KWAJALEIN YOUTH COMPLETE CYS COMMANDER'S SUMMER CHALLENGE

BY JESSICA DAMBRUCH

As the culminating service reward for completing the Child and Youth Services Summer Challenge, 19 youth from the Kwajalein community conducted a trash clean-up on the island of Bigej Aug. 1.

The second iteration of the month-long program challenges participants enrolled in grades 6 – 12 to complete an array of academic, physical fitness and environmental challenges: retrieving at least 300 pounds of trash, completing an approved education project and performing 28 hours of physical activity.

"I really enjoyed the physical activity part because I don't go out very much," said rising eighth-grader Rachel Harper. "It was nice just to do that and to get out of the house."

Harper fulfilled the requirement with volunteerism at the Bargain Bazaar and checked out island Spin and Boot Camp classes.

The participants far exceeded program outcomes.

Here are some startling program statistics from program advisor Rachel Raczynski. Together, participants collected 6,523 pounds of trash. For those keeping count, that's 523 pounds beyond the overall goal. They also completed a total of 609 hours of physical activity collectively—more than 40 hours beyond the collective goal; and completed the four-part educational challenge using an array of options. Some preferred to compose a book summary. Others opted to conduct an interview, checked out Kwajalein's WWII self-guided tour, made up their own "wild card" option or completed the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, Lincoln Laboratory Beaver Works Summer Institute.

Following a brief awards ceremony at the Small Boat Marina with U.S. Army Garrison-Kwajalein Atoll Commander Col. Thomas Pugsley, participants received program certificates and boarded the USAV Great Bridge for a ride to Bigej for a Host Nation community engagement.

"If the reason you did this was so you could get a ride on the Great Bridge, you did it for the wrong reasons... The purpose of this event was to give you more opportunities over the summer, to keep you occupied, to help you get outside and to hammer home the important lesson," said Pugsley. "The lesson is to be a better person, community member and neighbor—to take an opportunity to take a look at yourself, improve yourself and to be an active and contributing member of society."

Though 20 youth completed the Bigej event, one stayed behind: Ethan Acosta, who opted to complete his day's duty as a Kwajalein lifeguard so the beach would not be left unguarded.

Onboard, participants checked out the three-level LCU and enjoyed the view from the prow before disembarking, grabbing trash bags and gathering up beach trash in three teams.

Of course, the reward trip wasn't all work and no play. During the 45-minute voyage to Bigej, the crew prepared an afternoon snack—pizza—and Capt. Ron Sylvester provided a tour of the bridge and one of his famous "man overboard" drills. Among the usual plastic bottles, crushed aluminum cans and derelict fishing buoys was an interesting find. Program advisor Nate Rios happened upon a cache of WWII-era glass Coca-Cola bottles which will be turned over to historical preservation authorities.

YOKWE YUK WELCOME CLUB'S BARGAIN BAZAAR NOW OPEN

BY JESSICA DAMBRUCH

On July 31, U.S. Army Garrison-Kwajalein Atoll Commander Col. Thomas Pugsley and Yokwe Yuk Welcome Club Bargain Bazaar Coordinator Kelly Redmond found themselves standing between great bargains indoors and more than 50 shoppers outdoors.

Pugsley raised the “Now Open” flag and held open the door for the Kwajalein and Ebeye residents who had come to the grand reopening of the YYWC’s Bargain Bazaar thrift store. Redmond thanked all of the volunteers and YYWC supporters who have worked to make a reopening day a dream come true.

The YYWC is an historic island organization dating back to the 1960s. What began as a women’s club has expanded to include all members of the atoll community interested in volunteering their time to support education grants for schools in the Indo-Pacific region. The Bargain Bazaar, a mainstay in that program, regularly rakes in thousands of dollars, said Redmond.

“The Bargain Bazaar is a great place to volunteer, meet our neighbors on Ebeye and to enjoy island life while contributing to a great cause,” she said.

So why close such a great store? Here’s where the story gets a little bizarre: a few months back, a water leak caused partial damage to the ceiling and walls of the retail space. With help of a team comprised of USAG-KA Department of Public Works personnel, Logcap contract partners and a host of repair and construction experts, repairs to the retail space began.

During construction, the USAG-KA Directorate of Host Nation Activities secured merchandise in a command storage space. Teamwork like that is rare and appreciated. One might say Kwajalein knows a good cause when it sees one.

