

KWAJALEIN BEFORE THE NET

BY JESSICA DAMBRUCH

e use our experience of popular technology and media to mark the passage of time.

"I remember folks promising high speed internet will get here soon," said Neil Dye, of Kwajalein, before internet connections were installed on island.

"Back then, I wasn't the DJ. I was the designated driver."

In the past decade, Kwajalein and Roi-Namur first received.

In the past decade, Kwajalein and Roi-Namur first received dialup internet connections and then Wi-Fi hotspots. In-home high-speed internet became accessible only two years ago. And according to some Kwaj residents, that was when things began to change.

But what things? How we measure meaningful experience shared with others is a matter of opinion. Recently, I spoke with some local Kwajalein digital immigrants, residents who predate the arrival of internet connections on the garrison, to learn what they most remember about life back then.

The World Wide Web made online educational resources available to students, who only before had access to a limited supply of local print and video media to use for research. And before getting their hands on free video messaging applications and social media, residents communicated with family members in America the old fashioned way, ringing up sizeable long-distance phone charges. "I ran up phone bills going to college when every phone call cost money," said Floyd Corder.

"I definitely remember crossing my fingers that we'd get a new movie in at the Richardson," added Julie Savage.

These days, the option to "Netflix and chill" often trumps decisions to attend social events or head to the Rich. But before online binge-watching, Kwaj had Tape Escape, the Silver City video and DVD rental service that ended years ago. Doug Hepler remembers the service as a mainstay of Kwaj home entertainment. Masina McCollum remembers residents coordinated with off-island connections to ship in primetime TV shows on VHS cassette to share with local friends. "There was a checklist of people that went along with each video tape so you would know who to pass the tape to next," McCollum said.

In the first decade after 2000, McCollum remembers greater participation in recreational sports leagues, back when the population of Kwaj was nearly double what it is now. She also reminisces about enrichment courses for adults and children. "We used to have community education that offered language classes, cooking classes, sailing classes, sign language, sewing and other things.

DETFLIX

Classes were often full within a few days of registration," she said. Some things, such as planning an annual leave, were easier with a live helper, as Bruce Premo discovered.

"In the 90's we had a KREMS Travel Group for the technical contract of about three people on Roi that we would set down with to make plane and hotel reservations and help plan our trips," said Premo. "There is more flexibility planning vacation trips with the high speed internet, but I would not say it saves me time. I did like the convenience and help the travel group provided."

Ironically, some things don't change: Kwaj residents are still eager to shop for new cool toys. McCollum and Kim Yarnes both agree that there were more patio sales before the Internet.

"Our sale pages were double the space in the Hourglass before Kwaj Swap and Shop hit Facebook," said Yarnes. Facebook is now a main means to spread news about social gatherings, and even the arrival of fresh produce.

The internet signaled the end of large catalog ordering parties as a big event where families like the Premos could bond with friends and hunt for gifts together.

"For me, good sales catalog books were very valuable before high speed internet," said Bruce Premo. "This was especially true for the boat owner. I had a multiyear catalog set from West Marine and anticipated each year's new release with excitement on new products. It was almost like the Sears Christmas catalog that would come out each year with toys for kids."

Retread Andrea Lenox values her longtime Kwaj friendships among the most valuable she has ever had.

"Because we were more isolated from the people at home, we made quicker friendships here to fill the gap of not having our families in our daily lives," said Lenox. She believes that since we are now able to remain connected to friends abroad with such ease, that we have simply adapted how we socialize. But Yarnes, McCollum, Dye and Laura Pasquarella-Swain also remember people gathering in greater numbers to socialize at dinner parties on the beach, the ARC, Roi's beach shacks and the Outrigger Club—and hope this will continue.

"The internet has been great to have," said Dye. "But sometimes I miss the more personal interaction that we once had out here."

Reconnect with friends over the holidays! Additional open bowling is scheduled for Dec. 29, 2-9 p.m., and for a more scenic outing, visit Cocktails on the Coast, Jan. 2. Cocktails, beer and wine will be available for sale at an Emon Beach cash bar from noon until sunset.

THE KWAJALEIN HOURGLASS

The Kwajalein Hourglass is named for the insignia of the U.S. Army 7th Infantry Division, which liberated the island from the forces of Imperial Japan on Feb. 4, 1944.

The Kwajalein Hourglass is an authorized publication for military personnel, federal employees, contractor workers and their families assigned to U.S. Army Garrison-Kwajalein Atoll. Contents of the Hourglass are not necessarily official views of, or endorsed by the

CHRISTMAS RUN TO ENNIBURR

DELIVERING SPIRIT AND GIFTS

NIKKI MAXWELL, USAG-KA PUBLIC AFFAIRS

The Christmas spirit was in the air for the small community of Enniburr this month. On Dec. 14, the U.S. Army Garrison Kwajalein Atoll command team delivered more than 300 toys and 120 gift bags to the children of Third Island.

