sharing the collection with people who were responsible for them," she said.

The items include a necklace made out of human hair; a tattooing needle that uses a bird's beak as the point; two long, skinny belts made out of coconut rope and wrapped with woven pandanus leaves; four mats, whose woven edges are dyed and decorated in complicated geometric patterns and which were used as skirts by women; and a fire trough, a piece of wood used to start fires.

The pieces represent dead or dying art forms in the Marshalls, according to Cris Lindborg, director of exhibits at the Marshallese Cultural Center.

"The craftsmanship has been lost," Lindborg said. "One purpose of this loan is to rekindle it."

In conjunction with the loan, the cultural center is sponsoring a contest for Manit Day next month, offering cash prizes to craftspeople who can best recreate a spear, a mat skirt and a belt, Lindborg said.

While this is not the first time the Bishop has loaned items to the cultural center (it did so when the repository opened its doors in 1997), the exchange involves a rigorous process of paperwork and criteria, such as providing a climate-controlled area, that the cultural center must meet before it can receive the items.

Now that the relationship is established, Lindborg said she hopes "this is the beginning of a continuous exchange" of artifacts.

There are about 80,000 items in the Bishop Museum's ethnology collection, but many of the items are in storage, according to Kam. There are no concrete numbers on how many of those items are from Micronesia, or the Marshall Islands in particular, but Kam said those pieces possibly number in the thousands.

"We have a pretty large Micronesian collection," Kam said, adding that many of the pieces were brought to the museum at the turn of the 20th century, if not earlier. The skirts, for example, date back to the late 1800s.

Lindborg said the cultural center collection numbers between 300 and 400 artifacts, not including the numerous photographs that have been donated or that are part of the Joachim deBrum photograph collection that the center is currently digitally archiving and restoring.

The items now on loan were requested by Lindborg based on previous trips she's made to the museum, coming mainly from the Bishop's collection in storage.

"[Kam] even took something off display," Lindborg said. "I just drool when I go into the storage areas."

The new items are already on display.

"It's exciting to be able to start this," Lindborg said.

The cultural center is currently open to the public from 4-6 p.m. Mondays and 3-5 p.m. Fridays, with handicraft demonstrations on Mondays. Group tours are also available.

Tattooing, once a prevalent practice in the Marshalls, is a lost art form, though the tools of the trade still exist in the form of a tattoo needle made with a bird's beak, at right. Next to that is another coconut rope and pandanus leaf belt.

Rec fund on target, Ten-Ten sales soar over last year

By Peter Rejcek
Associate Editor

The recreation fund is on target to meet projected expectations for the 2001-02 fiscal year, according to Lloyd Jordan, Residential Services manager.

"From nine months ago, there's been significant improvement in retail," Jordan said. "I think we're doing better."

One of the more popular improvements, based on internal and external customer surveys, has been increased hours at the retail facilities. However, with the exception of Ten-Ten, sales have not performed as well as hoped with the added hours. And with employees working more hours because the stores are open longer, direct labor costs are up, Jordan noted, but he said there would be no changes for now.

"We are in hopes of bringing new items in the stores that will generate more sales and compensate for the increased labor costs associated with additional hours of operation," he said.

Some of that new stock is already here or soon will be, according to Paul Divinski, Retail and Provisioning manager.

More than half of 400 new bikes at Macy's West have already been sold, Divinski said, while on Monday Macy's kicked off a major sale featuring Yankee Candles, selling more than 2,500 over the weekend. That same day bookcases, furniture and rugs were available from the Macy's West warehouse. Other items that just arrived by barge and are finding their way into the stores include tapestry throws, pillows, totes, and navigator shirts, all featuring Kwaj logos, along with back-to-school clothes. Many of the logo items are already sold out, Divinski said.

Divinski said many other items are in production or en route, including rosewood furniture from China; $40,000 worth of Swarovski crystal; thermal mugs, ceramic mugs, bike bottles, salt and pepper sets, spoon rests, wallets, key chains and LED Lights, all with Kwaj or Roi logos; and logo hats, along with Kwaj-themed posters and postcards.

