EBEYE TB CLINIC SCREENS OVER 4,000

HOURLASS REPORT

A health-care worker administers a skin test to a young resident of Ebeye during the nine-week Ebeye TB Clinic.

A team of medical professionals and community volunteers is working to screen 5,600 Ebeye residents in a nine-week health clinic led by the Center for Disease Control, World Health Organization and Republic of the Marshall Islands.

The team screened 4,322 Ebeye residents, 75 percent of its target goal, as of April 9, according to a report by CDC Project Coordinator R. Brostrom and Ebeye Hospital Chief of Staff J. Nasa. The initiative began in February 2016.

The clinic will increase the capacities of the Ebeye TB Program to identify and treat residents with TB and other non-communicable diseases in each of Ebeye's wetos, or neighborhood districts. Transportation support from local police, additional clinical staff and extended hours of operation on multiple weekdays have added helpful support in reaching residents.

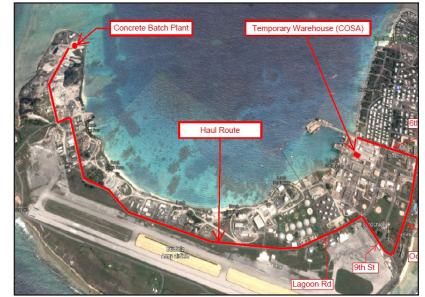

To date, the screenings have led to treatment of seven cases of leprosy, or Hansen's disease. Other diagnoses include 352 cases of high blood pressure and 362 new cases of diabetes. A group of 35 residents, including four children identified by contact tracing, are now receiving drug treatments for TB, the report said.

Four wetos have exceeded the 80 percent screenings rate, but community workers are going door to door to contact candidates who are harder to reach. Bicycles will be raffled to volunteers who help their wetos reach 90 percent screenings.

ECHO PIER SAFETY UPDATE

HOURLASS REPORT

The U.S. Army Corps of Engineers Kwajalein Resident Office is notifying the public regarding upcoming construction activities at Echo Pier. The repair and modernization of the pier will soon be active and noticeable to the community.

Work activities on Echo Pier will include demolition of the current stevedore warehouse and other structures on the pier, partial demolition and reconstruction of most sections, pile driving, upgrading utilities as well as new warehouses and other structures. The contractor for this work is San Juan Construction, Inc.

Much of this work will cause increased noise levels and heavy construction traffic in the area, beginning in mid-April. There will be periods of night and weekend work as well. The pier will remain open throughout construction—frequency of barge and other traffic will not change. The work is expected to continue through the summer of 2020.

Safety of the public as well as contractor and garrison personnel is a number one priority. The public is advised to stay out of all construction areas, be aware of new or changing signage and to watch out for increased traffic and heavy equipment in the area surrounding the pier and along dedicated haul routes from the pier along 6th Street to Ocean Road, to 9th Street and down Lagoon Road to the Concrete Plant.

Additional signage and traffic control for both pedestrian and vehicular traffic will be added in many areas in an effort to maintain safe conditions during construction. The community is asked to have heightened awareness and adherence to the following:

- All normal pier restrictions and island speed limits and restrictions and changes in pedestrian walkways when accessing the ferries and catamarans.
- Extra caution when crossing or traveling along 6th Street near the housing units and at the intersection of 9th Street and Lagoon Road.
- Be cautious of heavy equipment, vehicles with trailers and trucks which have limited visibility and may swing wide in turns.

Thank you for your patience during this critical rehabilitation. For questions regarding this specific notice, contact Kim Warner at 5-0769 or email: kimberly.m.warner@usace.army.mil.

TRADEX radar technicians, Hesbon Jokas, left, and Jerry Samuel pause last week for photos in front of the radar they maintain on a daily basis.

USAG-KA PROFILES: HESBON JOKAS and JERRY SAMUEL

PROFILE / JORDAN VINSON

Meet Hesbon Jokas and Jerry Samuel.

They are two members of a small group of Marshallese citizens employed by Kwajalein Range Services to keep the Kiernan Re-entry Measurement System site on target in its mission to monitor space around the Earth for satellites, debris and foreign missile launches.

Both Jokas and Samuel work at the TRADEX radar complex on Namur. They transitioned into their current roles from other jobs with the KRS team and both have been working on island since the 1990s. Samuel has worked at the radar since 2009, when he was hired by TRADEX Antenna Lead Conrad Nakasone. Jokas was brought in to join the team in 2015.

As radar technicians, they busy themselves with constant maintenance and troubleshooting jobs on the radar antenna and radar receiver system with the goal to keep the sensor continually pirouetting on its axes and tracking targets in orbit.

They tend to the radar's water, air and oil lines and fix issues with the brakes and motors used to physically steer the massive dish. They chip and paint the radar structure to prevent corrosion in the atoll's harsh saline winds, and they do a lot of welding and piping work as crews make improvements to the radar system during preventative maintenance projects.