A few months later, the store was ready for a reopening. Fast-forward to July 31: A host of volunteers from the Kwajalein Boy Scouts and the YYWC led a porch sale on the store lawn and then opened the shop just in time for back-to-school shopping.

Shoppers toted away paper bags full of clothing, home décor items and supplies for kitchens and classrooms.

“We’re here today to focus on community service and character-building,” said Scoutmaster Anthony Strong, of the Scouts’ volunteerism. “This is a good cause we are happy to support.”

The Bargain Bazaar welcomes donations of gently used items to sell. Proceeds support education grants and scholarships in the Indo-Pacific region.

Tips for Drop-Off Donations

Donations may be left outside the BB. If possible, please leave these items under a waterproof cover or put them in a weatherproof tub.

Pick-ups for Bargain Bazaar donations can be also fulfilled through the Kwajalein Boy Scouts and are coordinated by a Yokwe Yuk Welcome Club representative.

Donation Pick-Ups

For pick-ups, please inform the delivery crew of any large objects, such as vacuums or microwaves, as this information assists in scheduling the pick-up route.

Before donating, send the following information to the coordinator:

- your quarters number

NEW STAFF, RENOVATIONS FOR KWAJALEIN SCHOOLS

BY JESSICA DAMBRUCH

New faces, upgrades to facilities and a series of renovations are just a few of the changes island students will encounter on their first day of school Aug. 11.

Both George Seitz Elementary School and Kwajalein High School have received telecommunications upgrades, new classroom furniture and fixtures. During recess this year, GSES students will climb on playground equipment installed after a schoolwide consensus was reached. A complete renovation of the high school science labs is nearly complete.

Most notably, the school community has changed. New staff are on their way. The newest members of the Ri-Katak student body will join Carrie Corley's kindergarten class. Some new students will transition back to in-person instruction after months of stateside virtual learning.

For the Pugsley family, the back-to-school season is especially meaningful this year.

"My daughter was out for spring break when COVID hit. She was in first grade, and she hasn't spent a day in the classroom since," wrote USAG-KA Commander Col. Thomas Pugsley, a father of two school-aged children. "That was 18 months ago."

Though Pugsley's spouse, Shawna Hughes, stepped up to help facilitate their children's education, their daughter, Elena, now entering third grade, looks forward to attending classes in the island's one-of-a-kind school system.

School on Kwajalein

Since its opening in 1956 as a Navy Overseas Dependent School, the Kwajalein School System has remained unique among military education sites as the world's only private, U.S. government-owned school on a U.S. military installation. KSS is currently managed through Amentum-DynCorp International's contract with the U.S. government. Its staff remain steadfast in their commitment to student learning.

The contractual agreement for the school aligns its programs closely with DODEA standards—the Department of Defense Education Activity that coordinates K-12 education for the DOD—and ensures a transition for students entering stateside schools with few gaps, according to KSS Head of School, Paul Uhren.

KSS secures internationally recognized accreditation for its diploma through Cognia, a non-governmental organization that certifies primary and secondary schools around the world, and by the North Central Association of Colleges and Schools. A graduating senior has only to apply to the school of their choice, and their diploma will be recognized as valid.

"That diploma assures the colleges our requirements meet specific standards, which makes the students eligible to apply for admission," said Uhren. "The students are exposed to the American curriculum while living in the Marshallese culture. Hopefully for them it is the best of both worlds."

As head of school, Uhren finds his greatest rewards in coordinating learning opportunities for students with the island's school team. He thinks big in the island's small town: Anything can pose a student enrichment opportunity.

Changing Faces at KSS

In the coming weeks, two new English teachers will join the school team. Current openings in science and high school counseling will be fulfilled by existing staff until new educators have arrived. Though the faces of school staff may change, it remains steadfast in its mission of student support, said Uhren.

"Every year there is some change in staffing," he said. "With change comes new ideas to enhance the learning of all. I am excited about our new staff who are joining the Kwajalein School."

Pugsley acknowledges the logistical challenges of staffing at a distance during the pandemic. He reassures parents that their students will have the support and resources they need.

"We continually strive to provide the best school services possible for the entire team and to look for new and innovative ways to better align with the needs of the community," said Pugsley, of the search for staff. "Being as isolated as we are, here, it is sometime difficult to fill critical positions within the schools, Child and Youth Services or the Child Development Center, but we expect the Amentum-DI team to work tirelessly to ensure we are providing the best level of service possible."

