The Sky is the Limit

Range sets sights on aviation business

By Jim Bennett
Editor

While a deal to bring B-2 bombers to Kwajalein in March has fallen through, the move to market the Reagan Test Site as an alternate training site for aircraft has taken off.

With USAKA's budget over the $200 million mark annually and missile testing limited to a select number of customers, the Reagan Test Site has targeted a different market to attract more business — aviation.

"Huntsville has been working with us to generate new customers," said Maj. Diana Hansen, assistant programs manager for RTS. "It's thinking outside the box from how we're used to" (See SONAR, page 4)

A B-2 Spirit approaches a KC-10A from McGuire Air Force Base, N.J., during a training exercise. The B-2 Spirit is a multi-role bomber capable of delivering both conventional and nuclear munitions. The range is looking to attract aircraft, B-2s and others, for training exercises here at Reagan Test Site.

Parents of children at Kwajalein Child Development Center and School-Age Services both will see fee increases beginning in February. These increases are based on fee changes issued by the Department of Defense.

"This year, changes in the way fees are calculated will reduce fees for some lower-income families and dual military couples, while officials said other patrons will likely see a $2 to $4 increase per week," according to a January 11 ArmyLINK news story.

For local fees, "We're still in the process of getting income statements," said Trina Tiffany, CDC director, adding, "We did have fee increases."

US and RMI reach land use deal

By Jim Bennett
Editor

Negotiators for the U.S. government and Republic of the Marshall Islands have reached an agreement in principle that maintains the current 5 percent tax level on contract workers and could keep USAKA around up to 2086, according to Dr. John Fairlamb, an SMDC foreign affairs specialist working with the negotiators.

"The tax issue is off the table," Fairlamb said, adding the U.S. argued "it would have several negative effects on our ability to attract a quality work force."

Meeting in Honolulu last week, Al Short, U.S. Compact negotiator, and RMI Foreign Minister Gerald Zackios initialed a Memorandum of Intent to extend the Military Use and Operating Rights Agreement to 2066 with a U.S. option for 20 years beyond that. The agreement, however, must be approved in final form by both governments. The current extension is set to expire in 2016.

The U.S., however, reserves the right to leave Kwajalein early, after 2023, and with seven years advance notice.

In return for the extended use of the atoll, the U.S. will pay $15 million per year beginning in fiscal year 2004, which starts Oct. 1. That's a nearly $4 million increase from the current $11.3 million paid annually. This payment will be adjusted for inflation, and beginning in 2014 the base payment will be raised to $18 million annually, or if, through inflation, the original $15 million has exceeded that amount, the greater amount will be used for the base payment, which also will continue to increase with inflation, said a spokesman for the Office of Compact Negotiations at the U.S. State Department.

In addition, the U.S. agreed to an initiative of the RMI Government to establish a Joint Labor Relations (See FUNDING, page 4)

Lawsuit dismissal trims the fat from the docket

"One tofu patty, lettuce and pickles on a rice cracker," should be the new jingle?

I couldn't believe my ears the first time, so I had to listen to the news again. A frivolous lawsuit was actually thrown out of court on Wednesday (stateside). No, really I'm not kidding!

"It is not the place of the law to protect them from their own excesses," said U.S. District Judge Robert Sweet when he threw out a class-action lawsuit that claimed McDonald's food was responsible for obesity, diabetes and other assorted health problems in children.

What a concept — taking responsibility for your own actions and teaching your children to do the same.

"Well, I knew it said 'super-sized' and that the fries were fried in oil, but the ads were too alluring and forced me to eat there four times a week," said Joe Plaintiff.

I don't think so.

Maybe this is the death knell of an era — judges allowing lawsuits like the 1997 case involving a woman burned by a cup of nefarious McDonald's hot coffee held between her legs. Maybe, just maybe, juries will follow Sweet's example and stop awarding millions of dollars in frivolous lawsuits — $3 million in the hot coffee case.

If taking responsibility for your own actions really catches on, maybe manufacturers will remove the excess warning labels stuck on every item you purchase. "Don't immerse plugged in hairdryer in tub while you are in the tub," and my all time favorite plastic bag warning: "Do not put over head and use a twist-tie around your neck," will go the way of the dodo bird.

Then if someone does electrocute or asphyxiate themselves, instead of suing, others will say, "Wow, was that ever a dumb thing to do."

Letters To the Editor

Thank you Star and those who cared

Our beloved dog Star left us on Jan. 19, after almost 11 wonderful years with us. She loved living here on Kwaj as much as we do.