Samuel, a Third Island native whom TRADEX Sensor Manager Jeff Jones calls a master welder and fabricator, has been integral to the radar team's performance during the last eight years, Jones says.

"He's the best welder on this island. Bar none," Jones says. "That's his claim to fame. And he's a great fabricator."

Both Jokas, a relative newcomer whom Jones describes as "a jack of all trades who will help out anybody," and Samuel have recently stepped into new, more technical roles. Now, either can be called upon to work the radar's transmitter system during space surveillance operations. That makes them a crucial pool of support TRADEX managers can rely on when there are staffing shortages, Jones says.

Jokas, an Utrik Atoll native, said the new role has been a rewarding challenge, and he has enjoyed getting up to speed.

"I've been learning a lot," he says. "There are lots of new things. If new things come through, we have to learn how to do it. It's a great job."

MILITARY RECOGNIZES DOD CHILDREN DURING MONTH OF THE MILITARY CHILD

EXTERNAL REPORT

During the Month of the Military Child, the U.S. Army joins the Department of Defense in the recognition of the commitment, contributions and sacrifices of military children.

This year marks the 31st anniversary of the Department of Defense designating April as Month of the Military Child, recognizing that the strength of the nation is built on the readiness and resilience of every member of the all-volunteer Army, including the personal sacrifice of family members and, in this case, the children of military service members and Department of the Army civilians.

The Army remains fully committed to helping Families become and stay strong by offering a variety of programs and services through U.S. Army Installation Management Command.

This year's theme, "Military Kids: At Home Across the World," will help our nation understand how important our military children are, no matter where they are stationed. Throughout the month of April, Army organizations will provide a variety of fun and exciting events such as family fun nights, parades, festivals, and special luncheons to officially recognize military children.

Month of the Military Child activities will differ across DOD and the Army, but all share a common goal: to celebrate and recognize the contributions of military children.

Special events include the Young Lives, Big Stories contest, where military children are invited to share their experiences and win prizes, and Operation Megaphone, where military teens join with others in a worldwide lock-in scheduled for April 28 and 29.

As the nation prepares for the future, the Army recognizes that children will continue to experience and work through the challenges of reintegration, relocations, deployments, and, if needed, care for their wounded soldier parent.

Through specialized programs and trained staff, the Army will continue to anticipate and address the evolving needs of soldiers and families to ensure they are healthy, ready, and self-reliant.

There are more than 133,000 children and youth registered in 69 child and youth services programs. The Army remains committed to these military family members to honor the service and sacrifices of those who serve the nation. Month of the Military Child is one way the Army can recognize, applaud, and celebrate the resilience of military children and youth and their role in ensuring a ready force now and into the future.

WEEKLY WEATHER OUTLOOK

RTS WEATHER STATION STAFF

WEATHER DISCUSSION: We have received 1.52 inches of precipitation this past seven days which is one half-inch above average. However, this week's U.S. drought analysis issued by NOAA still gives Kwajalein moderate short term drought conditions.

The Intertropical Convergence Zone (ITCZ) will be active for the upcoming week. This east-west oriented feature will be located along Majuro's latitude during the weekend, so weather radar will continue to show showers south of the atoll. Some indicators show the ITCZ creeping northward by next midweek, bringing increased chances of heavier showers. We anticipate weekly precipitation amounts will be average to above average.

SATURDAY/SUNDAY/MONDAY FORECAST: Partly sunny with isolated to widely scattered winds east-northeast at 14-19 knots.

MID-WEEK FORECAST: Widely scattered to scattered showers Tuesday through Thursday. Winds east-northeast and east-southeast at 13-17 knots.

HERO OF THE WEEK

BY CARI DELLINGER

USAG-KA's Hero of the Week is Nikki Delisio, Kwajalein's Doctor of Physical Therapy. Delisio examines approximately 40 patients per week and provides treatment plans that restore mobility and reduce pain. She treats patients in her office or at the gym, performs aquatic therapy and provides care for hospital patients.

Delisio is passionate about her job. "I've always enjoyed helping people and improving their quality of life," she said. As a physical therapist, "you really have to know the movement and function of the human body and it takes a lot of dedication from me and the patient to achieve their treatment goals. I love the outcome of my job, when a patient feels better and can return to their daily routine."

Delisio moved to Kwajalein five years ago from Maryland with 15 years of medical expertise. She is currently a stroke judge during swim meets for the Kwajalein Swim Team, where she served as president for two seasons. In her free time, Delisio volunteers at the YYWC Micronesia Shop, and is a troop leader for Kwajalein's Girl Scout Troop #801. She also enjoys spending time with her husband Chris and two daughters, Tessa and Juliet, who you'll often find together at the beach or at a BBQ. Delisio is now training to compete in the 38th Annual RustMan Triathlon.
