HOURLASS REPORTS

This orbicular batfish (platyax orbicularis) was photographed by Kwaj resident Jordan Vinson off Emon Beach last weekend. Spotted at a depth of only about 10 meters, this batfish was very friendly, allowing the photographer to come within only about three feet with a camera.

Orbicular batfish are not a rare sight in the waters in and around Kwajalein Atoll. Apart from the Pacific, they are also found in the Red Sea and the Indian Ocean; there have also been reported sightings in the west-central Atlantic near Florida.

The hallmark trait of the orbicular batfish, much like other batfish and spadefish, is the species' particularly long fan-shaped fins, coupled with a comparatively thin width.

According to writers at www.fishbase.org, they feed on small fish, algae and invertebrates.

The health of the species, in terms of population size, has not yet been evaluated by the International Union for the Conservation of Nature.

IN MEMORIAM

Michael Joseph Christopher Kraesig

Michael Kraesig, a Kwajalein resident and Unix system administrator at the Reagan Test Site Mission Control Center, passed away at Queens Medical Center in Honolulu March 31 following an accident on Kwajalein.

He is survived by his father Dennis, mother Kathy, sister Sam and extended family. A memorial for Michael is currently being planned to take place in San Diego.

His father Dennis was at Mikey's side with other family members until the end. He kept his friends on Kwajalein updated on the process.

"I brought Mikey home to be where he started his life," Dennis wrote on Facebook. "He can be found all over Hawaii: at the cliffs of the Pali, in the Bayons of Queens lawn, on the shores of Haleiwa, and in the memories of men and women all over the world. I will never give up the search for his essence. Keep an eye out for him; he will make you smile through your tears and bring joy to your heart. Aloha 'Oe, my sweet boy. Thank you all for all your kind thoughts and shared stories of Mikey. He loved you all."

Back on Kwajalein, Kraesig's many friends gathered together before the start of his softball team's April 1 game to celebrate his life and mark his absence, both on the softball field and elsewhere on the island.

One of only a few garrison residents to involve himself in practically every organized sports league available on the island, Kraesig made good friends on the soccer field, basketball court and swimming pool. But it was baseball—or softball in this case—for which he had the biggest passion, he often said.

Having taken the reigns as captain of the long-standing team, the Criminals, this year, his absence is particularly profound. Initially uncertain in their ability to continue the season without him, his teammates eventually came to the decision that Mikey would indeed want the show to go on. They gathered with friends from throughout the community on the softball diamond where Kraesig excelled in the short stop position, making tough plays on balls ripping between second and third base and cracking singles and doubles like a pro. Taking a moment to say a few remarks before the start of the team's game April 1, the Criminals' acting manager in Mikey's absence, Kwaj resident Nick Yarnes, put into words what the entire island community had been feeling.

"Words cannot express the tremendous grief our island is experiencing over the tragedy of the past week," Yarnes told the crowd from near the pitcher's mound. "As a community, we are stunned. We mourn the tragic loss of Michael Kraesig, and our deepest sympathies go out his family and friends. We commend the actions of the rescue workers, hospital staff and friends who stood by to give Michael well wishes and prayers during his last hours with us. And, as we struggle to return to normalcy, we will not forget the person Michael was and how saddened we are that his life was cut short."

Mikey will be missed; he will never be forgotten.

Michael's friends on Kwajalein gather for a pre-game memorial for the short stop and captain of the Criminals April 1. "Words cannot express the tremendous grief our island is experiencing over the tragedy this past week," friend Nick Yarnes said.

MILITARY HONORS SERVICE MEMBERS' KIDS IN APRIL

HOURGLASS REPORTS

Military children face unique challenges: extended family separations, frequent moves and the stress of deployments. In 1986, the Department of Defense designated April as Month of the Military Child (MOMC) to recognize the personal sacrifice and important contributions of military children.