To do so, some teachers will assume new roles. This year, KSS announced incoming KHS Principal Matthew Gerber, who has pursued his dream to work as a school administrator on Kwajalein for more than a decade.

"This opportunity is the reason I pursued school administration from the beginning," said Gerber, who has also worked as an associate principal in Lincoln, Nebraska. He once told a previous employer he was loyal to their school "unless Kwajalein sends a helicopter for me."

Gerber will continue teaching science courses until a new instructor arrives. He expressed deep gratitude to be able to serve the community as an administrator and use the full range of his skills. He appreciates the strong community school support and the chance to continue nurturing the talented student body.

"We really get to invest in kids here and hope to see them reach their goals and dreams," he said.

Knowing education is a team effort, Gerber extends heartfelt gratitude to all of the KSS educators who have preceded him.

"Things are always changing and sometimes those changes are not as predictable as we would like," he said. "There are so many valuable people who have built this school into what it is, and I recognize the efforts of others who have come before me. I certainly intend to support students as well as possible amidst any changes. There are new teachers coming on board who are going to do amazing things and we will always want to recognize that those who have impacted our students and community can never be fully replaced in the same way."

Gerber is enthusiastic for classes to begin and to work with the school team.

"There are many things that get me excited about the upcoming school year—the greatest one being the quality of our students," said Gerber. "In terms of working with the team, I think we are all in this together. ... I truly hope to make this the most positive place to teach in, as well as an engaging place to learn. I look forward to building toward that goal every day with our team."

Anyone committed to facilitating a supportive educational experience for the island's students could also have a fascinating reading list. What books might Gerber—whose own science classes conducted STEM workshops for younger children and publish their coral research online—recommend to young people?

The answer might surprise you: “Many kids read a ton, but a lot of the content is online. I highly encourage students to unplug and grab any book they are interested in and to engage in content online that will inform them and benefit them in some way.”

Welcome Back to School

For students and parents alike, a new school year presents a clean slate and a chance to grow and explore. As a father, Soldier and former professor himself, Pugsley embraces the qualitative change Kwaj life offers for his family in their new island home.

“Change is always difficult: uncomfortable, even,” he said. “It’s in our nature to be wary of it, but it is also a necessity if we are to improve. Thus, change should be looked at as an opportunity and not always considered in a negative light.”

As students and parents on Ebeye and Kwajalein get ready to start the year, Gerber has a welcome message for them:

“We are so thankful and blessed to serve your family and students at our school. When parents send their kids to us, they are entrusting us with the most valuable things in this world, and we take that seriously. We truly hope your student’s story is an incredibly positive one and launches forward.”

Recent Changes at KSS

Keep an eye out for the exciting new changes in the Kwajalein School Systems facilities. At George Seitz Elementary School, recently completed projects include new playground equipment and new flooring in the K-6 school building.

The last big renovation at KHS included the complete overhaul of the library. Currently, both science labs are being refurbished. Improvements are coming soon to the Home Economics classroom, and it would be impossible to miss the new PA system at the KHS Davye-Davis Multi-Purpose Room.

Upcoming Activities

This year, get ready for all the usual great events—and a few new surprises—including band concerts; themed career events for trade, college and military; the George Seitz Elementary School STEM fair; Ri-Katak Exchange Student Visit Day; and of course, Mani Day.

Here’s How to Get Involved

KSS encourages parents to be active in their child’s education in each grade level. Among the array of opportunities available are participation at School Advisory Council meetings; volunteering at schoolwide activities or with the Parent Teacher Organization; sponsoring Marshallese students and parents for school functions; and sharing valuable expertise and skill at classroom job talks and school career fairs.

For more information, contact George Seitz Elementary School at 5-3601 and Kwajalein High School at 5-2011.

REINVENTING THE WHEELS: MIT LL BWSI RACECAR PROGRAM A SUCCESS

BY JESSICA DAMBRUCH

A little science went a long way on Ebeye Aug. 2, as high school students from Ebeye and Kwajalein showcased their technological teamwork during the grand finale of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, Lincoln Laboratory Beaver Works Summer Institute: Autonomous RACECAR Grand Prix.