The USAG-KA visitors were greeted at the dock with flowers, songs and smiles. Marshallese volunteers pulled carts carrying large boxes of wrapped toys and shoes, while young volunteers tested out several donated bicycles by riding them ahead of the group to the Third Island School on the far side of the island. Small children hung back shyly near their homes, observing the makeshift parade, later deciding to join in and follow to see what all the fuss was about.

Rounding one last turn, an open field emerged featuring a receiving line of waving hands and smiling faces. Hundreds of children stood single-file along the path leading to the school, and they all wanted to say shake hands with each member of the group bringing them gifts. Above the singing you could hear the words, "Miss Angela, Miss Angela."

The main cheerleader behind this community outreach effort was Command Sgt. Maj. Angela Rawlings. She said it all begun about one year ago, when she and Col. Mike Larsen made their first visit to Third Island to deliver some sporting equipment to the school.

"After seeing how many children lived on the island, I decided to organize a Toy Drive and started gathering gifts for them this summer," Rawlings said.

Approximately 30 percent of Enniburr's population (of 1,000 people) are children, and there is not enough funding or resources for all the children to attend school on the island.

"These children are so wonderful," Rawlings said. "They live in such harsh and isolated conditions. I just wanted to make sure they all received something special for Christmas."

The children lined up according to their gender and age group to receive a toy from the Command team members. There was also a special line for toddlers and infants, where parents with smaller children received plush toys and baby care items.

Each child received an age-appropriate gift and some useful personal care items in the gift bags. Some of the kids tore their presents open right away, while others were seen sitting quietly with their present still wrapped, hugging it close to them as if waiting for the right moment.

"This was priceless and a feeling that can never be replaced or forgotten," Rawlings said. "I am a firm believer that when God blesses an individual, one should always give back."

Following the mass distribution of the gifts, the children gathered together again and sang traditional Christmas carols for the visitors. Then Larson and Rawlings presented bikes to some children for their academic achievements.

According to the Republic of the Marshall Islands-USAG-KA Liaison Office, this was the largest toy and gift drive the island has ever received. The community relations effort involved many logistical hurdles, but they were overcome successfully, making this a holiday to remember for the children and their grateful parents.

"This warms my heart and makes me so happy," said one mother as her two sons smiled and ripped wrapping paper off their gifts to discover new matchbox cars and action figures. "They never have this before. It is so nice!"

"A special thank you goes to all the wonderful people who took time to give and bring a smile to those beautiful children," Rawlings said. "Alone we can do little, but together we can do so much. Thanks to the USAG-KA family, AAFES, Lt. Col. Humberto Jones, Yvonne Braham and friends and family."

Rawlings hopes that others will consider donating their time and talents to people less fortunate than themselves. She said one of her favorite quotes is by Mark Twain: "Kindness is the language which the deaf can hear, and the blind can see."

SCUBA SANTA, FESTIVE BOATS ENTERTAIN EMON CROWDS

HOURGLASS REPORT

Jolly ol' Saint Nick returned to Kwaj Sunday, this time traveling via B-boat to Emon Beach. Hundreds of children and adults clustered together at the water's edge to greet Mr. Kringle and help his elf assistants to shore. The crew even brought along their own Christmas tree. After the soggy Santa had a chance to regain his land legs and greet the droves of excited kids at the beach, the annual Parade of Lights kicked off. Organized and performed by Kwajalein Yacht Club members and friends, the parade consisted of personal yachts and a small boat dressed up in Christmas lights. Here are some highlights of another very Kwaj holiday night at Emon Beach.

HOURGLASS REPORT

A few dozen Kwajalein runners tapped into the athletic side of the holiday spirit Dec. 17, during the annual Jingle Bell Run. Organized by Kwajalein Running Club volunteers and Community Activities staff, the leisurely group run around the north end of the island invited garrison residents to don their reindeer antlers and jingle bells and work up a light sweat with friends and family. During a time of year traditionally filled with holiday feasting and partying, the idea of going out and doing a few laps was a no-brainer for these residents.

on the island" for a holiday open house Dec. 15. About 50 people came by to sample a sweet suite of sweets and savory potluck dishes, while Hobby Shop employees Laura Alves, Evelyn Smith and Alison Sok called up folks for raffle prizes. The Hobby Shop regulars mixed and mingled with several new island residents who came, along with family members, to visit the shop for the first time. Guests received brochures, short tours of the facility and checked out the array of holiday themed projects in the works at the shop.

The 2016 Kwajalein Volleyball Season came to an exciting end Dec. 15 and 16 during championship matches that pitted rivals in four different leagues against one another. Not a single first-seed team won its respective championship this year. In some cases, such as the Blacksmiths, one of the team's few wins earned all season came during the playoffs. Talk about a Cinderella story. The underdog teams featured here are the squads that bested their rivals, surprised fans and earned the right to take home a coveted coconut trophy.

