COMMUNITY MANIT DAY CELEBRATION

HOURLASS REPORT

By Christy Wagon,
CYS Deputy Director

Manit Day is celebrated the last Friday in September in the Marshall Islands and was established as a public holiday by the Public Holidays Act of 1988. Manit Day is dedicated to preserving and celebrating the rich culture and history of the people of the Marshall Islands. At the Manit Day celebration on Kwajalein, guests were treated to traditional dance, handicrafts, husking of coconuts, food tasting and tours of the Marshallese Cultural Center.

Kwajalein Teachers Christi Cardillo, Christy Potter, Tori Rios and School Superintendent Amy Blakey participate in a maaj and biit that was choreographed by Kwajalein Rikatak High School Students Limalani Lelet and Aqua Calep. These talented students not only designed the choreography but also crafted the outfits, adding final touches on the day of the event Lelet explained that the dance consists of two parts: the maa, which is the grand entrance of the dancers, followed by the biit, the traditional dance itself. Cardillo said she cannot speak for all of the teachers, but she thinks that's the best time to learn the dance

Kathleen. Lori and her husband, Chaplain Mike Klein, have spent many years in the Army, living in various countries around the world, and have always embraced the local cultures. They believe it's vital to remember that we are guests in our host nation, and that it is important to treat everyone with dignity and

The final highlight of the celebration was coconut husking. The husk of the coconut is the exterior shell that has to be broken through to get to the nut which houses the coconut meat and juice. To open the coconut, you must thrust it onto the sharpened end of a slightly angled stick, which helps remove the husk and expose the nut located in the lower third. Grace Hood gave coconut husking a try and found it much more challenging than it appeared, but she had a great time attempting it.

If you would like to learn more about the traditions and culture of the Marshall because "it's a great way to show students we value them and their culture and want to learn more." Personally, Cardillo loves switching roles with students, letting them be the teacher. "Every year they are so proud and excited to show what they can do and that makes it worth stepping outside my comfort zone and 'performing.'"

Weaving with pandanus and coconut leaves is a hallmark of Marshallese craftsmanship. Guests at the event had the opportunity to try their hand at creating plates, bags, and hats with the support of a Marshallese crafter. Lori Klein proudly wore a hat made by local crafter spect.

Since coral atolls aren't suitable for agriculture, the three primary crops in the Marshall Islands showcased at the food tasting were breadfruit, pandanus, and coconuts. "I never knew you could do so many things with coconuts!" shared Olga Pagano as she shared the different coconut dishes available at the tasting. Among the most distinctive items Andrea Smith sampled were sea snails, which were surprisingly saltier than she expected yet not as fishy. Meanwhile, everyone lined up for the traditional roasted pig that had been cooked underground earlier in the day.

Kwajalein Reclaimed Water Standard Violation

The Reclaimed Water System Document of Environmental Protection (DEP) requires public notification when reclaimed water standards are violated. On 19 September 2024, the Kwajalein Wastewater Treatment Plant observed elevated levels of petroleum oil entering the system. As a result, the reclaimed water generated had higher than normal turbidity levels. Turbidity is the cloudiness or haziness of a liquid caused by individual particles that are generally invisible to the naked eye. From 19-29 September 2024, the 7-day rolling turbidity average at the point of entry into the reclaimed water system and in the distribution system measured above the 2.0 Nephelometric Turbidity Units (NTUs) standard. No health-based restrictions on the normal use (irrigation, vehicle washing, etc) of reclaimed (or non-potable) water are necessary. There is no threat to public health or the environment resulting from this turbidity exceedance. If you have any questions, please contact the V2X Environmental Department at 480-0722.

Sweeping Iraq Raid Killed 4 ISIS Leaders

EXTERNAL REPORT

By Eric Schmitt, The New York Times

The U.S. military said those killed in a joint assault by U.S. and Iraqi forces last month included the group's leading bomb maker and its head of operations in Iraq.

One of the largest counterterrorism operations against the Islamic State in Iraq in recent years killed four top insurgent leaders last month, the U.S. military said on Friday, dealing the group a major blow at a time when its attacks in Iraq and Syria are on the rise.

The raid by American and Iraqi commandos against several Islamic State hide-outs in western Iraq on Aug. 29 killed at least 14 insurgents and devastated the group's top leadership in the country, according to a statement from the Pentagon's Central Command and U.S. counterterrorism officials.