The evening event at the Ebeye Jabro Sports Complex was the culmination of a multi-week, intensive summer institute. Five teams of Ebeye and Kwajalein high school students demonstrated their new array of skills. Utilizing practical technical knowledge in a team-based environment, they had learned to build, program and drive small remote-controlled vehicles on a pint-sized challenge course.

As they worked, students had built technological know-how and confidence as they refined and applied their computer coding skills to teach their vehicles to respond to specific directives: to move, avoid obstacles, navigate using a visual sensor, detect objects and travel through different environments.

The students were joined by MIT LL program instructors Dr. Sarah Willis, Jon Schoenenberger, Dr. Karyn Lundberg, Dr. Tommy Sebastian and Ranny Ranis and teachers, parents, leadership from the Marshall Islands, U.S. Army Garrison-Kwajalein Atoll and the Ronald Reagan Ballistic Missile Defense Test Site. Before the night was through, some students would win bragging rights and program honors.

With Ranis translating her remarks into Marshallese, Willis explained the program outcomes and course technology: The cars follow directives with the help of sensors, including color and depth cameras and a laser radar that operate on top of the remote-control car base.

During the program, all of the students grew more confident in their digital literacy skills and acquired practical technical knowledge that will enrich any computer or science-based project they undertake.

RACECAR is easily adapted to different grade levels and was an ideal program for Kwajalein, said Willis. It provided numerous opportunities for students to develop team communication and prototyping skills while exploring autonomous machine-learning. Plus, it's just generally fun driving mini cars around.

The MIT LL BWSI RACECAR 2021 also achieved numerous milestones. It is the first BWSI outreach initiative to include students from Kwajalein and Ebeye in a live, synchronous learning environment.

What was the best part about participating in the program?

"Teamwork," responded Aiti Drebon, a rising senior at Kwajalein Atoll High School on Guegeegue. "It was so fun."

Teamwork came in handy before and during the event, as several teams discovered their cars' sensors responded differently to daylight on the racetrack. BWSI foregrounds the testing process as part of its challenge, and soon teammates were scrambling to reprogram their cars.

Looking on as students quickly reprogrammed their cars, Sebastian discussed the issue: "The students knew if they need to adjust some things in their code, they should have a plan to do that."

As he spoke, one team, testing its settings, knocked several plastic road markers off the course.

"I think some teams took that to heart," he said.

The teammates exhibited something more during their trials: camaraderie. They cheered on their teammates' weeks of hard work, even as some cars went off-course. By the end of the course trials, all traveled refined routes and responded more accurately to their programmers. Where results were on-target, advisors awarded superlative honors for the top coding and leadership skills that got them there.

Who knew that a mini racetrack would be the ideal place to perform science?

Now, as the program advisors look to BWSI 2022, Sebastian is proud of the skills the students have learned in their respective teams.

Ready to roll: A mini car is staged on the raceway before the MIT LL BWSI grand finale. Teams guided their cars through three checkpoint challenges during the culminating program event.

“We’ve helped them find opportunities to share the load and responsibility,” Sebastian said.

Now in its sixth program year, MIT LL BWSI RACECAR 2021 is the second iteration of BWSI on USAG-KA.

It follows closely on the heels of the 2020 software-focused pilot program, in which students coded and operated a game-based environment using artificial intelligence.

The overwhelming success of the pilot forged a collaboration between MIT LL and U.S. Army Child and Youth Services, Installation Management Command-Pacific Region and secured support for this year’s endeavor.

Recent additional community enrichment activities include community astronomy nights on Kwajalein which included a guest speaker and celestial viewing through a high-resolution telescope.

U.S. SPACE AND MISSILE DEFENSE COMMAND HISTORY

BY SHARON WATKINS-LANG, USASMDC HISTORIAN

In August 1958, as the initial design concepts continued to evolve, Nike-Zeus saw “an extensive re-evaluation of the launching concept.”

New emphasis was placed on the review of the underground or silo launching concept. Until this time, the design plans had followed a research and development pit type launcher.

The drawings for the R&D pit type launcher were completed in late 1958. Ultimately, it was determined that the underground launchers were superior.

The White Sands (New Mexico) launchers follow the pit type launch concept while the Kwajalein launchers at Mt. Olympus follow what became the standard underground launch concept.

