Retiring Kwaj pilot honored with 'fini-flight'

Hourglass Reports

Berry Aviation pilot Mike Hendrix ended his 37-year fixed wing career Nov. 28 with a "fini-flight" from Roi-Namur to Kwajalein.

Waiting for him at the Atoll Terminal on Kwaj were friends, family and the Kwajalein Fire Department, who hosed the pilot down after he stepped out of the Metro—a long-time honor and tradition for pilots' final flight.

Hendrix flew for 10 years for Berry Aviation on U.S. Army Garrison-Kwajalein Atoll, but his career spans nearly four decades with both military and civilian fixed wing aircraft and helicopters.

He first got off the ground with the U.S. Army, flying UH-1 "Huey" helicopters, Bell Cobras and Bell Kiwas on medevac, scout and attack missions. He later enjoyed a 21-year career flying international and domestic routes for both Eastern Airways and US Airways.

Hendrix and his wife Sheri will PCS to Oregon next week.

Retiring Berry Aviation pilot Mike Hendrix gets showered by the Kwajalein Fire Department at the Atoll Terminal Nov. 28. The 37-year veteran of the aviation industry made his final flight on USAG-KA Nov. 28.

ZDF, Cafe Roi shine again this Thanksgiving

Hourglass Reports

The Zamperini Dining Facility and Cafe Roi were the places of choice on Thanksgiving Day for many Kwajalein and Roi-Namur residents.

With the cafeterias' epic spread of traditional and local entrees—not to mention their decorative atmosphere—many made sure not to miss out on the feasts and the sense of camaraderie on Thanksgiving.

Kudos to the chefs, cooks, and all of the workers of the Zamperini Dining Facility and Cafe Roi for a great job preparing the feasts for our plates. Your work is much appreciated!

New crop of Six Sigma certs awarded on Kwaj

Hourglass Reports

Kwajalein Range Services' Six Sigma folks recently awarded over a dozen new Yellow Belt and Champion certifications to Kwaj residents. Participants used the training they received to improve work flows in areas ranging from hazardous waste tracking and shipment, to delivery of fresh produce, to publicity of community events. Hats off to the new certificate recipients and their drive to make their work areas more efficient, productive and effective.

High school students kick it at annual Turkey Bowl

Article and photos by Molly Premo
Media Services Intern

Kwajalein Jr./Sr. High School students held their 2014-2015 Turkey Bowl ceremony Nov. 28.

The event, an annual highlight on the school's calendar, serves as Kwajalein's version of a homecoming and consists of several team-building activities aimed at promoting school spirit.

Superintendent Al Robinson began the assembly by welcoming guests and introducing the judges of the competitions: Gloria Cassiday, Ray Drefus, Nick Langley and Monica Sadler.

Students spent the first half of the Turkey Bowl participating in a variety of acts and competitions. In the afternoon they headed over to Emon beach to relax, eat, and play some games.

Juniors Addison Cossey, Leanora Kabua and David Sholar welcomed the senior class up to the stage for recognition by reciting senior salutes, which are short poems about each senior and their personalities. Next the students performed their class cheers.

The cheerleaders were creative expressions of each class' unique identity and personality. Though the judges needed more time to tally points, some immediately commended the performances.

"The cheers this year were all great," Robinson said.

Mereille Bishop and Angelo Lelet kicked off the performance part of the assembly by dancing along to High School Musical's "Can I Have this Dance." Having impressed all students with their slow dancing skills, Bishop and Lelet were announced Mr. and Mrs. Kwaj High.

The Freshmen later taught the crowd what they have been learning about biology this year. Dressed in green and brown, and covered in leaves, they sang and danced to a short song about photosynthesis.

Next, the "Jammers," a group including Dash Alfred, Angelo Lelet, Auguston Lelet, Jared Wase and Peyton Smith, took the stage. Each playing a different instrument, they performed the song "No matter where you are."

The assembly took short "commercial breaks," a unique twist to this year's Turkey Bowl. The first commercial was set in a grocery store as David Sholar was trying to buy a few snacks. The cashier was Addison Cossey, whose arms were played by Lizzie Dorries. Every item Sholar wanted to purchase was tasted by Cossey before Dorries being placed it in a bag. The performance brought loads of laughter from the audience.

A large group of girls then showed off their Hula skills by performing to the song "Haoloto" by Te Vaka. Then a smaller group of girls continued to dance alongside a few boys.