We wish to extend our heartfelt thanks to the following people:

- Clarrisa Washington, for being there and helping us through those first hours — without you, it would have been so much harder;

- Margaret Morrison, for her compassion and kindness to us and to Star;

- Margaret and Brian Morrison, Dr. Lindborg, Phil Malloy, Jack Martindale, Dan Eggers, Tom Kane, Atnel Dribo and Jeff Santos for their help with arrangements;

- Marion Ruffing for her thoughtful calls and sympathy;

- Clarrisa Washington, John and Annie Tompkins and Chuck Goins for helping us say goodbye to our friend;

- Marcy Crandall, John Tompkins, Javier Mora, Mandy Heimenz and Casey Evans for being surrogate parents to Star during times we were not on island.

Everyone's kindness has been greatly appreciated.

Goodbye, Star. You left us with wonderful memories. We love you.

— Larrel and Joan Riggs

Med team cares for unexpected

My family and I would like to say a heartfelt "THANK YOU" to the dedicated staff at the hospital. Especially to Dr. Janikowski, Dr. Thornhill, Dr. Lindborg, Mary Fisher, Carolyn Coopman, Valerie Janikowski, Marian Naretto, Nancy Barge and Sandra Clark.

We are very grateful that our little boy is bouncing off the walls again and as Dr. Thornhill so aptly puts it, "without any stitches."

The unexpected happens quite a bit when there is a baby around the house, and we were lucky to have such a great medical team on-island to take care of Darin.

Once again, THANKS A MILLION!!
— Jorge & Siewleng Hiraldo

Kwaj's K-9 cops sniff out potential trouble

By Lynn Coppes
Feature Writer

Anyone who flies into Kwajalein more than once soon knows the drill: After leaving the plane and entering the terminal building, all carry-on luggage is neatly lined up. New hires usually watch, intrigued, as dogs are led in to sniff out any drugs or explosives in the bags.

These highly trained dogs are part of the Kwajalein Police Department's special K-9 Unit. Five dogs – three drug-sniffing and two bomb-sniffing dogs – and their handlers make up the unit, supervised by Lt. Moses Moreno.

Currently noticeable next to the police headquarters, they'll soon have a new home to call their own. New kennels are being built at the south end of the island, and the dogs should be moving sometime in March.

The dogs are Belgian Malinois, a breed known for their intelligence, high energy, alertness and agility, according to information gathered from the American Belgian Malinois Club, found on the Internet. Malinois, bred in the Netherlands, were used in the past primarily as a herding dog, but now are used for detection and protection. Their high drive and intense focus on their handlers make them ideal for police work.

Malinois also have an exceptionally good "nose." The same Internet source states that canines have 25 times more olfactory receptors than people do. Dogs, it was stated, can sense odors at concentrations nearly 100 million times lower than humans, and their sense of smell is so exceptional they can detect a drop of blood in five quarts of water.

As young dogs, the KPD's Malinois are given intense training at the Global Training Academy in San Antonio, Texas, for approximately three months. After they arrive on Kwaj, they're further trained and challenged to heighten their skills.

Each handler is responsible for a particular dog, said handler Sgt. Crystal Greer, "and the dog responds primarily to the commands of that person."

KPD Sgt. Kevin Ferguson watches as Tanja, one of three drug-sniffing dogs on-island, "discovers" a narcotic substance placed for training in a file cabinet at police headquarters. The dogs practice their skills frequently in such exercises to keep their skills, and noses, sharp.

All commands are given in Dutch, the dog's native human language, she added.

Drug-sniffing dogs are trained to recognize several different narcotics, and bomb detection dogs are skilled in sniffing out explosives.

As an example of what a bomb-sniffing dog can do, handler Sgt. Steve Dunham explained that "if people were given a particular smell, let's say gasoline, we'd only know that it was gasoline. The bomb-sniffing dogs, though, can pick out the actual components of that substance."

And that, he said, is the key to detecting explosives. They are trained to detect what goes into the making of explosive materials.

"A dog's natural instinct is to hunt something down," said handler Sgt. Kevin Ferguson. "We're honing that skill into hunting down narcotics and explosives."

Training is ongoing. Narcotics and bomb components are hidden on a regular basis so that the dogs are continually learning and practicing. After being given the command to search, they go to work with single-minded focus and enthusiasm. When they successfully locate the hidden object, they sit quietly next to the handler and wait. Their reward for a job well done is a rubber toy or ball. And for them, it means only one thing: work is over; time to play.

Highly energetic, the dogs are taken out for exercise every day, sometimes to swim in a secluded beach area.