The MOMC observance is an opportunity to thank and applaud Army children for their support of a ready Army and recognize their role in strong Army families. Total Army Strong underscores the Army commitment to the total Army Family—Soldiers, Department of the Army Civilians, and families. It acknowledges that the strength of the nation is built on the readiness and resilience of every member of the premier all-volunteer Army and commits to a system of programs and services that strengthen resilience and help children and youth mitigate the unique demands of Army life. It also reminds us that the strength of Soldiers comes from the strength of their families.

The Army takes a proactive stance in honoring military children each April. This year's theme—Their Lives, Their Stories—captures the Army's story through the eyes of Army children. Throughout the month of April, Army organizations will provide a variety of fun and exciting events to officially recognize our Army children.

Special events for MOMC 2015 include the Young Lives, Big Stories contest, where military children are invited to share their experiences and win prizes, and Operation Megaphone, a world-wide lock-in for military teens on April 24-25, 2015.

MOMC activities differ across all Army, however, the goal remains the same—to celebrate and recognize Army children.

“Service members’ children also serve.”

Army leaders applaud courage of military children this month

“Whereas, since 1986, Army installations around the world recognize the sacrifices and applaud the courage of military children by celebrating the Month of the Military Child throughout the month of April; and

“Whereas, each day, military children undergo unique challenges, which they face with resilience and dignity beyond their years; and

“Whereas, it is essential to recognize that military children make significant contributions to the country while dealing with uncertainty and concern for their parents during extended hours and long deployments; and

“Whereas, the high demand of family responsibility that military children accept takes courage and strength as they serve the nation along with their parents; and

“Whereas, our men and women in uniform cannot focus on the missions or challenges ahead if they are concerned about their children at home; and

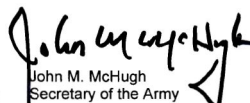

“Whereas, the Army strives to provide a safe, nurturing environment for military children to enable a stronger and more resilient fighting force; and

“Whereas, the Month of the Military Child reinforces this concept, reminds the nation that the service members’ children also serve, and gives communities an opportunity to share their gratitude for the service of military children; and

“Now, therefore, we hereby join the nation in honoring our military children throughout the month of April.”

Month of the Military Child activities differ across all Army garrisons; however, the goal remains the same—to celebrate and recognize Army children.

One activity that is common among all installations, including U.S. Army Garrison-Kwajalein Atoll, is “Purple Up Day.”

This Wednesday, join the community by wearing something purple. It’s a simple, but impactful, gesture that shows that you support USAG-KA military children and honor the challenges they must deal with from year to year.

EASTER HUNTERS CASH IN ON EGGS

HOURGLASS REPORTS

Swarms of Kwaj kids flocked to Richardson Theater Sunday for the island's annual Easter Egg Hunt.

Sponsored and organized by Community Activities staff, the hunt boasted hundreds of Easter eggs scattered throughout the large grassy field next to the open-air theater.

Bags in hand, the older kids darted off under the late afternoon sun to scoop up as many eggs—each one stuffed with goodies like candy and other treats—as possible before they were all accounted for.

The less mobile kids—those toddlers barely able to walk, for instance—got plenty of help from their parents, who in turn got heaps of memories out of the event. Those parents who remembered to bring their cameras were treated to some classic photo opportunities involving their children and the Kwajalein Easter Bunny, all of which will make good fodder for embarrassing their kids years later when they start dating in highschool.

4-H Cooking Club donates supplies

The 4-H Cooking Club made their way via ferry to visit neighbors on Ebeye March 30 to distribute much-needed supplies. The club members voted to donate the $1,204 they raised during their fundraisers to purchase school supplies and personal hygiene products for the Ebeye Public School. Later, the two classes played basketball, soccer and even a few made-up games in the gym; the language barrier was completely dismantled by the power of play. To end the day, the cooking club prepared a small lunch of peanut butter and jelly sandwiches and fruit packs to share with their new friends.

The Ebeye Public School fifth grade class had smiles from ear to ear as they made memories with their neighboring 4-H group. The 4-H members express thanks to their parents, the Ebeye Public School Team and the Kwaj community for supporting their support.