The finale began with just Devante Floor and Agnelo Lelet, who started the Disney mash up. They sang the "Circle of Life", but were joined by a few seventh graders who joined in with "A Whole New World". The 8th grade class came in with "Strangers like Me", and the freshmen sang "Under the Sea." The sophomores added "Hakuna Matata", while the juniors sang "I'll make a man out of you. Finally, the seniors brought in "Let it Go".

The judges tallied up class scores, announcing that the seniors won both the poster and the cheer competition. Students were dismissed and told to meet at the beach at 12:45 p.m.

At Emon Beach, students enjoyed a variety of activities. Many chose to participate in a volleyball, football or

Seabees wrap up Ebeye Island Community Center overhaul

Article and photos by Jordan Vinson
Associate Editor

Construction Civic Action Detail-Marshall Islands, the Navy Seabees detachment currently working on U.S. Army Garrison-Kwajalein Atoll and surrounding RMI communities, wrapped up a major overhaul of the Island Community Center on Ebeye this week.

One of the largest gathering places for people living along the Ebeye-Gugeegue Causeway, the Island Community Center was in need of a range of repairs that the Seabees took on with gusto.

Each specializing in one of three major areas of work—equipment operations, utilities and vertical construction—the 20 Seabees spent two weeks pouring thousands of pounds of cement, installing and wiring more than 60 marine climate-proof LED and fluorescent light fixtures, and installing a new gutter and water catchment system to make use of rainwater that spills from the structure's roof.

Some elements of the project went swimmingly. Petty Officer 3rd Class Warner Ward, a construction electrician in the detachment, made quick work of installing and wiring the 65 brand new ceiling-mounted light fixtures that now illuminate the center's interior. Just over three days after starting his job he was finished. The installation of a new plastic gutter system on the roof of the building and three new 3,000-gallon water cisterns that Ebeye residents will use for potable water also went smoothly.

Other jobs were a bit more frustrating. Above the loud whirr of the team's large—and sometimes undependable—truck-pulled cement mixer, some teammates who had climbed atop the machine to pour in bags of aggregate had no option but to get their hands—and much CLOCKWISE FROM TOP LEFT: Some of the five dozen new marine-rated LED lights shine down from the rafters of the Island Community Center. 12 new concrete slabs, which help cover the interior of the facility, dry last week. baggo games. Others decided to relax on the beach or hop in the water. There were also a few contests in which to compete, the first being a short scavenger hunt.

Every class recruited four members to navigate their way around Emon

Beach picking up clues that would help them figure out the hidden words to win the race. Juniors were the fastest to find all the clues and realize the phrase was "Happy Thanksgiving".

The final contest of the day was a tug-of-war tournament that came down to the seniors and juniors, but the juniors pulled their way to the top.

The day ended with a clean up session. Event organizers announced to the students that the winner of the 2013 Turkey Bowl will be announced during the following school week.

of the rest of their bodies—dirty. After tearing open only a few bags of aggregate mixture, the dust-covered men began to look less like Seabees and more like dirt-baked banditos in a "Mad Max" film. Meanwhile, those on the ground dealt with concrete batches that sometimes came out too soupy and forced the men and women to hold up while they tried to troubleshoot the finicky machine.

It was an annoying but inevitable part of the job, said Builder 2nd Class Wesley Pritchard.

"Because yesterday we had trouble with the machine, we were only able to place six" of the 26 concrete pads required to cover the rest of the interior floor of the building, Pritchard said.

Outside of a handful of short delays that the crewmembers were forced to fix in the sweltering equatorial heat, the team worked with the machine to wrap up the concrete job as efficiently as possible. Ushering load after load of heavy, wet concrete into a handful of wheelbarrows they used to cart the mixture inside, they used 10-by-10-foot square forms made from long wooden boards to corral the mixture and hold it in place. Heaving more concrete into small piles, they slowly filled up the forms and spread the wet cement evenly to make a smooth surface.

25 cubic yards of concrete later, the team had finished a major expansion of the concrete floor space available inside the center.

All the headaches the team experienced in giving the Island Community Center its facelift were worth it in the end, crewmembers said.

"I think it's awesome what we're doing," Ward, the electrician, said, gesturing toward a couple of children who had plopped down just outside the center's chain-link fence to watch the team work. "Seeing the kids' faces every day makes it worth it."

