GETTING COZY WITH KWAJ NURSES

FILM CREW VISITS KWAJ, BIKINI TO PRODUCE "BIG PACIFIC" PBS SPECIAL

BY JORDAN VINSON

An independent film crew flew in to Kwajalein Atoll May 19 to rub elbows with the nurses of Kwajalein. No, not those kinds of nurses. The other ones. The sandstone-colored apex predators with big fins, poor eyesight and a proclivity for fish guts.

Yes, that's right. The regulars at the ol' Small Boat Marina. Having graced many a YouTube video filmed by Kwajalein residents over the years, the SBM nurse sharks earned themselves a special visit by cinematographers and marine biologists last Thursday as part of a five-part PBS special tentatively titled "Big Pacific."

Passing through Kwajalein to get to Ebeye and rendezvous with the Indies Trader charter boat headed for Bikini Atoll, three members of the film crew spent a few hours at the SBM to get face-to-face with some of the largest nurse sharks they've ever seen.

"I really didn't expect them to be that big," bubbled Steve Palumbi, a marine biologist with Stanford University, as a seven-foot, dark-colored nurse shark slowly passed into view.

While Cinematographer Ernie Covacs prepared his 45-pound, $50,000 cinema-grade video camera for submersion, volunteers spent close to an hour chucking dismembered fish parts (and a couple of random slices of bacon) into the lagoon, managing to lure in seven big, sleepy nurses to the marina's fish cleaning station.

Kicking the water's surface on their approach to a cluster of nurses huddled together like big catfish at the rip-rap-laden shore, Covacs and Palumbi got what was probably the first ever in-water camera footage of the Kwajalein nurse sharks. While skittish and averse to swimming near the bipedal strangers making their approach in the water, several nurses stuck around in the area long enough to make several sweeping passes by Covacs' lens fit for the production.

Though a brief stop-over on their way to Bikini, the crew's time spent with the nurse sharks was both valuable and serendipitous, said John Cullum, an ex-National Geographic producer now with NHNZ, a New-Zealand-based natural history production company contracted by PBS to produce the series.

"Our stopover on Kwajalein was almost an accident, but a lucky one," Cullum said while residents hurled frozen fish heads into the water. "I found some YouTube clips about your nurse sharks in the marina here, and so I reached out."

REMEMBERING AKINO LIPPWE

COMMUNITY CONNECTION BY: DON MUSE

It is with great sadness that we announce the passing of long-time USAG-KA resident Akino Lippwe, Security and Access Control lieutenant of Entry/Exit for the garrison.

Akino retired from the U.S. Army and had been a resident of Kwajalein for almost 15 years, working in law enforcement and security during his tenure. Akino was instrumental in the day-to-day security operations at the airport, and he possessed a great assortment of skills and abilities relating to his field.

He was an avid fisherman, and those who fished with him were guaranteed to have a great time and take home unforgettable memories. He was always helpful, kind, friendly and professional. He was often one of the first smiling faces encountered at the airport for arriving personnel. He will be greatly missed and will always be remembered.

SAC would like to extend an invitation to his co-workers, friends and members of the community to celebrate his life and service during a memorial June 2 at 3:30 p.m. at the Island Memorial Chapel. We ask that anyone with a story that embodies the truly great person that Akino was, send an email to dmuse@alutiiq.com so that it can be shared at the memorial service and in the Kwajalein Hourglass.

SAC/Alutiiq would like to also say a heartfelt thank you to all the first responders, hospital staff and community members who have offered support and provided assistance during this difficult time. For additional information please contact Don Muse (59045, dmuse@alutiiq.com) or Mike Ellison (54447, mellison@alutiiq.com).

Because the crew needed to pass through Kwajalein to join the Indies Trader crew at Ebeye, it made sense to give the nurses some camera time, Cullum said, especially given the crews' goal to film as many species of sharks as possible while in the Marshall Islands.

While the series will cover everything from culture and geology to history and biology, a major emphasis will be sharks.

A nurse chomps down on a red snapper thrown into the water at the marina to draw in the sharks.

And if there's one thing the RMI is known for in the outside world—aside from nuclear testing—it's sharks.