They're friendly, but Greer cautions that it's always best to ask before approaching the dogs when seeing them around the island with their handlers.

The Malinois generally work until they are about nine years old; then they are usually retired and adopted.

Sonar array set to score hits ...

In their first attempt, range marketers tried to secure the 509th Bomber Wing for two weeks of training in March. The 509th pilots would have flown their B-2 stealth bombers to Guam, from where they would use the range to train on target acquisition, flying seven to ten sorties over the test period. Pilots could then drop precision guided munitions on pre-selected grid points in the water while the RTS' underwater sonar array would record the hits, much in the same way the array records hits by reentry vehicles from ballistic missiles.

While originally receptive to the idea, the recent typhoon on Guam damaged hangers. That and recent world events forced the 509th to cancel their plans, according to Hansen.

“It's a good business that there are organizations looking at RTS for realistic training alternatives,” Hansen said. If successful, it would add a new dimension to current range business, which includes space surveillance operations and missile testing.

Missile testing could also expand with the creation of the Pan-Pacific range that would have Kwajalein working in conjunction with Pacific Missile Range Facility in Kauai, Vandenberg Air Force Base in California and sites in Alaska, as well. But the missile community is still limited in number and with the Ground-based Midcourse Defense Segment nearing deployment stage in 2004, range officials wanted to identify new sources of business.

Hansen said the range will continue its effort with hopes they can land a deal in the future.

Fees based on family income ...

egory, from 1 to 6,” Tiffany said. Families get a 20 percent discount for each additional family member after the first, she added.

At Kwajalein, these increases will amount to between 15 and 22 cents an hour, depending on the family's income category. For a full week, this would be an increase of $6 to $8.80.

That means the average Kwaj family, and most are in categories 3 to 6, will pay between $331 to $517 a month per child for 40 hours a week of care, Tiffany said.

Fees at all child-development centers and school-age programs are set based on family income levels, including housing, Tiffany said, explaining that the housing allowance is taken into consideration in different ways depending on one's employer.

The Army provides a range of fees, and there is some variance from place to place, Tiffany said.

For a child who is at CDC full time, for example, monthly fees would now range between $190 and $517 a month.

Other changes announced by the DoD were raising the income limit for the lowest family income category and changing the total family income calculation method for dual military couples living off post, neither of which affect Kwajalein residents.

“The level of income changes had little effect at Kwajalein,” Tiffany said. Also Kwajalein doesn't have anyone living off post.

Kwajalein CDC provides care for children from the age of 2½.

Funding includes Compact grant ...

Board to improve coordination between USAKA and the RMI Government on issues involving the Marshallese work force. The U.S. also agrees to provide an annual grant of $200,000 to the RMI Environmental Protection Authority to increase RMI capabilities to participate as a partner with USAKA environmental authorities monitoring environmental effects of U.S. activities on the defense sites, and to participate more effectively in the annual survey based on USAKA and GRMI environmental standards, said Fairlamb. The $200,000 grant will be indexed for inflation under the Compact, as amended, and will continue for as long as the MUORA remains in effect.

The U.S. will continue to pay the $1.9 million annually to compensate for the impact of U.S. activities on Kwajalein Atoll as specified in the current MUORA. However, the RMI Government will have to work out with the landowners how this money will be spent in the future and ensure that these funds are accountable, Fairlamb said. Once a scheme satisfactory to the U.S. is proposed, the U.S. will agree to index these funds per the Compact, as amended, and to continue the payment for as long as the MUORA remains in effect.

The U.S. has also agreed to pay to the RMI Government another $3.1 million in Compact aid money that will be targeted on infrastructure enhancements on Ebeye and the rest of Kwajalein Atoll. This aid money would increase to $5.1 million in 2014, the spokesman said.

In the future, however, the U.S. Government will authorize Compact economic assistance money for specific projects and plans, and the language of the agreement includes enforcement measures for the Department of the Interior to oversee, according to the spokesman. Under the agreement, Interior officials may inspect and audit those funds and the spending, and withhold payments if they find irregularities.

The MUORA agreement follows an agreement on the Compact language last October, which outlined an additional $43 million outlay to the GRMI. Under the Compact, in 2004, the U.S. will pay $36 million in grants and put aside $7 million into a trust fund. The annual grants will decrease by $500,000 annually, while the trust fund deposits will increase by the same amount until 2023, when the Compact funding requirements expire. At that point, officials hope the trust fund will have accumulated enough money to give the GRMI greater financial independence.

State Department officials will now revise the Compact Title Two, Status of Forces Agreement and MUORA language to reflect the agreed-to changes. They intend to submit the new language to Congress in the spring, the spokesman said.