One of the largest gathering places for the community on this section of the atoll, the Island Community Center is often used for island-wide events, many of which are geared to the many children that call Ebeye home.

"We've interacted with the kids quite a bit," Pritchard said. "Obviously because we not only have to keep them off our job site, but because they hang around to watch us work."

One of the children's favorite things to do with the Seabees was to sing a classic children's song from the States, strangely enough.

"They really like singing 'Old McDonald Had a Farm,'" Pritchard laughed. "They will sing it all the time, but all they really know is the 'e-i-e-i-o' part, which they belt out."

The Island Community Center overhaul was only part of a series of construction projects the Gulfport, Mississippi-based crew is tackling during its three-month stay on the atoll. Next on the CCAD-Marshall Islands' agenda is a group of builds slated for Third Island, which the team will begin after completing its transition from Kwajalein to Roi-Namur this week.

A crewmember pushes newly-mixed concrete down a chute from the team's mobile mixer into wheelbarrows for the Seabees.

Mrs. Santa Claus visits with Madeline McClendon and Jady Sikes, left, before the pair of youngsters visit Santa Claus at the Yokwe Yuk Club Monday.

Mrs. Claus reflects on Kwaj holiday

By Mrs. Claus as told to KW Hillis

She's the silent partner of the most charitable couple on the planet. But during her recent visit to Kwajalein, Mrs. Santa Claus offered a few words of cheer to the island residents.

"The people on Kwajalein are so much fun. I just love the tree lighting ceremony. Those wonderful young people at Community Activities ... Simone, Steve, Susu, Amy and all the rest are definitely on Santa's 'good' list," Mrs. Claus said with a twinkle in her eye.

"Of course," she continued, "my favorite part of the whole visit is meet ing the children. That's Santa's favorite part, too. He is always impressed by the large number of Kwajalein children on his 'good' list. Very few show up on his 'bad' list."

Mrs. Claus explained that she and Santa had to hurry back to the North Pole because, "Francer was having problems with his take offs and Santa needed to troubleshoot the problem."

As she patted at a few wisps of her snow white hair, she winked and said, "Besure to put cookies and milk out for Santa on Christmas Eve. He gets very hungry on his trip.

"And have a wonderful Christmas!"

Mini-mall sparkles with Sunday shopping

By Jim Bennett
Editor

Retail outlets closed off the mini-mall to bike traffic and opened for business Sunday night.

"It was really fun," said Kathy Valencia, Retail Merchandising manager. "We just wanted a nice evening where people could enjoy the music and feeling of the season."

Residents also enjoyed the shopping, buying up as much in two hours as they might in a normal six-hour day.

Macy's and Macy's West appeared packed like Santa's sleigh, with items on sale and shoppers grabbing them up.

Outside, the mall glowed with lights hung by volunteers. Various organizations, such as the Shriners, Scuba Club and Sport Fishing Club, set up tables, offering their wares. Carolers sang, including the Cub Scouts. Members of the Jine Tip Tip Club danced and both the Kwajalein Pipes and Drums Corps and Pure Aloha performed.

The mall retailers are planning another special shopping night Dec. 20.

Students take part in a titanic struggle of tug-of-war Wednesday at Coral Sands for the traditional Turkey Bowl for Kwajalein Jr./Sr. high students.

Students join in the fun at Turkey Bowl

By Jon Cassel
Hourglass Intern

Teachers and students alike enjoyed a break from classes Wednesday during the annual Turkey Bowl festivities at Coral Sands Beach.

"It was fun and interesting, but I wish it was longer," Wannetta Corder said.

Turkey Bowl is an ancient tradition at Kwajalein Junior-Senior High School. A week of wacky spirit days preceded the assembly pep rally and the beach bash, allowing students to dress up according to the different themes of the day.

Spirit week consisted of days such as mismatch day, senior citizen day, pajama day, toga day and class color day.

The assembly began with a performance from local band Fast Food Tragedy. Others performed several skits and mock acts to entertain the students.

"I had so much fun, and I think it was the best Turkey Bowl yet," Mike Wiley said.

In addition to the fun, students showed their competitive sides. An array of games and tasks made up this year's competition. Each class created a giant poster, constructed a sand sculpture and tried its hand in games such as coconut shuffle, water balloon toss and tug-o-war. The class that wins, based on a point system, receives a pizza party and a cash prize.
