GETTING HER FEET WET - WOMEN'S DIVE DAY

HOURLASS REPORT

By Christy Wagon,
CYS Deputy Director

Currently, only 39% of recreational scuba divers worldwide are women. To address this imbalance, PADI Women's Dive Day was established in 2014 to encourage more women to take up diving. Ten years later, this global event now takes place in 183 countries. On September 24, 2024, the event was celebrated on Kwajalein Atoll, attracting 27 women divers.

Christine Pavel has been SCUBA diving for about a year and attended her first Women's Dive Day this year. She started diving because she wanted to see the biodiversity under the sea up close and personal and because it is as close as you can get on Earth to the zero-gravity found in outer space. Additionally, she saw it as a fun experience to share with her husband.

When asked about the difference between diving with women versus mixed-gender groups, several participants mentioned that the all-female environment tends to be overall calmer, with women being very patient, supportive, and encouraging of one another.

Viviana Del Campo, owner of Kwajalein Dive Shop and President of KSC shared her thoughts on why there are fewer women divers as compared to men. She believes that women perceive that diving is more complicated than it is and that events like Women interested in diving have a few options available on Kwajalein. If you aren't sure if you're ready to take the plunge into a scuba certification course, the Kwajalein Dive Center offers an experience called Discover Scuba Diving, a quick and easy way to find out if you like scuba diving.

Anduril moves its AI focus to space, planning new space monitoring sats

EXTERNAL REPORT

By Theresa Hitchens, Breaking Defense

WASHINGTON — Defense startup Anduril Industries, perhaps most known for its artificial intelligence applications for drone warfare, is setting its sights farther up — using its own funds to develop new satellites for monitoring the heavens.

In an announcement released today, Anduril's Senior Vice President of Space and Engineering Gokul Subramanian said the company intends for the satellites to be launched by the end of 2025 — with the Space Force clearly the target market.

Top brass from both the Space Force and US Space Command repeatedly have said that improved space domain awareness is a first-order priority.

Anduril is looking to design multiple payloads, all based on its AI-powered Lattice software, the same platform used to power the counter-drone capabilities currently in use under the company's nearly $1 billion contract with Special Operations Command.

"Anduril will design, manufacture, and integrate modular mission payloads designed to enable unique mission requirements, leveraging our extensive expertise across imaging, electronic warfare, command and control, and mission autonomy. These payloads will provide warfighters with real-time data exploitation, autonomous coordination of satellites, and resilient communication capabilities," Subramanian said.

The first launch "will serve as a testbed for maturation of multiple Anduril and third party payloads which we will be announcing in the coming months," he added.

Anduril quietly has been building experience in the space domain awareness arena.

Subramanian explained that the company has "multiple hardware and software payloads already deployed on orbit," and is "delivering advanced systems that range from on-orbit edge processing of sensor data to resilient satellite command and control."

Anduril's new satellites also will build off of work...

Houthi missile reaches central Israel for first time, no injuries reported

EXTERNAL REPORT

By Ari Rabinovitch, Reuters

JERUSALEM, Sept 15 (Reuters) - Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu said Israel would inflict a "heavy price" on the Iran-aligned Houthis who control northern Yemen, after they reached central Israel with a missile on Sunday for the first time.

Houthi military spokesman Yahya Sarea said the group struck with a new hypersonic ballistic missile that travelled 2,040 km (1270 miles) in just 11 1/2 minutes.

An Israeli military official said the missile was hit by an interceptor and fragmented in the air, rather than being completely destroyed.

Air raid sirens had sounded in Tel Aviv and across central Israel moments before the impact at around 6:35 a.m. local time (0335 GMT), sending residents running for shelter. Loud booms were heard.

Missile pieces landed in fields and near a railway station. There were no direct casualties, but nine people were lightly hurt while seeking cover. Reuters saw smoke billowing in an open field in central Israel.

At a weekly cabinet meeting, Netanyahu said the Houthis should have known that Israel would exact a "heavy price" for attacks on Israel.