'Signs' takes or brings viewer along for ride

By Rich Feagler

AFN — Kwajalein

"Signs" is a paradox. At times it was scary and compelling, but by the end I felt a bit short-changed. A kind of cross between "Close Encounters of the Third Kind," "Field of Dreams" and "Night of the Living Dead," it's the story of Graham Hess, a man who loses his faith after his wife passes away. Together with his two doe-eyed children, and his baseball-player brother he boards himself up in his Pennsylvania farmhouse to stave off a large-scale alien attack!

This movie is built almost exclusively around our sense of anticipation, which is both a strength and a weakness. Its suspense plays on our desire to see what's coming next in a way that proves a lot more gripping than what actually comes next.

Still, the movie held my attention and I was actually enjoying it – but then I made a mistake. I started to think about it. That's when things began to not make sense.

For example, I couldn't understand why the Hess family acted with such self-destructive strangeness. They seemed to keep putting themselves in harm's way. Why didn't they get out of there? Heck, the aliens gave them enough time to make it all the way to Majuro. But since they decided to stick around, why didn't they stock up on weapons, or call the National Guard or perhaps their own version of CIS? And why, when it was all too obvious to Graham, and any sane person, that they should make like a tree and leave, did he put it to a family vote, à la the Brady Bunch, only to get outvoted by two young children and a baby brother?

I don't ask for much in a movie, but I do expect the characters to act like real people, otherwise the plot becomes contrived, manufactured and formulaic. You might as well be watching the Steve Harvey show.

As the movie progressed and I continued to walk that fine line between being scared and analyzing the storyline, more questions popped into my head. Like how are the aliens capable of taking over a planet in a matter of days, yet they can't quite figure out how to unlock a pantry door? And what about that long droning oratory Graham gives his brother as the aliens are in the process - IN THE PROCESS MIND YOU - of busting down the walls of their home. "WHAT ARE YOU DOING MAN? RUN!!!" I thought.

And as for the ending — talk about manufactured! I'm sure had I been in a theater I would have heard at least a few unintentional laughs.

Still, despite my seemingly thumbs down view of this movie, I will say that it is watchable. The director is no slouch, and he does a good job with the suspense thing. You will be scared at times and it is an interesting flick.

If you rent this though, just promise yourself you'll do nothing but watch it. Don't think about it, don't analyze it, don't try to make sense of it, don't anticipate the characters' next moves, don't attempt to relate to the characters, don't adjust your television set, don't do any of these things, just sit there quietly and observe. Perhaps then you'll appreciate it more than I.

A lot of other people sure did.

Hourglass

"Signs" is no cute, heart-warming "ET," or secretive, uplifting "Close Encounters," but neither is it the mass-destruction, let's all pull together and defeat the aliens with bombs and explosions, "Independence Day." Instead, director M. Night Shyamalan included me in the very personal world of one tiny, crippled farm family's fight, both physically and mentally, for survival against long-held beliefs and some particularly nasty aliens.

Since I'm not a big fan of scary movies, I wasn't sure if I really wanted to go along for the ride. Shyamalan drew me in with signs, such as crop circles appearing overnight in cornfields; metaphors, the Hess family's father, Mel Gibson, is also Father, a reverend who has forsaken his religion because of the recent death of his wife; and humor, three family members sitting together with aluminum foil candy kiss hats on to ward off aliens reading their minds. The movie family became my family and the aliens, my problem.

Throughout the movie, we learn through television reports what is happening to families and nations all over the world. The quirky humor heightened the horror of what was both seen and unseen.

Although Gibson convincingly portrays a grieving widower relying only on what he thinks is concrete knowledge, having given up any, more esoteric beliefs; it is his children, played by Rory Culkin and Abigail Breslin, who ring particularly true. The two skillfully let me know the reality of the situation facing them with minimal lines.

A gripping ride for 90 of the 106 minutes, the ending tied up the loose ends a little too conveniently and quickly. But for most of the movie, the journey inside the family's home was worth the ride.

Jeramon non kom

Jeramon non kom "is the Marshallese way to say, "Goodbye and good luck friends."

Wayne Williams and Margaret Thompson-Williams will be leaving on the ATI flight on Tuesday, Jan. 28, after 12 years.

They will return to their home in Pottsboro, Texas, north of Dallas, 1½ miles from Lake Texoma on the Oklahoma border.

Wayne was Automotive supervisor on Roi-Namur, while Margaret worked as Finance supervisor on Roi-Namur.