"One of our stories brought us to the Marshall Islands. ... One of the things we're incorporating in this series is a lot of different shark stories in the Pacific," Cullum explained. "So we're doing everything from whale sharks to sharks off Colombia, all over the place." One of the more famous sites the crew planned to hit at Bikini was Shark Pass, a natural pass located on Bikini Atoll's southwest corner, where Indo-Pacific lemon sharks, Galapagos sharks and silvertips join grey reef sharks, tiger sharks (and the occasional hammerhead) in great numbers.

While Cullum and the rest of the NHNZ gang cover the South Pacific region for the production, two other groups have been tackling similar stories in other parts of the Ocean: one in East Asia and another along the American coast and in the American Pacific possessions. 1.5 years after beginning filming, the three crews are nearing the end of the road, Cullum said.

"This is one of our last big shoots," he said. "So, we're hoping by mid-summer, mid-July or so, that we'll really get to start hitting edit head on. ... And we're hoping by Christmas time to be wrapping up. And we're thinking we'll broadcast in early 2017."

HOURLASS REPORT

If there's one aspect of life on U.S. Army Garrison-Kwajalein Atoll that binds nearly every resident together, it is the ubiquitous presence of the bicycle and its use as the primary mode of transportation throughout the communities of Kwajalein and Roi-Namur. In honor of National Bike Month, which is celebrated each year in communities throughout the United States in May, we feature portraits of USAG-KA folks and their trusty rides.

HEINE WISHES AMBASSADOR GOOD LUCK

EXTERNAL REPORT

By RMI Office of the President Public Affairs

President Dr. Hilda C. Heine and First Gentleman Tommy Kijiner Jr. hosted a farewell luncheon in honor of outgoing United States Ambassador to the Marshall Islands, Ambassador Thomas Armbruster May 25. Armbruster, who has been the ambassador to the RMI since August 2012, departed the Marshall Islands Wednesday evening.

During the luncheon, Heine presented Armbruster with a Presidential Award of Honor, in recognition of his efforts in advancing the mutual interests and relations between the Marshall Islands and the United States.

"Ambassador Armbruster has built a solid foundation for enhancing our relationship with the U.S," Heine said. "While the relationship of our two countries, as outlined in the Compact of Free Association leave room for improvement, we appreciate the fact that despite our differences at times, a given in any relationship, Ambassador Tom as always remained positive and tried to understand the issues from the Marshall Island's perspective. And more importantly, he's always tried his best to find solutions to help the RMI."

She added that she and her government look forward to working closely with the next U.S. ambassador to the RMI to build upon the foundation Armbruster bolstered during his time in Majuro.

Heine bid Armbruster farewell and wished him, his wife Kathy and their children the very best in their future endeavors. The luncheon, held at the Marshall Islands Resort, brought together members of the cabinet, national and local government officials and members of Women United Together Marshall Islands, among others.

RMI President Hilda Heine, right, wishes Ambassador Thomas Armbruster good luck on his future endeavors. Armbruster departed the RMI May 25.

KWAJALEIN, CARTEL-993, LOLLYGAGGERS TAKE TITLES

BY COLLEEN FURGESON

On May 20, Kwajalein defeated Old, Fat and Lazy with the final score 15-3. Throughout the season, Kwajalein and OFL were the leading teams for the A-League. There were many fans cheering for both teams in the stands. In the first inning, OFL was ahead 0-2, but by the second inning the teams were tied 2-2. In the fourth inning, Kwajalein brought their bats and brought in nine runs. Later in the game, OFL got one more run in, and Kwajalein was able to hold them the rest of the game. They played all seven innings in this final match.

993-Cartel defeated Spartans Men May 25 during the B League Championship. 993-Cartel was the last seed until they beat the number one seed and made it to the championship. Spartans Men were the second seed throughout the season. The game was very intense and filled with close calls. In the first inning, Cartel came in with six runs. The Spartans had two runs with a homerun by senior Jared Wase. Throughout the game 993-Cartel was ahead by no more than two runs. As the Spartans tried to catch up with them, 993-Cartel made great hits, but the Spartans put up an amazing defense. The final score of the championship game was 8-6, 993-Cartel taking the win.