A main target killed was Abu Ali al-Tunisi, a Tunisian national who was the subject of a $5 million reward from the U.S. government, the military revealed on Friday. Mr. al-Tunisi has been ISIS's most significant designer, manufacturer and teacher in explosives — including improvised devices, suicide vests and car bombs, counterterrorism officials said.

Also killed were the top ISIS commander for all operations in Iraq and two senior commanders for operations in western Iraq, the military's statement said.

"The raid appears to have effectively killed off ISIS's entire command in Anbar," Charles Lister, the director of the Middle East Institute's Syria and counterterrorism programs, wrote in a Substack newsletter, "Syria Weekly," on Friday. Anbar is a vast province in western Iraq that has been a locus for violent Sunni extremists for years.

Central Command and the Iraqi military offered scant details when they announced the raid on Aug. 30, even though it was one of the most sweeping counterterrorism missions in the country in years.

Seven U.S. soldiers were injured as more than 200 troops from both countries — including elite Army Rangers backing up the main assault force — hunted down fighters...

U.S. Army Audit Says Army Is Ignoring Its Own Policies to Protect Soldiers

EXTERNAL REPORT

By Nick Turse, Rolling Stone

Four years ago, Army Specialist Vanessa Guillén was brutally murdered by a fellow soldier at Fort Hood (now Fort Cavazos), Texas. Guillén's death attracted national attention, shining a spotlight on sexual harassment and assault within the armed forces as well as how disappearances of military personnel are handled.

Following a high-profile independent review, the Army announced "substantial changes to its policies, structures, and processes." One of the Army's "major accomplishments" was the overhaul of its "missing soldier protocols" — initiating new regulations regarding searches for absent personnel, contacting local law enforcement, communicating with troops' next of kin, listing those who fail to report to duty as "missing," instead of absent without leave or AWOL, and making "every effort to locate the absent soldier."

An internal Army audit, completed earlier this year but never publicly released and obtained exclusively by Rolling Stone, found that the policy changes — known as Army Directive (AD) 2020-16 — instituted in the immediate wake of Guillén's murder have been almost universally ignored.

According to the audit, commanders consistently failed to report absences and units neglected to accurately document missing soldiers, placing at-risk troops in further danger. Auditors were unable to tell, for example, if units had even searched for soldiers who may have been absent under unusual or suspicious circumstances. "Army units didn't follow the guidance in Army Directive (AD) 2020-161 to track and account for absent soldiers," reads the audit, which also determined that the Army neglected to institute any oversight processes to ensure adherence to the new directive.

The failures documented in the audit are part of a pattern of neglect by the U.S. military that has led to an epidemic of sexual assault as well as domestic violence, drug abuse, self-harm, and avoidable deaths in the armed forces. In many cases, the military has undercounted, poorly tracked, or sought to cover up or minimize the problems. Investigations by Rolling Stone found, for example, that a staggering total of...

CISA Kicks Off 21st Anniversary of Cybersecurity Awareness Month

EXTERNAL REPORT

WASHINGTON – Today, the Cybersecurity and Infrastructure Security Agency (CISA) announced the kick-off of the 21st Cybersecurity Awareness Month. Throughout October, CISA and the National Cybersecurity Alliance (NCA) will focus on ways to “Secure Our World” by educating the public on how to stay safe online.

This October and year-round, CISA challenges everyone to help secure our world by adopting four simple steps that everyone can take to stay safe online:

Use strong passwords that are long, random, and unique to each account, and use a password manager to generate them and to save them.

Turn on multifactor authentication on all accounts that offer it. We need more than a password on our most important accounts, like email, social media, and financial accounts.

Recognize and report phishing, as we like to say, think before you click. Be cautious of unsolicited emails or texts or calls asking you for personal information, and don't click on links or open attachments from unknown sources.