While sales are not quite as strong as hoped at some retail facilities, Ten-Ten has enjoyed an average 12 percent increase in activity from January to July compared to last year, according to Divinski. The store did its best business in May, when sales were up 23 percent compared to a year ago. Overall, the sundry store accounts for more than 30 percent of all retail and service sales at USAKA, based on figures Divinski released to the Hourglass.

Part of that increase in patronage is undoubtedly a decision last November to allow Marshallese to shop for consumable goods at Ten-Ten, as well as Gimbel's on Roi-Namur.

Divinski said the new customer base is not the only reason for the better sales.

"The primary reason is increased stock levels on basic merchandise," he said, also citing the sundry store's longer hours, central location and addition of many new or requested items.

"Besides increased stock levels, there is a greater variety of products continually added this year," Divinski noted. Such products include items treasured by both the health-conscious and the hedonistic: low-fat, non-fat, sugar-free products as well as what Divinski calls "customer-impulse food items" like ice cream. Ten-Ten has also expanded its book and greeting card selection as well as its health and beauty aids.

IFT-9 to be delayed 30 to 45 days due to booster concerns ...

ing to catch the 9:30 a.m. Aloha flight. Another 125 guests were expected to check out by Thursday.

"It's going good," she said.

About 50 people, accounting for about half of the seats, were able to make it out Wednesday morning on Aloha, according to Joe Johnston, Aviation Department airfield manager.

Like the Kwaj Lodge, Aviation had to make do without its Marshallese workers because of the two-hour ferry delays caused by west winds.

"It was a little rough this morning without any Marshallese there," said a weary Johnston.

Personnel shortages weren't the only thing keeping Aviation scrambling this morning.

"The problem is a lot of these people triple booked on Aloha, Continental and ATI," Johnston said, adding that some flights in the summer are overbooked by as much as 40 percent because of the high volume of cancellations by some customers.

Despite that, he said, "Very seldom do we turn people away from flights."

The remainder of TDY personnel were expected to catch the Wednesday and Friday Continental flights and Thursday's ATI plane. The National Guard unit from American Samoa, which was helping handle Meck security, is scheduled to leave on Saturday's C-141, according to Johnston. The passenger capacity of that flight may be bumped from about 40 to 80 seats, he said.

"I think by Saturday we should have everybody off," he said.

Mission postponed

IFT-9, scheduled for Sunday, is postponed 30 to 45 days, according to a press advisory issued by the Department of Defense.

The postponement is due to concerns about the exhaust nozzle seal of the first and second stage rocket motors of the two-stage ground-based interceptor that was being readied for launch here at the Reagan Test Site, the advisory said.

Ground testing Saturday (local time) revealed a potential problem with the nozzle, which is located at the bottom of the modified Minuteman II rocket motors, and moves in order to steer the GBI after it is launched. Subsequent investigation revealed that the nozzle seals might be damaged.

The Minuteman II boosters, which are more than 30 years old, serve as a surrogate booster rocket for the GBI. This booster system will only be used for one more intercept test after IFT-9 before it is replaced by a modern three-stage booster system. Since the GBI was already installed in its launch silo at RTS, it will be necessary to remove the missile from the silo in order to replace the rocket motors. These motors will be delivered here in the next few weeks.

IFT-9 will be the seventh intercept test of the Ground-based Midcourse Defense system. The six previous tests have resulted in four successful intercepts, including the last three.

The GMD system is based on the "hit to kill" technology that collides the kill vehicle launched from RTS with a target warhead approximately 140 miles above the earth.

SMDC team looks at USAKA security ...

ing the parcel around 9:15 a.m., Tikka said he had planned to catch the stores as they opened, around 10 a.m. But the package sat, and with the 11:30 a.m. call, the emergency crews cordoned off the area to the lunchtime crowds that shop, pick up mail and otherwise visit.

"Once they got the call, the response was very good," Tikka said.