On May 26 team Lollygaggers won the 2016 Co-ed Championship by a landslide against the Spartans Co-ed. The final score was 21-1. They were undefeated during the whole season. In the first and second inning, Spartans took the lead at 1-0. Later in the game, Lollygaggers had nine runs in one inning, and after that they brought their bats hitting the ball in the outfield every time. Jamye Loy got overly excited when she hit the ball into the "green" part of the field even though the Spartans caught it. The Spartans remained second seed through the season, right behind Lollygaggers. As for next year, the Spartans have a positive attitude about beating the Lollygaggers in the future when they come head to head, once again, for the 2017 Championship.

HOURLASS REPORT

DOs AND DON'Ts OF FALL PROTECTION

DO

- Pick an anchorage point that will support 5000 lbs. per worker (strong enough to support a pickup truck).
- Fall arrest systems should be rigged so employees can't free fall more than 6 feet (or contact a lower level).
- Tie off above your head. A six foot person who ties off at the feet could free fall as much as 12 feet.
- Place your anchorage directly above/behind your work area to avoid potential swing fall hazards.

- Use the shortest lanyard possible. The shorter the tie-off the shorter the fall.
- Have anchorage points selected by a competent person.

DON'T

- DO NOT tie off to vent pipes or non-structured non-designated areas.
- DO NOT tie knots in the lanyard. This will reduce the strength.
- DO NOT use water pipes, electrical conduits, light fixtures, or guardrails as anchor points.
- DO NOT use lanyards without self-locking snap hooks.
- DO NOT join multiple lanyards together to reach anchorage.
- DO NOT allow more than one worker to tie off to the same anchorage unless it is designed and approved by an engineer.
- DO NOT unhook from a fall protection while exposed to a fall greater than six feet.

• DO NOT allow someone else to rig your equipment unless you verify that it has been done correctly.

• DO NOT use an anchorage that is not independent of any anchorage used to support or suspend platforms.

RALIK RESIDENTS REP RMI IN GUAM

HOURLASS REPORT

Ujae clans, descendants and Marshallese friends represented the Marshall Islands in the 2016 Festival of Pacific Arts this week in Guam.

During the opening ceremony May 22, Iroij Sen. Michael Kabua, granddaughter Kitti Kabua and other delegates helped lead the RMI performers to the center stage to perform the legendary Jobwa Stick Dance in front of thousands of festival goers. Just as they did during a practice run at the Richardson Theater on Kwajalein April 23, the young warriors smashed their ironwood sticks together, blew conch shells, beat on drums, chanted and told the story of the “noniep” spirit who inspired the people of Ujae to create and perform the dance many years ago.

The festival, which lasts about three weeks this year, features delegations, performers and vendors from 27 Pacific island nations in a menagerie of cultural and artistic exhibits. Held every four years, it began in 1972 through an effort by the Secretariat of the Pacific Community to curtail the erosion of traditional customs in the region.

HEROES OF THE WEEK

BY CARI DELLINGER

U

SAG-KA's Heroes of the Week are all of the hard-working grocery stock clerks at Surfway: 20-year veteran Kiome Kaminaga, Lani Anitak, Igo Sighrah, Sath Nebo, Roy Lokboj, Romen Roy and Claudie James. Every week, this dedicated team of professionals ensure fresh produce, packaged vegetables and other food staples are stocked in a timely fashion for Kwaj residents. You've likely seen them in action on Tuesday, or produce day, no doubt the busiest shopping day at Surfway. But before food items like bananas, green beans and those coveted avocados hit the shelves, this team is busy behind the scenes processing the week's delivery with an assembly line approach, which includes unloading inventory, ensuring order accuracy, weighing each case of goods and pricing. Once the items are approved, the team stocks and displays the food items for purchase.

When asked what they enjoy most about their jobs, many said it was the camaraderie they share with their fellow employees and helping out one another. For example, Romen Roy also works with 30-year veteran and master butcher Esha Elisha in the butcher shop. Surfway's stock clerks also enjoy seeing the smile on a customer's face when they help them find an item in the store. Their biggest challenge is stocking produce while also trying to assist customers eager to select items off the shelves. Kindness and patience are appreciated while they work quickly to stock the shelves and provide a better experience for everyone.

Surfway's Retail Manager Roy Tomas appreciates the work his employees do and adds, "In addition to the produce department, our stock clerks work together handling other important customer service tasks, such as organizing and replenishing items throughout the store, and bagging and delivering groceries. On Thursdays when the store is closed, they focus on identifying and disposing of any items no longer suitable for sale, as well as cleaning and sanitizing the shelves and floors. They're a great team."