Update software. In fact,

WEEKLY TROPICAL WEATHER THREAT OUTLOOK

RTS WEATHER STATION STAFF

Discussion:

7.82" of rain was recorded at the Kwajalein weather station for September, which is the 2nd month in a row with well below normal rainfall. Roi-Namur has done a lot better with rain which is not unusual for this time of year as the mean position of the ITCZ is closer to northern Kwajalein Atoll. Kwajalein Island's low rainfall total is partly attributed to bad luck as heavy rainfall was found everywhere but the southern atoll over the last few days of September. The ITCZ will remain generally weak over the next several days but will bring occasional chances for heavy rainfall along with stray to isolated thunderstorms. Rainfall over the next 7 days is expected to be near to below normal; normal weekly rainfall this time of year is about 2.7 inches. Winds will be light to moderate from the NE-SE, with strong gusts possible near heavy precipitation, along with occasional periods of calm. Periods of Southwest winds can't be ruled out, especially this Saturday. A developing tropical cyclone may impact Guam late Saturday.

Tropical Cyclones:

A developing tropical cyclone may impact Guam late Saturday. Otherwise, none expected for Kwajalein, Wake Island, and Hawaii over the next 7 days.

Damaging West Winds / Westerly Swell:

Southwest winds possible this Saturday and around next Thursday; otherwise, risk remains low over the next 7 days.

Swell / Tide Inundation Risk for Kwajalein Atoll and Wake Island:

Risk remains low over the next 7 days.

Tides:

Spring tides are occurring with the 02 October New moon; daily peak tides will exceed 4 feet through 06 October.

Purpose: This weekly briefing is delivered Thursday mornings to island leadership. The intention of this briefing is to provide situational awareness of weather events that may interrupt operations and transportation around Kwajalein, to/from Hawaii and Guam, and in the Wake vicinity. The main threat assessed in this brief is existing and potential development of tropical cyclone activity. This brief also provides an outlook of abnormal winds, sea state, and precipitation guidance for next 7 days around the Kwajalein Atoll. The distribution list will also receive updates on any developing tropical cyclone activity in the Kwajalein region that occur between the weekly outlook product.

WEATHER

WEATHER DISCUSSION

A trade wind trough passing south of the atoll will provide the region with a chance for showers through Saturday morning and afternoon, but shower activity is expected to gradually settle down later in the day before relatively quiet conditions arrive over the weekend. This incoming trough has developed along the fragmented Inter-tropical Convergence Zone (ITCZ), and similar waves have crossed the Marshall Islands throughout the previous week. Shower activity is expected to begin increasing Friday night, and coverage could see a peak on Saturday morning when the trough is expected to reach the vicinity of Kwajalein Atoll. Cool temperatures in the mid-levels and modest upper-level divergence could support stray thunderstorm activity on Saturday morning as well. By the evening, the trough will begin to move downstream of the atoll, so the elements supporting shower and thunderstorm development will diminish, allowing a reduction in active weather. Winds will become southeasterly to southerly on Saturday, but periods of southwesterly winds will be possible as well, especially later in the day as the trough moves downstream of the atoll. Sustained winds speeds will generally remain gentle throughout the day with speeds in the upper single digits to low teens, but the threat of higher gusts in the low 20s will remain present near passing showers. A slight chance for shower activity will persist Saturday night into Sunday morning thanks to nocturnal instability and localized trade wind perturbations, but by the afternoon, stable and dry air will arrive over the atoll as the ITCZ dissipates completely. Winds will gradually shift back to the east, and they will also become more doldrum-like during the by the night hours. On Monday, slight trade wind recovery will bring a return to gentle northeasterly winds, and stable air will likely linger over the atoll to maintain a calmer weather pattern throughout the day.

SATURDAY

Mostly cloudy to cloudy with scattered showers and stray thunderstorms in the morning and afternoon, decreasing to isolated showers in the evening. Winds SE-S at 7-12 knots, potentially becoming SW at times, especially in the afternoon and evening. Higher gusts may be expected near any showers.

SUNDAY

Partly sunny with isolated showers and a possible thunderstorm in the morning, decreasing to stray showers in the afternoon. Winds E-SE at 4-9 knots in the morning, becoming ENE-ESE at <6 knots at night. Higher gusts will be possible near any showers.

Mostly sunny with stray showers. Winds NE-E at 6-11 knots with higher gusts possible near any showers.

NEXT WEEK

The ITCZ could begin to reorganize next Tuesday, and weak weather waves may pass the atoll Tuesday and Wednesday may provide slight bumps in shower chances, especially during the overnight periods. On Thursday, however, the ITCZ may send a larger trade wind disturbance through the area, and this could provide a more significant bump in regional shower activity on both Thursday and Friday. Additionally, the passage of the trough may once again bring a threat of southwesterly winds each of these days.