AFN-Kwajalein staff make dish upgrade

ARTICLE AND PHOTOS BY JORDAN VINSON
ASSOCIATE EDITOR

American Forces Radio and Television Service gear on Kwajalein got an important upgrade last week.

Contractors who handle all duties relating to ensuring American Forces Network programming gets to your TV and radio every day finished a week-long project that tasked the team with replacing the garrison's older satellite dish antenna with a new five-meter c-band dish.

The project came about as a matter of necessity after AFN, headquartered in California, decided to contract with a new satellite broadcast company to provide programming via satellite to service members spread across the planet.

Because the new company hired to pump out programming, Luxembourg-based Intelsat, operates a communications satellite that uses a different method of sending out its signal, a whole new receiver dish on the ground was called for, said Dilip Saha, the garrison's Range Radio/AFRTS broadcast technician, after the project.

"Because the new satellite, Intelsat's IS-19, uses circular polarization, while the older satellite uses linear polarization, we could not use the old satellite dish antenna to pick up the signal from the new satellite," Saha said.

All told, the migration took about a week of work, Saha said. The project included the physical installation of the new dish and antenna receiver, along with many hours of configuring the new equipment and tuning satellite receiver devices inside the local AFN station's master control room.

Luckily Saha and his immediate team members—Evelyn Smith, Kezin Lotte, David Elton and Tom Giedroc—got plenty of help along the way.

"The process was pretty good; it wasn't too hard, complicated," Saha said. "We especially thank the Navy Seabees and Public Works, who helped us with some heavy lifting. We also have special thanks to Ron Gamble, Steve Banducci and Cynthia Rivera for stopping by regularly and checking in on the process."

Making dish upgrades on the ground is a job that military bases and other federal installations around the world have to complete by April 21—when AFN's old contract with SES S.A., using the NSS-9 satellite, comes to an end.

SNORKELERS, DIVERS UNCOVER UNDERWATER EASTER PRIZES

HOURGLASS REPORTS

More than 70 Kwajalein adults and kids showed up at Emon Beach Sunday with snorkels, flippers and dive gear. They had come to battle one another for the most prizes in the Kwajalein Scuba Club's annual Underwater Easter Egg Hunt.

Filled with sand, color coded and marked with numbers, the nearly 200 plastic Easter eggs that volunteers scattered along the reef and in the roped-off swimming area along the beach earlier in the day were the targets of the hunt.

Starting off in different groups, droves of snorkelers and a few teams of divers hit the water at different times and turned up different results, many earning prizes at the end of the event. The results are below.

2015 Underwater Easter Egg Hunt results

Measures to prevent drunk driving to increase

BY CAPT. PAMELA DEVILLE
USAG-KA PROVOST MARSHAL

The Provost Marshal's Office would like to remind everyone that driving and boating while under the influence and public intoxication are against the law and Army regulations. These activities can also result in injury and death.

Driving under the influence occurs when an individual drives, operates or is in physical control of a vehicle while intoxicated by alcohol, drugs or other intoxicants. Vehicles include cars, trucks, golf carts, boats and other motorized transportation. An individual can be charged with driving under the influence even if he has not been in an accident. If an accident does result, an individual could be charged with additional offenses for recklessly endangering another person, or placing another person in danger of death or serious bodily injury when you drive drunk.

Public intoxication and driving while under the influence at USAG-KA can result in adverse action, up to and including a bar from the installation. If detained for these violations, an individual may also be required to stay in the detention cell to prevent the individual from harming himself or others. These crimes can also lead to charges under U.S. or RMI law, resulting in jail time and/or fines.

The Command will increase measures to ensure the safety of all residents through increased vehicle and boater sobriety checkpoints.

If someone you know is engaged in these activities, please do your part to interrupt or stop the illegal activity. Please help us keep our community safe. Prevent accidents from happening. Report violations of laws and regulations to the PMO at 54445.