"Whoever needs a reminder of that is invited to visit the Hodeida port," Netanyahu said, referring to an Israeli retaliatory air strike against Yemen in July for a Houthi drone that hit Tel Aviv.

The Houthis have fired missiles and drones at Israel repeatedly in what they say is solidarity with the Palestinians, since the Gaza war began with a Hamas attack on Israel in October.

The drone that hit Tel Aviv for the first time in July killed a man and wounded four people. Israeli air strikes in response on Houthi military targets near the port of Hodeidah killed six and wounded 80.

Previously, Houthi missiles have not penetrated deep into Israeli air space, with the only one reported to have hit Israeli territory falling in an open area near the Red Sea port of Eilat in March....

WEEKLY TROPICAL WEATHER THREAT OUTLOOK

RTS WEATHER STATION STAFF

Discussion:

Rainfall over the last 7 days was a disappointing 0.84" at the Kwajalein weather station, especially considering it's Kwajalein's rainiest time of year. Rainfall chances over the next 7 days remain modest for this time of year, though it shouldn't be very difficult to surpass last week's total. Upper-tropospheric conditions indicate a modest increase in the threat for lightning, provided systems closer to the surface are strong enough to overcome drier air in the mid-levels and generate deep showers. Rainfall over the next 7 days is expected to be below normal; normal weekly rainfall for this time of year is app. 2.4 inches. Winds will be predominately light to gentle from the ENE-ESE, more southerly on Sunday, and a bit breezier on Tuesday.

Tropical Cyclones:

None expected for Kwajalein, Wake Island, Hawaii, and Guam over the next 7 days.

Damaging West Winds / Westerly Swell:

Risk remains low over the next 7 days.

Swell / Tide Inundation Risk for Kwajalein Atoll and Wake Island:

Risk remains low over the next 7 days.

Tides:

Next Spring tides will be with the 02 October New moon; daily peak tides will exceed 4 feet from 01 to 06 October.

Purpose: This weekly briefing is delivered Thursday mornings to island leadership. The intention of this briefing is to provide situational awareness of weather events that may interrupt operations and transportation around Kwajalein, to/from Hawaii and Guam, and in the Wake vicinity. The main threat assessed in this brief is existing and potential development of tropical cyclone activity. This brief also provides an outlook of abnormal winds, sea state, and precipitation guidance for next 7 days around the Kwajalein Atoll. The distribution list will also receive updates on any developing tropical cyclone activity in the Kwajalein region that occur between the weekly outlook product.

WEATHER DISCUSSION

Weak Inter-Tropical Convergence Zone disturbances will bring occasional showers and a few thunderstorms to Kwajalein Atoll over the next several days. Winds will be light to gentle from the east-southeast to south Saturday night into Monday morning, followed by breezier ENE winds for Tuesday and Wednesday. Upper-tropospheric conditions will be modestly supportive of thunderstorms, with the risk a bit higher Saturday into Monday morning. Drier air above the surface may lead to a few strong wind gusts near heavier precipitation. More frequent Doldrum conditions are forecast to develop later next week, with rain chances staying generally modest for this time of year.

SATURDAY

Partly sunny to mostly cloudy with isolated showers in the morning and widely scattered showers in the afternoon. Isolated thunderstorms are possible. Winds ENE-SE at 4-8 knots, with higher gusts near showers.

SUNDAY

Mostly cloudy to partly sunny with scattered showers and isolated thunderstorms in the morning and isolated showers in the afternoon. Winds SE-S at 5-10 knots, with higher gusts near showers.

MONDAY

Mostly cloudy to partly sunny with widely scattered showers and stray thunderstorms in the morning and stray showers in the afternoon. Winds SE becoming ENE late; speeds of 5-10 knots with higher gusts near showers.

NEXT WEEK

Isolated to occasionally widely scattered showers, with near to below normal rainfall. Breezier Tuesday into Wednesday morning, with more frequent Doldrum conditions developing later in the week.