USAG-KA WEATHER WATCH

RTS WEATHER STATION STAFF

WEATHER DISCUSSION

The latter part of the work week ended on a predominately dry note after a more active phase of the Intertropical Convergence Zone in the days prior.

A steady supply of dry air in the mid-levels of the atmosphere significantly lessened the impact of the ITCZ over Kwajalein Atoll; however, a re-emergence of the ITCZ is expected over the coming days as conditions aloft become more supportive of deep convection.

The potential for more persistent shower activity looks to return by Monday, with unsettled conditions continuing into Tuesday and Wednesday. Winds will stay generally light through the period, with near Doldrums possible at times.

SATURDAY and SUNDAY: Partly to mostly sunny. Isolated showers and a stray thunderstorm possible, especially in the morning. Winds NE-E at 5-10 knots on SATURDAY, becoming ENE-ESE at 3-9 knots SUNDAY.

MONDAY: Partly sunny with widely scattered showers and a stay thunderstorm possible. Winds E-S at 3-9 knots.

TUESDAY and WEDNESDAY: Potential for more persistent shower activity and stray thunderstorms as the Intertropical Convergence Zone remains over the Marshalls Islands. Winds will be light to moderate and predominately from the south; however, wind direction could be variable at times.

Kwajalein community members should be courteous to their neighbors in the bachelor quarters and Army Family Housing. Here are a few ways to help keep the peace in your sector.

- Please observe quiet hours. Between the hours of 10 p.m. and 6 a.m. on weekdays and midnight to 6 a.m. on Saturdays and Sundays, all island residents are expected to keep their noise levels at an optimal, reasonable level.
- Drink responsibly. When consuming alcohol, please be safe. Do your best to know your own limits and to maintain them. If you are struggling with alcohol, island resources and counseling are available to help you.

Every time you do your part, you make Kwajalein a more enjoyable and beautiful place for us all.

HEALTH CONNECTION

BY KWAJALEIN HOSPITAL

The Health Connection supports the Commander's Ready and Resilient Council, an Army-wide initiative focused on the health and resiliency of Soldiers, family members and civilians. CR2C implements initiatives to address behavioral, physical, spiritual and environmental issues identified in the community.

Q: Is it possible to be allergic to some cats and not others?

The short answer is yes, but perhaps for different reasons than you think. People are about twice as likely to have allergies to cats than dogs. Allergy symptoms result from over-sensitive immune systems reacting to otherwise harmless proteins, or allergens, in the pet's urine, saliva or dander—dead skin cells.

Pet hair is not an allergen, but it can collect dander, urine and saliva. Hair can also carry other allergens like dust and pollen. Pet allergens can collect on furniture and other surfaces and may remain for months.

Apparent differences in sensitivity to animals is less associated with the animal itself, or one variety of cat versus another, than how they are kept—if they are indoor versus outdoor—pet hygiene, household cleanliness, number of pets, and other seasonal allergens that may be on an animal or transferred to furniture, bedding and carpet.

Q: What are the top five dangers in the lagoon or ocean to swimmers, snorkelers and scuba divers, and how can you prevent from being hurt?

The greatest dangers in the lagoon include the following:

Glass, metal or other sharp objects in the sand.

These can cause cuts, infection and tetanus. Watch where you step and pick up and dispose of glass or other sharp objects when found.

The sun.
Apply sunscreen or remain covered to avoid sunburns.

Coral.
A coral scrape or cut can increase risk of infection. Cover exposed skin and avoid walking on coral and other uneven and slippery surfaces. Maintain good buoyancy control to avoid contact with coral and rocks when diving.

Cone snails.
A brush with these creatures can result in dangerous envenomation. Do not pick up cone shells.

Jellyfish.
Stings can be prevented with thin clothing. Apply household vinegar directly to affected area for about 30 seconds. The application of vinegar will not reduce the pain.

HOW OUR NEWSPAPER GOT ITS NAME

The shoulder sleeve insignia of the 7th Infantry Division consists of two black, equilateral triangles placed vertically on a red circular disc giving it an hourglass shape.

The hourglass of the insignia was consequently used in the title of the island newspaper, The Kwajalein Hourglass.

Read The Kwajalein Hourglass each week on the official USAG-KA Facebook page and on the U.S. Space and Missile Command website.

Send announcements, community updates and event fliers to Kwajaleinhourglass@dyn-intl.com Wednesdays by 5 p.m.