They say, "There comes a time when everyone must leave these beautiful islands and return to their own home. We are looking forward to being able to spend more than 'just a few days' with our children and grandchildren. We will miss all the friends we have made out here. If you're ever in 'God's country' stop in, sit a spell and say howdy."

Roi puts the hurt on Kwaj ...

Steve Fuchs and Kim Parker beat Willie Ng and JR Watson, 2-1, while Kwaj's Mickey Santorum and Jim Roby put up points for the team, beating Tom Drabek and Jim Corbett, 3-2.

But Roi's Ray Moyer and Shane Leonard defeated Gerry Wolf and Tom Webber, 2-1; Frasier Radidul and Pam Frase beat Jamie Morris and Mike Nicholson, 4-3; and Howard Duarte and John Ellis topped Ralph Gary and TC Cassidy, 4-3, giving the Roi-Rats an overall 8-3 advantage going into the final singles rounds.

Kwaj's Vernon Adcock cut the team deficit to four, beating Brian Matsumoto, 2-1.

But Roi's Selentina Beniamina took down Guy Baker, 4-3, and Roi's Conrad Nakasone defeated Flynn Gideon, 7-5, extending Roi's team lead to 10-4 and clinching the championship.

Kwaj finished out the day with three wins and two ties, however, with Kwaj's Sophia Gordon over Nid Sponseller, 4-3; Alex McCalmont over Russell Beniamina, 4-3; and Jeff Jones over Linda Shuett, 4-3. Kwaj's Paul Allas and Roi's Steve Ojiri tied, as did Roi's Andy Frase and Kwaj's Jeff Beckley.

Scrubs pitcher Alfreda Ching lets go a pitch during a scrimmage match against Miss Demeanors Thursday night at Ragan Field. The ladies are warming up for the softball season that begins next week.

Softball season set to open

By Lynn Coppes
Feature Writer

The holidays are over, gloves and bats are coming out of storage and 18 softball teams are registered and ready to square off this season, with the first game scheduled for Tuesday.

Two teams signed up to play in the Alpha Division, six teams in the Beta Division, six teams in the Gamma Division and four teams in the Women's Division.

"All rules are the same as last year," said Scott Pratt, Adult Athletics supervisor.

Pratt added that the "one and one count," giving each batter a strike and a ball to start with, will again be used to help speed up the game.

Also, he will continue last year's move to schedule team games on specific nights. Tuesdays and Thursdays are the designated evenings for the Alpha and Beta teams and the Women's Division. The Gamma Division will play Mondays and Wednesdays.

Alpha Division

With only two teams in the division, the Podunkers and Criminals will play the B Division and play a double round robin amongst themselves, giving both teams 14 regular season games. Both teams are a lock for their own divisional best-of-three World Series.

Beta Division

Last year's Beta and Gamma divisions merged this season with HB Monin I, Guppies, Spartans I Boys, Barnacles, Brothers All and Nike rounding out the schedule. Each Beta team will play the Alpha teams along with a double round robin, giving each team 14 regular season games. The top two teams in the division will play a best-of-three World Series.

Gamma Division

Queen of Peace, Mayhem, Spartans II Boys, 2000 Warriors, Da Bomb and Tarlang will play a double round robin, giving each team 10 regular season games. The top two teams will play a best-of-three World Series.

Women's Division

Miss-Demeanors, Scrubs, 30-Something and Spartans II Girls will play a triple round robin, giving each team nine regular season games. The top two teams in the Women's Division will play a best-of-three World Series.

(Check for the weekly softball schedule in next week's Hourglass.)

Roi-Namur retains Atoll Cup

Roi-Namur retained the Atoll Cup for the third straight year this weekend, with an 11-8 victory over the Kwajalein team.

The two teams tied last year, but with Roi's win in 2000, the cup remained with the last winner, with this weekend's tourney to decide the home for the cup for the next year.

In the opening singles rounds, Larry Roberts beat Bob Nast, 5-4, giving Roi a 1-0 lead. Tracy Hampson brought Kwaj back to a 1-1 tie with a 2-1 victory over Will Coughlin.

All rounds followed a match-play format.

But the alternate shot competition proved to be Kwajalein's undoing, as Roi teams swept the category in four matches, going up 5-1. Olly Arrillo and Robin Badayos took Amanda and Roger Reed, 2-1; Milton Barnett and Randy Makabe bested Bob Kunz and Bob Valencia, 3-2; Jimmy Asato and Mike Robertson topped Kevin Grant and Kevin Ehart, 4-3; Dale Sponseller and Jeff Emde overcame James Barrs and Norman Sablas, 3-2.