Tikka acknowledged the call came late, a fact noted by Lt. Col. Robert Bruce, who leads a visiting Space and Missile Defense Command counter-terrorism team.

"It was a natural let-down after a mission," Bruce said, adding that prior to the cancellation of IFT-9, he found the community fully engaged in security measures.

The drill came as part of an evaluation by the team. USAKA officials created the drill on Tuesday because the SMDC team was originally on hand to observe security measures for IFT-9, which was postponed earlier that day.

The team assessed efforts across the board in intelligence, engineering, information management and contractor operations, along with the counter-terrorism exercise.

"One thing to keep in mind," he said, "this is not in response to 9/11. The Army has been doing anti-terrorism work almost since shortly after the Revolution.

"We don't want to create an inviting target. 'No easy targets' is the buzzword," he added.

Among his conclusions, Bruce said the perceived isolation of Kwajalein is not a guarantee of safety, with the number of flights coming through Bucholz Army Airfield and boats coming up through the Marshall Islands from throughout the Pacific.

"You're not as disconnected as the old hands remember," Bruce said.

On the plus side, Bruce said he found strong security measures and the closeness of the community to be a benefit as compared to an atmosphere of no security at entry/exit points and complete disinterest in what happens around the island.

"You have a natural 'hang-together' attitude," he said. "You take care of each other.

"You've got an order to things, where everything has a purpose. It may be on island time, but it has a purpose."

Obituary

A memorial service for Jane Crane of the Marshall Islands will be held at 6:30 p.m., Saturday, Aug. 31, at Island Memorial Chapel.

Mrs. Crane died in her sleep Tuesday, Aug. 13, 2002, at her family home in Maple Shade, N.J.

Funeral services were held Aug. 19 in Needham, Mass., where she was raised. Interment was at Mt. Benedict Cemetery, West Roxbury.

She lived on Kwajalein 17 years and was active in the Kwajalein Golf Association as well as an avid runner.

She is survived by her husband, Glenn, and son, Matthew, both of Kwajalein; stepson, David Crane of Maryland; father and mother, Richard and Alice Bisson of West Wareham; grandfather, Armond J. Bisson of Canton, Mass.; three sisters — Kathleen J. Cintolo of Waltham, Mass., Mrs. Carl (Gail E.) Davis of Florida, and Mrs. Luke (Charlene A.) Bisson-Orabona of Hudson, Mass.; one brother, Richard Bisson Jr. and his wife Rosie, of Centerville, Mass.; nine aunts, five uncles and numerous other nieces, nephews, cousins and friends.

Memorial donations may be made in her memory to St. Joseph's Elementary School, 90 Pickering St., Needham, MA 02492.

For more information about the local service, contact Dotty Miller at 52420.

Rich to be assessed for possible upgrade to digital format ...

Snider, Community Activities Entertainment Services superintendent. New speakers featuring the ability to produce Dolby Digital Surround Sound and THX quality have already been installed.

"They're high quality, but they didn't have high quality input," Snider said.

Once the digital projector is in place, "there will be a major difference in quality," he added.

The upgrade will also allow Community Activities to show a greater variety of films, as many movies these days are not released in 16mm format, such as George Lucas' Star Wars blockbusters or the Austin Powers trilogy. Some movies will be provided by Army and Airforce Exchange Services, though Community Activities will also buy movies outright to build its own collection.

This weekend also marks the last time 16mm films will play at the Tradewinds Theater on Roi-Namur. The setup of a new movie system in C Building, featuring a 65-inch Sony high-definition video wide-screen TV, will be completed this week as well, Snider said.

The work is expected to interrupt only this weekend's movie schedule at the Yuk theater. The Tradewinds will play "American Beauty" and "Shanghai Noon" for its last weekend. The ARC, which is open only to adults 19 years old and up, has a trio of new releases slated — "Ocean's Eleven," "High Crimes" and "Hart's War." See the back page for a full schedule listing. "The Princess Bride" will be shown at the Youth Center Sunday.