AEGIS TEST KILLS MEDIUM-RANGE BALLISTIC MISSILE IN MDA TEST

EXTERNAL REPORT

MDA News Release

HAWAII, DEC. 14—The Missile Defense Agency and sailors aboard USS John Paul Jones (DDG 53), an Aegis baseline 9.C1 equipped destroyer, today successfully fired a salvo of two SM-6 Dual I missiles against a complex medium-range ballistic missile target, demonstrating the Sea Based Terminal endo-atmospheric defensive capability and meeting the test's primary objective.

The test was conducted off the coast of Hawaii just after midnight on Dec. 14.

"This test demonstrated the capabilities MDA and the Navy are delivering to our fleet commanders," said MDA Director Vice Adm. Jim Syring. "The SM-6 missile and the Aegis Weapon System continue to prove that they are critical components of our nation's multilayered, robust ballistic missile defense system."

The SM-6 missile uses an explosive warhead to defeat ballistic missile threats, differing from other missile defense interceptors, such as the Standard Missile-3, which use non-explosive hit-to-kill technology.

Program officials will continue evaluating system performance based upon telemetry and other data obtained during the test.

Aegis BMD is the naval component of the Ballistic Missile Defense System. The MDA and the U.S. Navy cooperatively manage the Aegis BMD program. Additional information about all elements of the BMDS can be found at https://www.mda.mil/system/system.html

WEEKLY WEATHER OUTLOOK

RTS WEATHER STATION STAFF

WEATHER TRENDS: A surface wave came across the northern RMI Thursday bringing us some needed rain. Our rainfall to date is now about 0.75 inches below normal for the month. lightning was observed in the area with Thursday's storms.

Northeasterly trade winds will increase in the wake of this wave. We are expecting wind speeds to be near Small Craft Advisory levels again for Christmas weekend. Fast moving widely scattered showers will be in the area for the weekend. Appears next week will have an increase in shower coverage, but still scattered in nature.

Elsewhere in the tropical Pacific, Tropical Depression 30W has formed 250 nm southeast of Yap. This storm is expected to increase to nearly Typhoon strength and impact the Phillipines on Christmas day, then move into the South China Sea.

Caution-outlook: Intra-seasonal climate drivers remain weak to neutral. We are still expecting rainfall to follow climatological averages for December into January.

KWAJ HOLIDAY THROWBACKS

By: Anonymous

Twas the night before Christmas, the atoll was dark, Not a creature was stirring, not even a shark. The stockings were hung on the bookcase with care, In lieu of a chimney, which just wasn't there. The children were finally asleep in their beds, While visions of Toyland danced in their heads. Mama in her muumuu and I in my cap, Had just settled down for a long winter's nap, When out on the reef there arose such a clatter. I sprang from my bed to see what was the matter. Away to the window, my go-aheads flopping, I drew back the curtain to see what was popping. The moonlight a'glitter on white coral sand Looked almost like snow in this tropical land. When what to my wondering eyes did appear But an outrigger canoe and eight tiny reindeer. With a little old driver so lively and quick I knew in a moment it must be Saint Nick. More rapid than Spartan his coursers they came And he whistled and shouted and called them by name. "Now Dasher, now Dancer, now Prancer and Vixen, On Comet, on Cupid, on Donner, on Blitzen, Fly over the palm and pandanus tree, To each trailer and house that's waiting for me." And then in a twinkling I heard on the roof The prancing and pawing of each tiny hoof. Before I could move to turn myself 'round Old Santa appeared in the room with a bound. His holiday clothes really brightened the scene— An aloha shirt in bright silky green With red plaid bermudas—a colorful set— And the bag for his toys was a huge fishing net. Sandals he wore instead of his boots, And he puffed on a pipe made of monkey pod roots. A jaunty straw hat he wore perched on his head, And his rosy red cheeks had a tanned look instead. He spoke not a word, but went straight to his work, And he filled all his stockings, then turned with a jerk. He smiled, then he turned and gave me a bow. And disappeared quickly, I don't know quite how. Then through the window I managed to view Santa speeding away in his flying canoe.

Kwajalein Christmas We haven't got rooftops all covered with snow,

Or horse-drawn sleighs with our families in tow. Our windows aren't frosty from wintery winds, We do have sand castles, but we haven t snowmen. The carollers we see wear shorts and T-shirts Our fake Christmas trees have never seen dut. Nothing is sacred here anymore, I mean Santa Claus barefoot! Now that's really poor O K, let's be honest, we dream now and then About a white Christmas, but well then again When we've finished with presents And all those great things We couldn't go diving or water skung Or go to the beach to work on our tan Or take kids to Emon to play in the sand. And how could we miss the day-after barbecues Or a Commander who plays Father Christmas, not Scrooge, And where else can you ride your bike in a tux To go have pupus at a place called the Yuk? Now why would you want all the ice and the snow, The hustle, the bustle with folks on the go With no time for stopping your bike for a spell To chat with a neighbor to see if he's well? And what would happen to your Christmas mood If you shopped in a mall crowded with people who're rude? So stop thinking how sad to be stuck in the sun People pay thousands for our Kway Christmas fun! anonymous

And I heard him exclaim as I took a last look,

"Merry Christmas to all, and to all Yokwe Yuk."