While this weekend's move to the ARC is temporary, Community Activities did begin a Wednesday movie night at the former unaccompanied personnel building earlier this month. That will continue to be a regular feature, Snider said.

"It was just something we wanted to do," he said, adding that a microwave will be added for popcorn.

The technician will also pay a visit to the Richardson Theater during the week to reassess options and costs at that venue. The Rich was shut down earlier this year because of the costs associated with upgrading it to digital. The 16mm format it currently uses is being phased out.

The command has promised to upgrade the popular open-air theater if the community can double current aluminum can recycling rates from 30 to 60 percent. Also part of the deal is a new kitchen in the ARC. That money has already been set aside, according to LuAnne Fantasia, USAKA Public Affairs officer.

KRC opens 2002-03 season with Fun Run, biathlon

By Peter Rejcek
Associate Editor

The Kwajalein Running Club is sprinting into the 2002-03 season with a pair of events in the next couple of weeks.

First up is No. 1 of 10 monthly Fun Runs Monday, starting next to the Community Activities Building (bldg. 805). The Fun Runs typically offer a range of lengths, from 1/2 mile up to 6.2 miles for Fun Run No. 9, a tune-up to the club's signature Rustman Triathlon. Monday's Fun Run offers a maximum course of 4 miles.

KRC members who participate in at least six Fun Runs will receive a free KRC shirt at season's end, according to Bob Sholar, KRC president.

The second event is the 22-year-old Run-Walk/Swim-Float Biathlon on Sept. 2. The event typically marks the "low-key" commencement of the club's season, which ends May 19 with the final Fun Run.

The biathlon involves a 2.6-mile run followed by a 600-yard swim. The race begins and ends at Emon Beach. The swim is an out-and-back course around floats in the water safety area. Swimming aides are allowed, unless the participant is competing competitively, according to Sholar. Certified lifeguards will patrol the swim area, he said.

The biathlon, like most KRC events, is open to members and non-members alike. There is no registration fee for the biathlon, though club membership registration forms will be available.

It costs $10 for adults and $25 for families of three or more to join for one year. Fees pay for refreshments and other operating supplies. Members receive a discount on entry fees for those major events awarding custom T-shirts. Non-members pay a premium for T-shirt events.

The club has about 150 members, including children, Sholar said.

He added that the club is always looking for new members of any age or fitness level. Visitors are also welcome to come out and participate in club events.

"We try not to take ourselves too seriously," he said.

However, the club emphasizes caution and safety, and advises participants, particularly those new to Kwajalein's hot and humid climate, to slowly acclimate themselves to distances and conditions.

"Runs beyond 45 minutes at Kwajalein can put you at dehydration risk," Sholar said.

The club is one of the island's most venerable organizations, with roots going back to the late 1960s. It went through a brief lull in the mid-1970s and was then reborn in 1977.

KRC's Rustman Triathlon, scheduled for April 28, is the club's biggest event of the year and is a slightly scaled down version of the Ironman held on the Big Island, Hawaii. The 1-kilometer swim/42-kilometer bike/10-kilometer run has been held annually since 1980 and is one of the world's oldest triathlons, according to Sholar.

The rat is back

Ritho Komijen from Roi FOM rigs the radome in preparation for a crane to lift it onto a pedestal on the Roi golf course, where it was removed more than a year ago for refurbishment. Issac Langrine, who works at Kwaj FOM, painted the new logo that greets commuters to Roi. The original landmark dates back to 1967, when a security captain first sketched the image of a fun-loving rat on the mushroom-shaped dome.

Yuk theater closed this weekend for upgrade

This week and this week only: All movies will be shown at the Adult Recreation Center and Youth Center.

That's to allow for a final upgrade at the Yokwe Yuk Theater, which will be outfitted with a digital projec-tor next week by a technician with Cinema Equipment Dealers, ending the era of 16mm films on Kwajalein.

Additional sound system equipment, including center channel speakers and bigger subwoofers, will also be installed, according to Steve
